Faleh Gharaibeh

Project Name:

My project is to find an organization that is working on trying to end poverty and to contact them, so I help them to spread their message and fulfill their needs.

Project Name: Little Baby Bundles

The idea is to make bundles for families in NICU units. The bundles would have blankets for the baby, water, snacks, a hand-written note, and a pamphlet from Hand to Hold, a nonprofit that provides therapy and resources to parents of premature babies. NICU families are often overlooked, but these Little Baby Bundles should help the families realize they are not alone.

Kayla Williams

Project Name:

My project's goal is to donate menstrual products and money to women in women's shelters and host a drive by next year. I am passionate about this because many women struggle to buy enough period products for themselves or their daughters, leading them to use whatever they have, which can cause issues in their daily lives when it comes to their health and more. Knowing that there are women out there who are not able to get access to something just as important as food or water for their health is absurd. I want to continue to educate people on the pink tax and how menstrual products are not "luxury items". The main SDG Goal aim to focus on is SDG3 - Good Health and Well-being. I choose this goal because women's health depends on having access to these menstrual products.

Project Name: TAMKIN

TAMKIN is a self-care subscription box made for Black men to best help encourage our Black men to self-care. However, TAMKIN is a lot more than just a box. We are making strides to improve the lives of our youth across South Florida. My MCN project was based around improving the curriculum for our self-care workshops, hosting these self-care workshops and collecting toys for our annual TAMKIN Toy Drive.

Campus Director

Project Name: AfrX

My project is named The AfrX Movement. AfrX stands for Afro-Latinx, since our target audience is youth in the corresponding communities. AfrX is here to inspire and empower them, while also being their one-stop shop for learning about their options and opportunities after high school.

Currently I am building a college pen-pal network for high school students in low-income minority communities. This service will allow them to have a one-on-one mentorship with a current college student and ask any questions they may have about the college experience.

Project Name: Education for All Women

My project will specifically focus on providing learning materials to women of all ages in different South American countries. This project aims to tackle issues relating to inequality for girls and women and starting with South America, which is a smaller reach compared to what I would like to accomplish in the future. My main goal is to provide these women with resources and materials that would allow them to learn those things that men in their country do not have any limitations on. The goal with this project is to fight gender inequality and provide educational resources in and around South America.

Project Name: Knowledge is Power

There is a reason why the quote "knowledge is power" is so famous. Knowledge gives people freedom and the ability to thrive in the world, and this project will prove it to be true. For this reason, we determined that this project's primary objective is to bring empowerment to people. It is a plan that will take people out of their comfort zone through an event that focuses on changing their mindset. It does not matter your age, gender, ethnicity, or socioeconomic status; the project involves everyone who wants to break out of the system.

The project involved speakers and workshops revolving around then specific goals, including critical thinking, communication skills, creativity and innovation, among others.

Project Name: Women in Power (Team Project)

Women in Power anticipates reducing gender wage gaps within the workforce, spreading awareness on the demographic of women which is most affected, and advocating for women who face impartiality within their salaries. Through rigorous research and constructed interviews, Women In Power plans to address businesses that contribute to unequal wages amongst men and women. Additionally, our organization intends to host events, initiate a club on campus, and implement interactive workshops regarding the wage gap.

Project Name: Role Models Against all Odds

My project collects a compilation of biographies of successful women in STEM fields from Hispanic countries in North, Central, and South America and the Caribbean in the form of a book. The mission of this project is to inspire young girls and adults to follow their dreams and ambitions as well as provide them with the knowledge that there are other women who have faced tremendous obstacles and overcome them. The role models within the book display stories that young women can identify with and take as an example of strength and empowerment to continue towards what many tell them is impossible to achieve. This project at heart seeks to give young girls hope and inspiration without having to leave their motherland in order to achieve all their ambitions.

Project Name: Voices of Tomorrow

I am working on creating an educational program for young adults getting out of the foster system. My focus is trying to spread awareness and support until we have collected the funds to start this program. If the young adults that age out of the foster care system can access programs that include education, nutrition, self-care, and job opportunities, then we can reduce the rates of suicide attempts and homelessness, and all Young adults can surpass their challenges.

Voices of Tomorrow plans to deliver information regarding access to food, a pathway to higher education, as well as programming on self-care, job opportunities, affordable housing, and more.
