

By Lynn University on Sep. 8, 2020

Undergraduate block scheduling for Fall 2020 provides not only flexibility but also opportunity.

Lynn University today announced that students may begin their academic careers in Session B, the second "mini-semester" of the Fall 2020 semester. By beginning in Session B and taking two courses each of the remaining sessions, students will remain on track to complete a traditional full semester course load.

"A number of incoming students couldn't begin in Session A due to travel restrictions or personal reasons, which prompted us to make adjustments that would allow these students to still join us for the fall semester," said Vice President for Enrollment Management Gareth Fowles. "Lynn is an adaptable institution, and we are committed to assisting our students' success, so we're grateful to grant these students the opportunity to stay on track with their peers by beginning their classes now."

Students already cleared to begin in Session B must complete an enrollment checklist and make an appointment through Navigate for check in, Sept. 18. Guidelines about this process are available as of Tuesday, Sept. 8, with more information.

Newly admitted students can explore their enrollment options by contacting admission@lynn.edu.