

Product Oriented Assignments

Adam Simpson

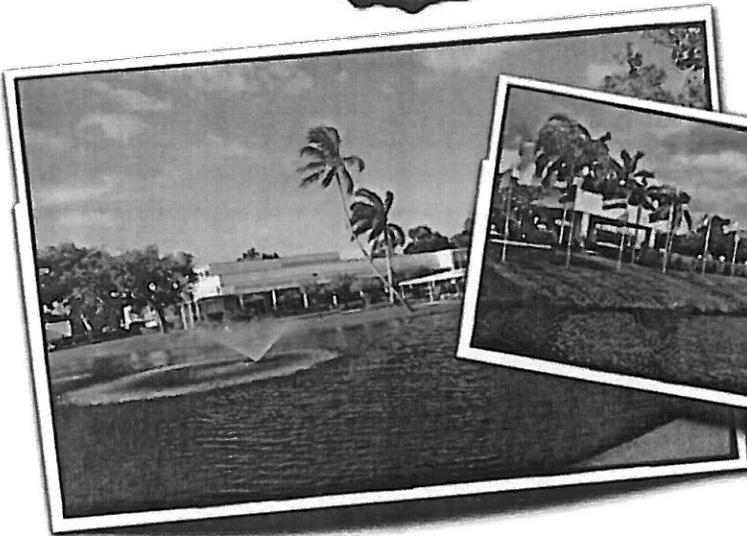

Assistant Professor, Lynn University

Eugene M. & Christine E. Lynn College of International Communication

LYNN

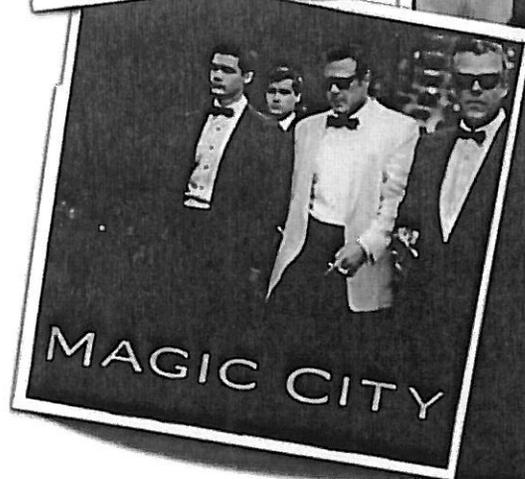

UNIVERSITY

FAUTM

FLORIDA ATLANTIC UNIVERSITY

Self-Employment Strategies

Performing off-Broadway

BOCA to BROADWAY

DAFINE MARKEY, SPECIAL TO THE SUN SENTINEL

Lynn University acting students, from left, Janee Ivery, Yannis Papadakis and Molly Anderson dance during rehearsal. The Boca Raton school's "Performing on Broadway" class will stage a series of one-act plays in an off-Broadway theater in New York City in January. But first, local audiences will have a chance to take in the show today through Saturday.

STUDENTS HAVE THEIR DAY OFF THE GREAT WHITE WAY

Lynn University class will take to the stage in off-Broadway plays

By Scott Travis
STAFF WRITER

Many young actors dream of performing on a New York City stage, and for some Lynn University students, it's coming true. Nineteen students are taking a "Performing on Broadway" class at the Boca Raton university. They've been rehearsing all semester, and in January they will stage 10 one-act plays in an off-Broadway theater. Their show is called "From Boca to Broadway," and they're giving local residents a sneak peek this week with five productions today through Saturday.

"It's an opportunity of a lifetime," said Tommy Lewandowski, 23, a Lynn senior from Detroit. "There's nothing else like Broadway."

The students will perform in The Sage Theater, a 99-seat playhouse the school rented at 711 Seventh Ave. in the heart of Times Square.

The challenge is going to be getting an audience in New York City," said Adam Simpson, chairman of the drama department. Tickets cost $10 for both the show at Lynn and in New York.

The students will arrive a few days early in New York to sell or give away tickets. They'll walk around New York University and other places in the city with tickets in hand. Many families are flying in for a show.

Janee Ivery, 21, of Belle Glade, said her family won't be able to make the trip, but they are coming to the show at Lynn.

"Not a lot of students get a chance to do something like this when they're an undergraduate," when they're an undergraduate, said Ivery, who performs in three skits.

Simpson said he's not aware of any other universities in South Florida with a similar New York experience. But some schools nationwide have similar programs. Brigham Young University in Utah holds a "Senior Show-in-a-case" at the Sage Theater annually at undergraduate students, according to the theater's Web site.

The cost of the trip is about $60,000 for the group, Simpson said, and students are trying to raise money to defray some of the expenses.

Students will perform their New York show from Jan. 13 to 18. The plays are a mixture of dramas and comedies. One play examines the motive and mind set of Susan Smith, the South Carolina woman who killed her two children in 1994. A lighter skit deals with the frustration of losing a dollar in a soda machine.

Yannis Papadakis, 22, of Los Angeles, said he is amazed that his entire class gets to perform off-Broadway.

"Fortune smiled upon us," he said.

If You Go

"From Boca to Broadway"
Cost: $10

Boca Raton
8 p.m. today-Saturday
Armanick-Goldstein Concert Hall, Lynn University, 5601 N. Military Trail

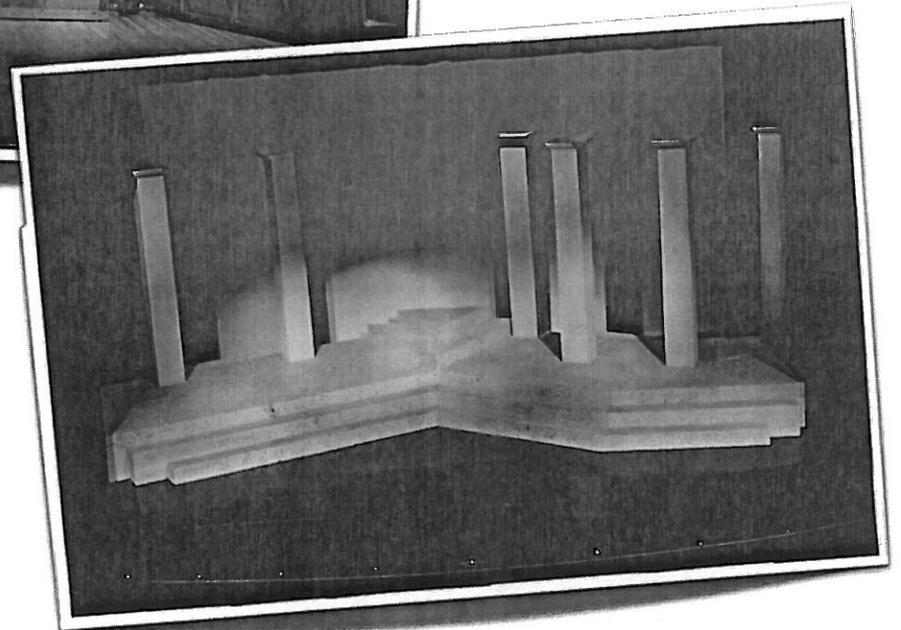

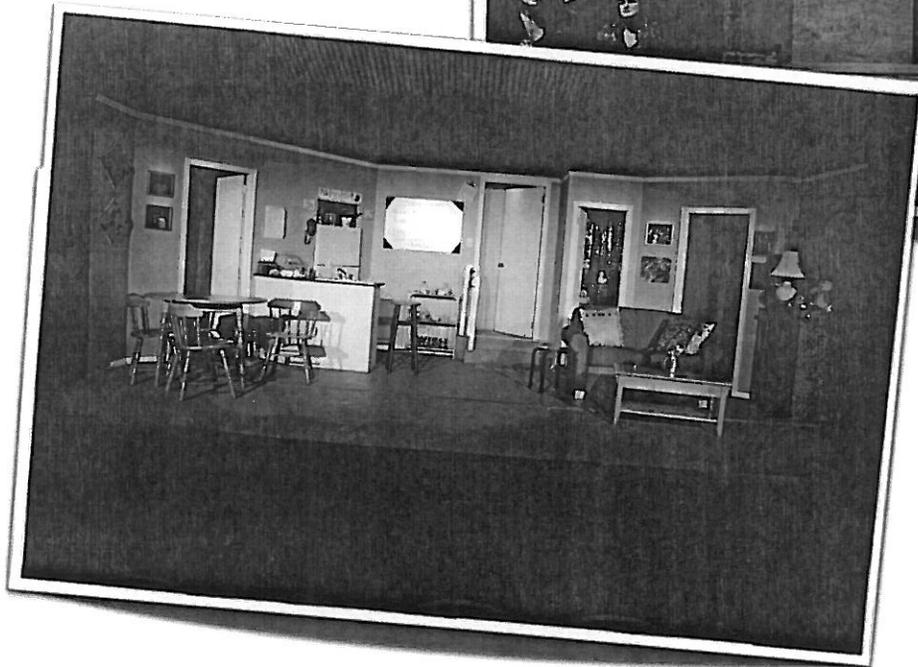

New York
The Sage Theater, 711 Seventh Ave., second floor, New York City, between West 47th and 48th streets

Information:
212-302-6665
or www.sagetheater.us

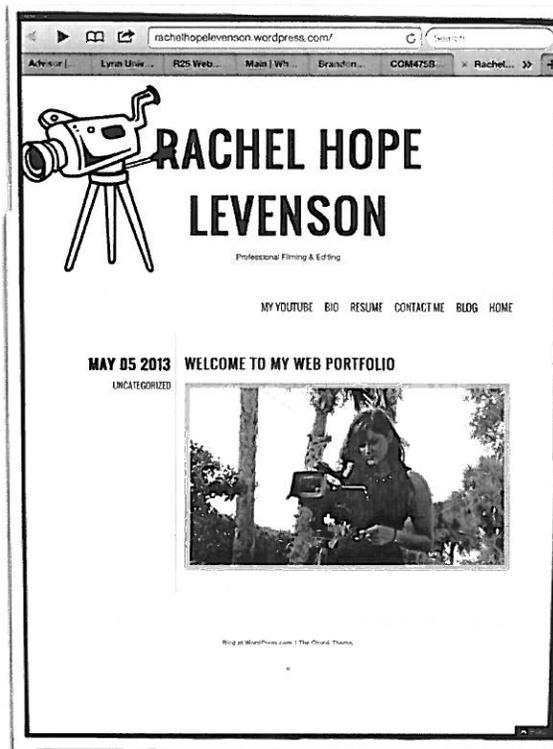

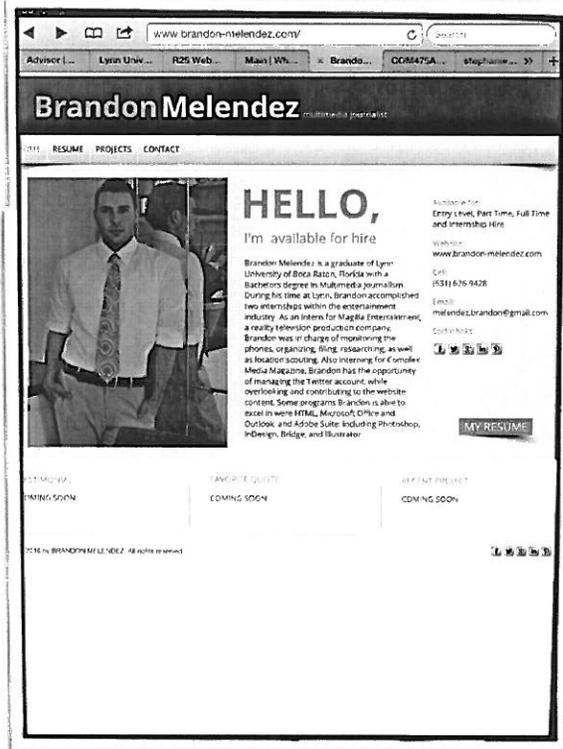

For tickets, call 561-237-9000 or go to www.lynn.edu/tickets

Scott Travis can be reached at sttra@SunSentinel.com or 561-243-6537.

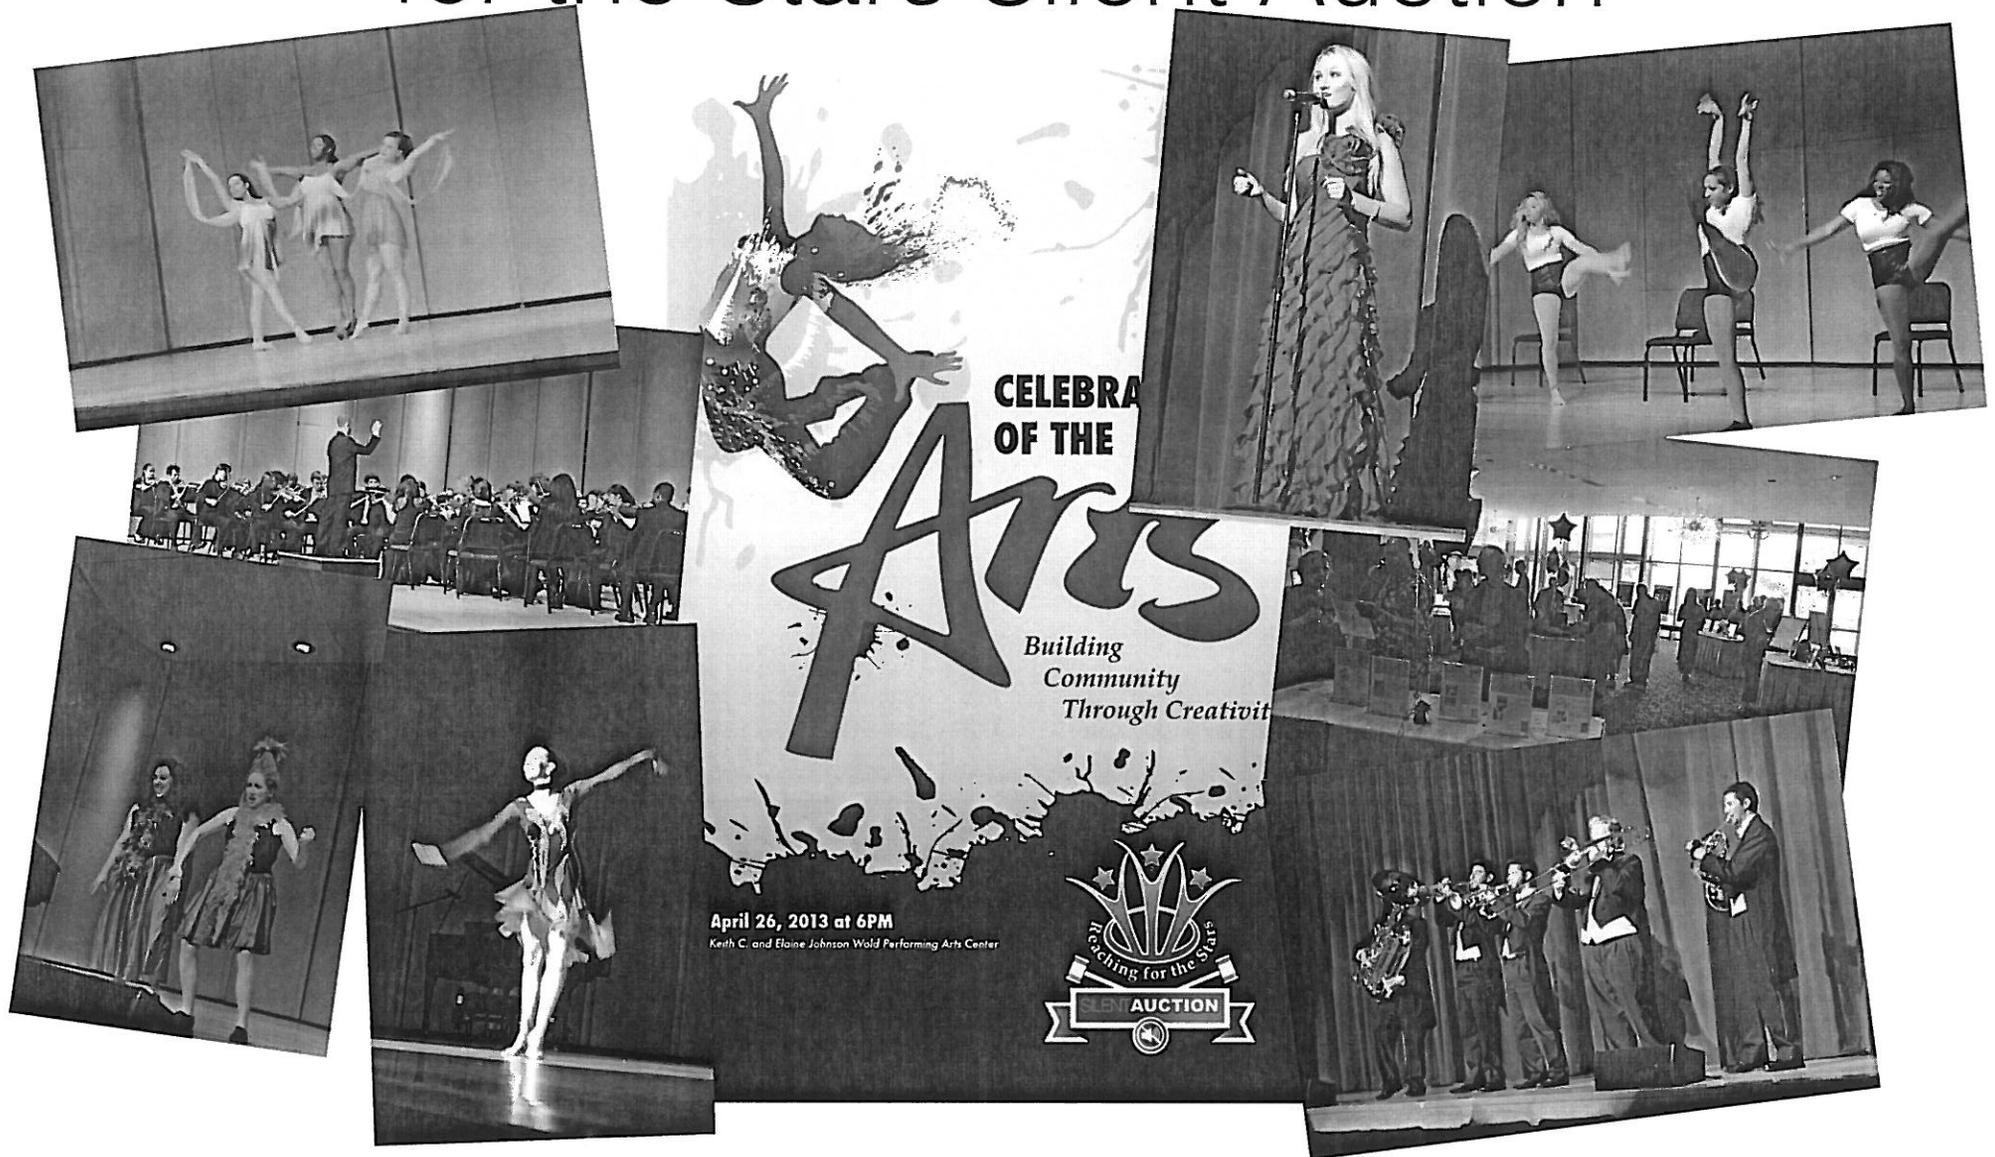

Theatrical Design & Production

Senior Communication Capstone

Celebration of the Arts & Reaching for the Stars Silent Auction

Assignment Design

- What are the learning outcomes for your course?
- What are "real-world" applications of the material being taught?

Discussion

Product Oriented Assignments

An assignment that is tangible in nature and allows the student to showcase their work beyond the boundaries of a traditional classroom.