Relay For Life

Support American Cancer Society In Fight For Cancer

by Juliette Schohn

This year, for the first time, Lynn students will have the opportunity to come together and join their efforts to support the American Cancer Society in their fight against cancer, as Lynn will host its first Relay For Life event, on April 1-2, 2005.

Relay For Life is a fundraising event in which people from a community come together in teams to raise money for the American Cancer Society and pay tribute to cancer victims who have either died, survived, or are currently being diagnosed.

This event provides the opportunity for anyone to support this growing disease and also enable cancer survivors and newly diagnosed patients to learn from and support each other, all while having fun, as the event includes fun games, music, and plenty of food.

Relay For Life is an overnight event in which a number of teams camp out at the given location, a local high school or university, a park, or a fairground, and take turns walking or running on a track or path.

Each team has to have a representative on the track at all times. The track is lit by paper bags with sand and a candle inside, each in memory of someone who died of cancer. These bags are known as Luminaria and are available for a donation.

Relay For Life started in 1985 by Dr. Gordy Klatt, a colorectal surgeon who loved to run, when he went on a 24 hour walk and run around a track in Tacoma, Washington. All alone, he covered 83 miles and raised $27,000 to support the American Cancer Society. Continued on page 2
Relay For Life Ctd

The following year, 220 supporters in a total of 19 teams joined him in his overnight mission. This is how the American Cancer Society Relay For Life was born.

Relay For Life was introduced to Lynn by junior honors student Jessica Stearns. She had participated in Relay For Life in Connecticut, for five years, before coming to Lynn.

"I used to do a lot of volunteer work back home, but since I came down here, I haven't done anything, so this summer, I called up the American Cancer Society and asked if they had any Relay For Life in South Florida. They have had one with FAU but never with Lynn, so I decided to start it at Lynn this year," said Stearns.

Stearns is the event chairman and is working together with an ACS staff member as well as other Lynn students who hold various committee positions, such as team development, luminaria, marketing and publicity and others. They are in charge of organizing the whole event.

The goal for this year's Lynn Relay is $35,000. Committee members are currently working on gathering teams to participate.

The event has to include a total of 35 teams of 10-15 people, and each team is expected to raise at least $1,000 to reach the final goal. However, this is a minimum figure and past Relays have shown it is often easy to end up with a much higher figure than the initial goal.

Teams can include students, faculty, staff members, relatives or friends and everyone is encouraged to start forming their teams now and start thinking about fun fundraisers ideas for the spring.

Anyone interested in forming a team, donating money for a Luminaria in memory of a loved one, or participating in any way should contact any of the committee members (next column).
Dear student body and faculty,

I am writing this letter concerning the impeachment of former SGA president, Sean Martel.

I am a member of one of the organizations associated with SGA and I attended the SGA meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 9.

First of all, I am very appalled with the way the meeting was conducted. The comments directed to Sean were very unnecessary and cruel, but what makes this worse is that not once did any of the faculty members present, step in and intervene while these comments were being made.

The impeachment was requested upon the claim that Sean lacked leadership skills and did not fulfill his duties as SGA president. He was referred to as a "joke" and claims were made he could not be trusted.

Well, let me tell you what I feel the real reason was for Sean's impeachment. It goes deeper than anyone feeling he did not fulfill his duties. I believe it has a lot to do with his learning disability and his physical appearance.

This is an even bigger disappointment due to the fact that Lynn University preaches on being a non-discriminatory institution.

When Sean first got elected, the other SGA members turned their backs on him and gave him no support.

The student handbook, on page 3, states that "commitment to equal access and equal opportunity includes admission, recruitment, financial assistance, course offerings, extracurricular programs and activities."

Notice the words "equal access" and "equal opportunity." Sean was not provided an equal opportunity to uphold his presidential position. Even if people felt the only reason others voted him into office was for a joke, this is not Sean's fault. He won; plain and simple. No one has the right to take that away from him, especially when this entire impeachment was based on opinions. There are no facts surrounding this impeachment.

Also, the way the individuals chose to go about the voting of the impeachment was unfair to Sean. For some odd but obvious reason, the only students that were allowed to vote were the organization leaders; the 22 students who signed the petition to impeach him in the first place. I feel since the student body did vote him into office, why not give us the chance to keep him in office?

Referring back to the "joke" comment, in my opinion, the SGA has been looked at as a joke long before Sean Martel became president. So to say Sean was the cause of this was just a scapegoat. I have heard students refer to the SGA being a joke ever since I arrived at this school.

For instance, I personally feel that last year's president did not fulfill his duties and the only reason he was voted in and allowed to keep his position was due to his popularity. It had nothing to do with his leadership skills. The individuals on the SGA committee and other organizational leaders felt they could not trust Sean, but it was okay to have trusted a president who showed an act of violence in our cafeteria.

From all this, I have lost a lot of respect for a lot of people. The only person I have gained respect for is Sean Martel. Even though everyone turned their back on him and ridiculed him, he still was brave enough to stand up for himself.

Also, Sean was not given a choice when it came to his disabilities. We, however, are given a choice as to how we respond to them. It is a shame that there are people in this world who can be so ignorant and cruel.

What is even worse is the fact that these people are the students and faculty members that run our student government and it is also a shame that these individuals are so freely allowed to dishonor what Lynn is supposed to stand for.

Letters to the ePulse do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the publication.

Goodbye To A Dear Friend
Tribute To Eric Perkins
by Stephanie Glickman

"People come into our lives and walk with us a mile, and then because of circumstance they only stay a while... God only knows the reason that we meet and share a smile, why people come into our lives and walk with us a mile."

Not only was Eric Perkins an outstanding person but he was also an amazing friend. Even though I only knew him for a short time, he was able to touch me and others with his laugh and large smile every day. He was the friend you could go to at any hour of the day for help and advice, and no matter what, he would be there, without exception.

His love for music and playing the guitar inspired me and everyone who knew him, and taught us about passion. His enthusiasm for sports showed us what true loyalty is all about.

Eric was able to turn a bad day or situation into a happy one. He was optimistic about life and what it held for all of us. He wasn't one to take things for granted and he took life for what it was worth. He lived every day to the fullest and pushed us to do the same.

He will be truly missed by everyone who's life he touched.

Lynn Goes To The Ice
Hockey Team Sharpen Skates
by Daniel M. Pearl

Ice hockey might sound ridiculous down here in the Sunshine State, but that didn't stop Trevor Grafflin from starting a hockey team at Lynn.

Grafflin, a Student Administrative Services representative, came up with this idea about a year ago. He set up a meeting which five students attended and he soon realized they were very interested in playing and were all good players.

Grafflin, now 42, started playing hockey ten years ago when he moved to Florida, from England, where he was raised.

Not able to play at the college level, he took over the coaching job.

The five men first joined a club where they used to play just to have fun, but soon realized they wanted to use their skills for competition.

This past summer, while the students were away from school, Grafflin discovered an existing league called the ACHA (American College Hockey Association) where his guys would be able to play real hockey, said Grafflin.

ACHA is considered a division below the NCAA. Unfortunately, being a newborn team, the Lynn skaters will not be able to participate in this year's ACHA, regardless of where they place in the standings at the end of the regular season.

Since Grafflin first came up with the idea, the team has grown in size and now consists of 16
players.

This year, they have already played three games and are 1-2 going into their next on Dec. 4, against FAU, at Incredible Ice in Boca.

According to Grafflin, their goal for the rest of the season and for the future is to play hard, become as big as Lynn's men's soccer, and, next year, go on to win the ACHA Frozen Four Championships, where the best teams meet.

"There seems to be a buzz around campus," said Grafflin about students wanting to buy Lynn hockey jerseys and be in the middle of it all.

"As much as we believe in ourselves and what we are trying to achieve, it is very gratifying to see that the school is starting to rally around us as well," Grafflin added.

Senior captain Patrick Connelly said, "This is as close to the NHL I will get, so pulling on that Lynn hockey jersey is an awesome feeling."

New things bring excitement and joy and this is what Grafflin hopes to accomplish with the hockey team. There are two words that this team lives by: Dream Big.
Ashley Weiss and her hot 1966 Ford Mustang Shelby GT took the first place in Lynn's first car show held on Dec. 1.

The event, which was organized by the Student Alumni Association featured over twenty vehicles, old and new, all displayed on the lawn, outside of the Christine Room.

Wicked Wheels was sponsored by Maroone Ford, Blow-By-Racing and Party 93.1 that played music throughout the show, bringing a cool atmosphere.

Judges included faculty and staff along with a few professionals judges.

The categories included Best Interior, Best Exterior, Best Sound System and Best Overall Car.

Winners of each category received a cash prize of up to $500. Raffle prizes such as a $250 subwoofer, an installation sound system from Complete Audio and Electronics, a gift voucher to Wall-Mart and a free car wash and wax were also offered.

Votes were tallied by students and faculty members present.

If you made it to the event, you probably noticed the 1971 Maverick with 650hp and an impressive original.
Keep On Rolling
Men's Basketball Start The Season 5-0
by Daniel M. Pearl

The best team in the NBA is currently the Seattle Supersonics with a margin of victory of 7.7 points per game. Meanwhile, our very own Fighting Knights, are currently 5-0 and winning with an average of 27.6 points per game. Balance is the word that best describes the incredible start of the young season for our Knights.

They have lived up to the definition of a team, since in every game so far, there hasn’t been one superstar but a handful. At least four players have scored in double figures every game so far.

Before the season began, Coach McMillan had said he didn’t know how to divide the minutes of the games between all the players because they are all so equal.

“I have no idea how many minutes any of our guys will play, that will be determined each and every time we step onto the floor, and I think that is very exciting.”

One of the reasons for the team’s early success is that senior forward Marcus Hayes is back and most importantly healthy.

Hayes is averaging 9.9 points per game as well as five rebounds per game.

“I am just glad to be back, helping the team anyway I can, and I can’t wait to start playing those tough conference games,” said Hayes.

The Knights will play 16 conference games, the first one scheduled for Sat. Dec. 4 against SSC foe Florida Tech who is also undefeated so far, with a 4-0 record.

With guard Austin Faber dishing out the ball and spreading the wealth along with James Taylor in the backcourt, the big men will have ample opportunities to run the floor and get easy hoops.

If the men can keep up this play and stay healthy, the Elite 8, which starts on March 23, 2005, sure looks to be in the Knights’ future.

Heisman Hopeful Predictions ’04

USC’s Leinart Tops List of Hopefuls
by Justin Cohen

1. Matt Leinart, Southern California, QB, Junior
Leinart is clearly playing his best football at the right time of the season.
He threw for 400 yards and five TD’s in an SC 41-10 win over Notre Dame.
This season, Leinart has thrown for 2,748 yards, which is more than Utah’s Smith and Oklahoma’s White, and a career best 28 TD’s and he still has a game this weekend against UCLA.
He can reach 3,000 passing yards and 30 TD’s, he will be hard to beat and will most likely be awarded the Heisman Trophy on Dec. 11, in New York.

2. Alex Smith, Utah, QB, Junior
Smith will not play another game until the Utes play their bowl game, while Leinart and Oklahoma’s White and RB Adrian Peterson still have another game to improve their Heisman chances.
Smith has compiled 2,624 passing yards, 28 TD’s and 10 rushing TD’s while only throwing four interceptions. This season he led the Utes to an incredible 11-0 undefeated regular season and a potential BCS bowl berth.
Smith is clearly the No. 2 contender at this point, so don’t count him out.

3. Adrian Peterson, Oklahoma, RB, Freshman
Can freshman Peterson really win the Heisman? This season he has rushed for a remarkable 1,671 yards and 12 TD’s while having 100-yard performances on 10 different occasions.
Peterson who hails from Palestine, Texas, is ranked third in the nation in rushing yards per game and has a chance to add to that in the Big 12 championship game against Colorado in Kansas City, Missouri.

4. Jason White, Oklahoma, QB, Senior
White won the Heisman Trophy last season after putting up extremely impressive stats. He is having another outstanding season, but his numbers are not as good as last year.
White has still played a major role in the Sooners capping off an undefeated regular season. He has thrown for 2,707 yards, 30 TD’s and four interceptions.
If White can put solid numbers up this weekend against at the Big 12 Championship game, he will improve his likelihood of winning another Heisman Trophy.

5. Cedric Benson, Texas, RB, Senior

Benson’s has two problems that may prevent him from winning the Heisman. One is the awful 92-yard performance he had against Oklahoma in which he didn’t score a TD and the other is that he has not once run for more than 200 yards in a single game. Despite these two setbacks he has still run for a total of 1,764 yards and 19 TD’s. Unfortunately, don’t expect to see Benson celebrating at the Heisman presentation at the New York Hilton.

Car Show Ctd

paint job, or a new Nissan 350Z outfitted with a Veilside wide-body kit and staggered deep dish wheels.

If you want your ride to sport some extra bling this year, then your going to need some custom work done. This process usually begins by picking out the right set of dubs and then, the sky is the limit.

Weiss' 1966 Ford Mustang Shelby GT features an impressive 2003 supercharged Cobra engine and has over 469whp.

This car was a labor of love for Weiss and took her over three years to rebuild it by hand.

She first got this car when she was 15 years old, and according to her, it was in horrible condition and in need of much repair.

After three years of countless hours of rebuilding work, she now has a show stopping sports car and plans on keeping it as long as she can.

Weiss attended her first car show as an infant, only six weeks old, and can proudly say that cars are in her blood.

After it’s first time success, don’t be surprised to see Wicked Wheels become an annual event at Lynn.

Kevin Mielec, Sophomore, “My worst experience was getting my laundry stolen from the dorms; I learned not to trust anyone with my drawers.”

Lea Frei, Junior, “My worst experience was probably having the fire alarms going off at least once a week my entire freshman year.”

Alan Boucicaut, Senior, “My best experience was waking up with my roommate’s girlfriend in my bed. I’ve learned to always get a single dorm room.”

Britt Barrigar, Sophomore, “The best experience that I had here was meeting all of my new friends. I learned how different types of people can all be friends.”

Fisch's Week 13
NFL Forecast
Eagles Become First Team To Clinch Division
by Mike Fisch

Throughout this season, the conferences have seen a shift in power. This year most of the power is in the AFC with New England and Pittsburgh, who each have 10 victories; Indianapolis, NY Jets and San Diego, with eight; and Baltimore, with seven.

The NFC is dominated by the Philadelphia Eagles, but except for them, only five teams have a winning record, and seven have a 4-7 record, only a game behind the final playoff spot. One of these is last year's Super Bowl runner up, the Carolina Panthers.

Three weeks ago, they were left for dead, but have gained momentum in their three-game winning streak, defeating San Francisco, Arizona and Tampa Bay and are likely to make a push for that final playoff spot.

On the other hand, the Eagles became only the third team since the 1967-game schedule began in 1978 to win their division title by their eleventh game. The last team to do this was the 1997 San Francisco 49ers.

The Eagles used their stingy defense, which forced two turnovers and sacked Giants QB Eli Manning five times during the 27-6 victory. But most importantly, they limited the Giants offense to only 47 yards in the second half. Another factor which led to the victory was the red-zone comparison. The Eagles offense scored two TDs when they reached the red-zone. The Giants had three opportunities to score a TD in the red-zone and came away with only six points.

If they keep winning, the Eagles are most-likely headed for home-field advantage throughout the playoffs.

Three key games for Week 13:

San Diego Chargers started off the season 1-2 but since then, have won seven out of eight games, including five in a row as they enter the final month of the regular season first in the AFC West.

This week, they host the Denver Broncos, the team that is chasing them. Denver is coming off a devastating home loss to the lowly Oakland Raiders in which their defense collapsed on the final drive in the game.

The Chargers are led by QB Drew Brees who has thrown for 21 TDs and TE Antonio Gates who has caught 11 of those TD passes.

Look for San Diego to come out passing because of the success they have had the entire year and the frustration the Broncos had last week.

Mike's Pick: Pittsburgh

Panthers (4-7) @ New Orleans Saints (4-7)

If these two teams played in the NFC, both would be thinking about getting ready for golf at the end of the season. But they play in the NFC, where a 9-7 or 8-8 record may be good enough to earn a trip to the playoffs.

Carolina is riding momentum of its first winning streak of the season at three games, including last week's over Tampa Bay, 21-14. QB Jake Delhomme is playing like the player who led this team to the Super Bowl last year. Also, they are getting great production out of their rookie WR Keary Colbert who scored two TDs last week, including the game winner with less than a minute left.

The Saints are led by QB Aaron Brooks, RB Deuce McAllister and WR Joe Horn. Their Achilles heel the entire year has been their defense, which is ranked dead-last in the NFL in allowing over 420 yards per game and 28 points per game. The way the Panthers have been playing, I see them having their way with the Saints defense.

Mike's Pick: Carolina

Pittsburgh Steelers (10-1) @ Jacksonville Jaguars (6-5)

In order for the Jaguars to keep their fading playoff hopes alive, they must defeat the best team in the NFL right now, the red-hot Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Jaguars have lost two games in a row including last week to Minnesota, 27-16. After missing the previous two games with a sprained left knee, QB Byron Leftwich started last week. The Jaguars must stop the Steelers running game, which has carried them in the last couple of games as their top WR Hines Ward and Plaxico Burress have been hampered by injuries. RB Jerome Bettis had his fourth consecutive 100-yard rushing game last week against a Washington defense that was ranked first in total defense in the NFC.

Pittsburgh has averaged over 150 yards per game on the ground, while Jacksonville is ranked seventh in the AFC in stopping the run. I see the Jaguars lining up eight men in the box to stop the run as they make Steelers QB Ben Roethlisberger beat them. Despite a record of 9-0 as a starter, Roethlisberger recently hasn't had the same success as earlier this season, throwing only one TD pass in the last three games, but with Ward and Burress healthy, he has more options for the passing attack.

Mike's Pick: Pittsburgh

Who Am I?
Communication Student Lights Up the Stage
by Nalini Maharaj

The "Issues in Communication: Directing the Actor" class, of the School of International Communications, presented a documentary drama on Dec. 10, 2004.

Talented senior Matthew Frank has written a full length documentary screenplay on the life of John Stoll.
Stoll was wrongly imprisoned for child molestation in 1985, and after 19 years, his conviction was recently overturned due to the efforts of two of the children (now men) who originally accused him.

Frank has been working on this play for about two months. He created everything on his own and put great detail into it.

"It was fun to do, I learned how to write a lot better, and who knows maybe this will be the beginning of what I really hope and think I can achieve," says Frank.

Professor Michael Rutenberg, the College of International Communications newly appointed visiting professor, directed the play.

Rutenberg, a professor of Theatre at Hunter College of the City University of New York, is the former head of Israel's National Conservatory of Stage and Cinematic Art, the only American to hold that position. He is also a member of the famed Actors Studio and has developed many new plays for public presentation. He recently taught master classes in playwriting at The Caldwell Theatre and the Hollywood Playhouse, in Florida.

He was also awarded a Fulbright to Israel as Writer/Artist-in-Residence: Feb. 1
where he hopes to direct Oedipus in Hebrew while using alternative theatre techniques.

“He’s awesome; the most dedicated teacher that has ever showed so much faith in me. I am so happy I met him,” said Frank about Runtenberg.

The event took place at the deHoernle Lecture Hall in the Green Center at 12:00 P.M. on Friday. The main actors will be Matthew Frank and Brandon Thomas supported by the rest of the students in the class.

Attendance is free to all students and faculty.

As for the future, Frank plans on contacting John Stoll to see if he's interested in pursuing this short play into a small movie.

Got iPod?

Got iPod?

New Apple iPod Craze
by John Rueger

The new Apple iPod is the hottest item to hit the stores since Lincoln Logs. More than just a portable music player, it could be considered as an extension of you. The new Apple iPods have the ability to save and store up to 15,000 songs, which equals 42 days of non-stop music. The new iPod Photo also has a feature that can add color photos to the music player. The pictures are very good, and with its increased storage, longer battery-life and color display, the new Apple iPod is a much better music player overall.

The most popular iPod currently in market is the iPod mini which is slimmer and smaller, making it really handy for those morning jogs or on the go use, and it is priced just right.

It is comforting to many iPod users to know that relaxation and good music is right in their pocket waiting for them whenever and wherever they need it.

Once your songs start to get stale, it’s no problem. Just go onto the net and download some new songs from iTunes online music store which has a huge database of songs to choose from and purchase if you desire. iTunes also allows you to import songs from your CDs to your iPod. So if you haven’t already picked up your iPod, definitely put it down on your holiday gift list.

Getting Involved

2005 Class Gift Information
by Stephanie Glickman

Every year, the graduating class has the opportunity to donate a gift to the school. Currently a committee is trying to form for the Class of 2005.

Through this committee, seniors will be able to pick a gift they deem appropriate. As of now, the suggestions are an outside clock with Lynn University engraved on it or a Class of 2005 Scholarship. Any member of the class can offer their own suggestion as well.

All the money raised through this committee will go directly towards the gift and will be matched by up to $2,000.

Anyone interested or willing to join the 2005 Class Gift committee, call Derek R. Rodgerson at extension 7763.

A Digital Day In The Life Of Lynn Through The Lens by COM 220 students

Photojournalism students fanned out across the campus to capture many moods of the University from early morning to evening through digital eyes.

Each has their own way of looking at the world, its people, variations of light, patterns of nature and architecture, and differences in color and form.

The camera and computer are tools to compose and express their own sensitivities.

The class (COM 220), taught by Myles Ludwig, enables students to find and refine their own vision and develop a sense of visual narrative.

Southern Cal And Oklahoma Headed To Miami

by Justin Cohen

Orange Bowl, Miami, Florida
No.1 Southern California Trojans vs. No.2 Oklahoma Sooners

Southern Cal and Oklahoma finished atop the final Bowl championship series standings and will meet on Jan. 4 in the Orange Bowl at Pro Player Stadium in Miami, to decide the National Champion.

The Trojans, whose QB Matt Leinart is the leading Heisman candidate, pulled off a 29-24 victory over UCLA to finish off an undefeated 12-0 season in which they were ranked No.1 in every poll throughout the season.

Oklahoma thumped Colorado 42-3 in the Big 12 Championship game to cap off an undefeated season in which they won all 12 of their games.

The teams have a combined total of 11 AP National Titles. The Sooners' seventh and last national title came in 2000 when they defeated Florida State in the Orange Bowl and Southern Cal defeated Michigan last season in the Rose Bowl to claim a share of the AP national title.

This game surely will be a high scoring affair. Don't be surprised if both Leinart and Oklahoma's QB Jason White throw for over 300 yards in this game.

Southern Cal's TB's Reggie Bush and LenDale White will certainly make the highlight reel with their thrilling plays, as Oklahoma's RB Adrian Peterson's performance should push his rushing yards total to over 2,000.

WINNER: SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Sugar Bowl, New Orleans, Louisiana
No.3 Auburn Tigers vs. No.8 Virginia Tech Hokies

Auburn, the Southeastern Conference Champions, will take on Virginia Tech, the Atlantic Coast Conference Champions in the 71st Sugar Bowl, on Jan. 3, in the Louisiana Superdome.

After defeating Tennessee 38-28 in the SEC Championship, the Tigers became the first team in the school's history to accomplish a 12-0 record and win the SEC title since 1989.

Virginia Tech capped off a remarkable season by defeating the Miami Hurricanes 16-10 in Coral Gables to claim the outright ACC title. The Hokies finished their season with a 10-2 record having only lost to Southern Cal and North Carolina State.

Auburn will make its fifth bowl appearance in six seasons under head coach Tommy Tuberville. Auburn holds a 2-1-1 series lead over Virginia Tech, although the teams have not played each other since 1978. Both the Tigers and Hokies are led by senior QB's who both want to finish their college career off with a victory.

Look for Auburn to play their hearts out in this important game and prove they shouldn't have been left out of the Orange Bowl.

WINNER: AUBURN

Justin Predicts the Bowls:
Rose Bowl: Michigan over Texas
Fiesta Bowl: Pitt. over Utah
Capital One Bowl: LSU over Iowa
Gator Bowl: Fl. State over W Virginia
Peace Bowl: Miami (FL) over Florida
Liberty Bowl: Louisville over Boise

Winning At Will
Men's Basketball Moves To 6-0
by Daniel M. Pearl

The men's basketball team is getting better each time.

Going into their first conference game on Sat. Dec 4 against tough SSC opponent Florida Tech, the men clinched yet another W, making their record an impressive 6-0.

The Knights punished Florida Tech 87-36 in what was by far, their most dominant performance of the season so far. The men shot 53percent from the field, 84percent from the free throw line and probably their most impressive stat was pulling down 16 offensive rebounds, a new season high.

Guards James Taylor and Akil Lewis racked up 18 points each and tallied 13 assists between the two of them.

Taylor said, "It was a great game, we couldn't have asked for anything more, all we have to do is keep it going."

Forwards Marcus Hayes and Justin Wingard combined for 27 points and 13 rebounds, 6 of which on the offensive end.

"This is like a dream come start and I am going to do everything in my power not to wake up," said Hayes who couldn't be happier with the early success of his team.

The Knights still have a very long road ahead of them: 21 regular season games plus the SSC conference tournament for which they hope to enter in first place position.

The next game will take place can be seen Thur. Dec 9 against Florida Gulf Coast and following that the men will host the Palm Beach Hoops Classic from Dec. 17-19.
Teams Make Final Push Towards Playoffs by Mike Fisch

It's that time of the year in the NFL season, the time for the playoff push. After week 13's games, there is a huge difference of power between the two powerhouses in the AFC record of 6-6 or better, including the Denver Broncos (10-5), New England Patriots (9-6-1), Pittsburgh Steelers (9-6), and the Carolina Panthers (9-6-1). The top four teams will move on to the playoffs and have a much better shot of going places than the other two. I predict the Jets and Broncos.

AFC

Locks: Steelers, Patriots, Colts, Chargers. Analysis: These four teams along with the Eagles in the NFC are the front runners for the super bowl. The Steelers need to keep winning in order to capture home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. If that happens, it could spell trouble for the rest of the AFC.

Frontrunners: Jets, Ravens

Bubble teams: Broncos, Jaguars, Bills, Bengals. Analysis: Even though the records favor the Jets towards the playoffs, their upcoming schedule doesn't. They still have games against the Steelers, Seahawks, Patriots and Rams who have a combined record of 33-13. On top of their schedule, if they happen to have the same record as the Ravens, the Ravens would get in ahead of them because of their victory over the Jets in week 10. The Ravens occupy the sixth and final spot in the AFC right now, but have lost two games in a row. They still have games against the Colts and Steelers so they can't afford any slip-ups in their two other games against the Dolphins and Giants.

The Broncos have the superlative schedule amongst the four wild-card teams. Their final four games are against teams with a record of 19-29 although their final game in the regular season is against the Colts. The Jaguars aren't out of it mathematically, but they need a lot of help. They hold the tie-breaker over the Broncos, but for a playoff birth, they need the Ravens and Broncos to have a meltdown over the last four games.

Finally, the Bills and Bengals are both 6-6, the same as the Jags, but the Jags have the tie-breaker over the Bills and have a much better shot of going places than the other two. I predict the Jets and Broncos.

NFC

Locks: Eagles, Falcons. Analysis: There isn't much to say about the Eagles. They clinched their division back in November. They are the elite team in the NFC and can't be stopped. The Falcons are in a class below the Eagles but they are still the second best team in the conference and have a great shot at clinching a first round bye.

Front runners: Packers, Rams, Vikings, Seahawks.

Bubble teams: Bears, Buccaneers, Giants, Lions, Panthers, Cowboys. Analysis: This is an absolute mess. The frontrunners struggled last week as the Vikings lost to the Bears, the Packers got creamed by the Eagles, and the Rams struggled against the lowly 49ers, but survived. The frontrunners have the best shot of making the playoffs. The Panthers have come from nowhere to get in this category as they have won four games in a row. A game against the Bucs on the second to last week of the regular season will play a big part in determining who will go to the playoffs.

Meanwhile, the Giants have lost five straight games and have been in a tailspin. They still have games against the Eagles and Steelers so their playoff push is difficult. The Bears have gotten offense at the right time, and they will face the Lions and the Packers on the last two weeks of the season. The Rams may have a huge issue with their QB position as their starter Marc Bulger left the game Week 13 with a sprained shoulder on his throwing arm. It will be tight as this comes down to the final week.

I predict the Packers, the Seahawks, the Vikings and the Panthers.
