This performance was made possible by an American Masterpieces Grant to Lynn University from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Trio commissions have included Trilogy (1996) by Augusta Read Thomas, and Tsunami (1993) by Dan Welcher; both works were funded by the Chamber Music America Commissioning Program. In 1997 the ensemble commissioned the Triple Concerto by Pulitzer Prize winning composer Bernard Rands, with support from the Meet the Composer Readers' Digest Commissioning Program and performances with four orchestras in the United States. Other trios include within a window of resonant light (1998) by Jeffrey Mumford, Cable Ready (1998) by Michael Gandolfi, and Screc (1998) by Donald Crockett, all supported by major grants from Commissioning Music/USA, a project of Meet the Composer.

In October, 2000 the Core Ensemble was honored at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as recipient of the annual Edward McDermott Award for Excellence in the Arts. The Award included a $10,000 prize and a three-day residency on the MIT campus.

Tours during the past year have brought the Ensemble to every region of the U.S. from Key West, FL to Anchorage, AK, and from Las Cruces, NM to Orono, ME.

Core Ensemble Recordings include Bending the Light, with repertoire by composers Ross Bauer, Peter Lieuwen, Marjorie Merryman, Marilyn Shrade, Judith Shatin and Dan Welcher and A Jazz Set with works by Donald Martino. The Core Ensemble are featured soloists with the Cleveland Chamber Symphony on an Albany Records recording of the Bernard Rands Triple Concerto. Core Ensemble percussionist Michael Parola is also featured on the New World Records release Aequialis with additional commissioned repertoire for cello, piano and percussion.

(AIN’T I A WOMAN is performed without intermission. Playing time is approx. one hour and twenty minutes. The actress to appear will be announced before the performance.)
ABOUT THE PIECE

Ain't I a Woman honors four African-American women of remarkable achievement and invincible character. The text draws attention to specific choices and decisions in their lives demonstrating how each overcame personal or political challenges and was able to achieve astonishing goals living in an American society often unfriendly to social tolerance and acceptance. The musical score that unifies the piece is drawn from the heartfelt spirituals and blues of the Deep South, the urban vitality of the Jazz Age, as well as contemporary concert music by African-American composers.

Zora Neale Hurston (1891-1960) once stated, “I've got the map of Florida on my tongue.” Regarded by many as the leading African-American female writer, she was so proud of her heritage as a black Floridian that she claimed in her autobiography to have been born near Orlando, although Alabama was her true birthplace. She was one of the first anthropologists to recognize the power and importance of African-American folktales and spent much time traveling throughout the south, Jamaica, and Haiti to gather the stories and sayings of those cultures. Achieving fame during the Harlem Renaissance, she eventually returned to Florida from New York and began to fade into obscurity. Through the attention and efforts of author Alice Walker, her work was gradually rediscovered beginning in 1970. In 2004, her novel Their Eyes Were Watching God was selected by Read Together Palm Beach: One Book, One Community and was read by an estimated 20,000 people.

Clementine Hunter's (1887-1988) legacy is a body of “memory” art that tells the southern laborer’s story with joy, humor, and dignity. Her supplies and “canvasses” were unusual and innovative: cardboard boxes, the blank insides of soap cartons, brown paper bags, pieces of lumber, scraps of plywood, window shades, and other such found objects. Born in Plantation Hill, Louisiana, she did not begin to paint until the age of fifty-four. The settings and images of her work embodied rural life in the South: washdays, gardening, picking cotton, harvesting sugar cane, baptisms, and funerals. Rumors abounded in 1974 of a forgery scare, including stories that her grandson or nephew was copying her paintings and selling them on the fly. In New Orleans an artist was arrested for trying to pass his copies of her work as originals. This was a testament to her reputation, and the price that her paintings could command. In 1955 at Northwestern State College in Louisiana Hunter had been barred from viewing her own paintings with white patrons. Thirty-one years later the same school bestowed upon her the degree of Honorary Doctor of Fine Arts.

ABOUT THE CORE ENSEMBLE

Since its inception in 1993, the Core Ensemble has garnered international recognition for its efforts to commission new works for its unique combination of cello, piano, and percussion. Broadening the definition of chamber music, the ensemble has been the catalyst in the creation of “chamber music theatre”, works weaving narrative and theatre into the chamber music experience.

Concertizing has included nation-wide performances with residencies at Harvard University, the University of Texas at Austin, California State University, Oberlin Conservatory, the University of Oregon, the Daytona, Florida, International Festival, Duncan Theatre/Palm Beach Community College, and many other sites. International touring has included the Moscow, Russia, Autumn Festival, the Contrasts International Contemporary Music Festival in L'viv, Ukraine, the Queensland Biennial Festival of Music in Brisbane, Australia, and venues in the U.S. and British Virgin Islands.
MICHAEL PAROLA, PERCUSSION
Michael Parola received his B.F.A. from State University of New York at Purchase and his M.M. and D.M.A. from the State University of New York at Stony Brook. His primary teachers were Raymond Des Roches and Richard Horowitz. Mr. Parola was a founding member and percussionist with the Aequalis Ensemble from 1984-1993. With Aequalis, Mr. Parola toured nationally, presenting hundreds of concerts and master classes in every region of the United States. During the 1992-93 season, he appeared with Aequalis in performances of the Chinary Ung TRIPLE CONCERTO with the Phoenix, Honolulu and New Hampshire Symphonies. Additional work with Aequalis included national radio broadcasts on NPR's "A Note To You", international radio broadcasts for Voice of America and on CD, with a highly acclaimed 1991 release on New World Records. Michael Parola has commissioned many new works for solo percussion, with nationwide performances of pieces by composers such as Jorge Liderman, Armand Qualliotine and James Baker III. As an orchestral timpanist, he has performed in the American premieres of works by Verdi, Donizetti and Shostakovich. In 1993 he founded the CORE Ensemble in which he serves as Percussionist and Executive Director.

MARGOT EMERY, MANAGING DIRECTOR
Margot Emery has served as Managing Director of the Core Ensemble, a chamber music theatre group, for eight years. During that time, local and regional touring of the ensemble’s chamber music and chamber music theatre pieces has expanded to include national and international work. The ensemble’s programs now reach every region of the U.S. and have been heard in Russia, Ukraine, the Caribbean and in Australia. Under Ms. Emery’s tenure, the Core Ensemble has performed in such prestigious venues as the Guggenheim Museum, Central Park SummerStage, the Chautauqua Institute, The Boston Center for the Arts and the Queensland Biennial Festival. Ms. Emery has been responsible for raising funds to commission 8 music theatre pieces, 12 chamber music works and 3 triple concertos. Past positions include Development Director for the USS Constitution Museum, Director of Development Services for the Palm Beach County Cultural Council and Palm Beach Development Manager for the Florida Philharmonic Orchestra. Ms. Emery holds diplomas from Laval University in Quebec City, Canada, and the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria.

Sojourner Truth (1797-1883) never learned to read or write, but became an extraordinary speaker for black freedom and women’s rights – to white audiences. Born a slave of Dutch masters, she was given the name Isabella. A riveting singer and preacher, in 1843 she changed her name to Sojourner and decided to travel west, speaking out against slavery and for the rights of women. She delivered her famous “Ain’t I a Woman” speech in 1851 to the Women’s Rights Convention in Akron, Ohio. In 1864 she met President Abraham Lincoln, and in 1870 President Ulysses S. Grant. Her legacy and enduring influence were recognized in 1987 when NASA launched a small vehicle to explore the surface of Mars. A girl from Bridgeport, Connecticut won a competition to give the rover a name. Named after this intrepid American wanderer, it was called “Sojourner.”

Fannie Lou Hamer (1917-1977) became a national figure in 1964 when she riveted the nation while addressing the Democratic National Convention credentials committee, challenging its token gesture to seat only two out of sixty-four black delegates from the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party. As a result of the publicity, the Convention was shaken by the exposure of its discriminatory practice. Four years later at the 1968 convention in Chicago a debate over seating again took place and this time the MFDP won. Fannie Lou Hamer was given her seat and to a standing ovation addressed the entire convention. Her tireless work as an activist began in 1962 in Indianola, Mississippi where, after she attempted to register to vote, sixteen shots were fired at the home in which she was staying. In 1963 she was arrested and beaten at a bus station in Winona, Mississippi on her way back from a voter registration training. Following her death in 1977, United Nations ambassador Andrew Young who spoke at her funeral said, “None of us would have been where we are now had she not been there then.”
