Bio Edition 2015
Meet The Staff!
iPULSE IS BACK IN ACTION ONCE AGAIN
The Team Are Ready To Successfully Take On Another Semester

Above: In addition to the print edition, the iPulse team will be featured on the iPulse app available for the iPad and online. LU Photos.

By AISLING MCENTEGART & VICTORIA ALVAREZ
Editors-in-Chief

Now that fall semester is underway, a few modifications have been made to iPulse. With new members to the editorial staff and changes to the distribution, iPulse is ready to take on Boca and beyond.

Now in her final semester, Brooke Rudisill will be taking the position of publishing editor, where she will oversee the publication. Aisling McEntegart, senior, and Victoria Alvarez, sophomore, will serve as editors-in-chief; other additions to the team include sophomores Barbara Calixte and Calvin Jordan, who will act as web editor and assistant editor respectively.

Since last year, iPulse has changed aspects of its publishing and distribution. This year an eight-page print edition of iPulse will be distributed every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Hourly updated iPulse content will be available 24 hours a day online and through social media channels. This will ensure iPulse has the greatest reach and will be available across the globe.

iPulse's website has also been updated, so make sure to check it out to see the latest stories on the go.

Along with this, iPulse will continue to work with Allied-THA, a film marketing company and will be providing exclusive interviews and film reviews.

It is also important to note that iPulse will be working with a newly formed public relations agency, under the supervision of Professor Gary Carlin. This student run agency will give students the opportunity to interact with clients and build their skill sets while providing dynamic content to iPulse.

iPulse will continue on the success of last semester, for which a number of Sunshine State Awards were awarded to the editorial team. This included best review story by Rudisill, best sports story by Kevin Studer, graduate student, and third place for best page design by Rudisill, Studer and McEntegart.

The daily operations of iPulse would not be possible if it were not for the amazing social media editors, copy editors and staff writers who provide high quality content everyday throughout the year.

With new and exciting improvements to Lynn and its community, iPulse is ready to cover anything and everything that will be happening around campus.

iPulse editions can now be picked up from the blue newsboxes around campus starting today and is also available to read online at www.lynnipulse.org.
MEET THE EDITORIAL STAFF

Publishing Editor - Brooke Rudisill

Brooke Rudisill is a 21-year-old senior who is successfully making one impulsive decision at a time.

Aside from being severely bitten by the travel bug, she is currently finishing up her final semester majoring in multimedia journalism.

Just this past January, Rudisill traveled to the Dominican Republic on an assignment with the Center for Learning Abroad as a correspondent journalist, and produced a full-length documentary on her experiences.

Rudisill is also a contributing writer for Elite Daily and Young Hollywood, and has also been published by the Huffington Post.

With big dreams to work in either production or entertainment news, Rudisill is very excited to see where the future takes her.

She believes that every great experience begins with one impulsive decision - at least that is what has worked out for her thus far.

Editor-in-Chief - Aisling McEntegart

Aisling McEntegart is a senior in the 3.0 program from County Wicklow, Ireland, majoring in multimedia journalism.

McEntegart currently holds the position of editor-in-chief of iPulse and has a particular interest in entertainment and lifestyle writing. When she is not doing something journalism related, McEntegart enjoys reading, travelling and exploring the beautiful South Florida area.

Through her involvement with iPulse, McEntegart has gotten many amazing opportunities to further her career such as attending the 2014 MTV EMA Kick Off in Miami.

After she graduates in May, McEntegart hopes to move to New York City or Los Angeles to pursue her career in journalism.

This is McEntegart's third year of being part of the iPulse team and she is excited about what this year is going to bring.

Editor-in-Chief - Victoria Alvarez

Victoria Alvarez is a sophomore majoring in multimedia journalism in the 3.0 program. Originally from Pembroke Pines, Alvarez first found her passion for journalism in middle school and carried that passion throughout her high school years as an editor for her school paper. Alvarez joined the iPulse staff in her first semester at Lynn and has never looked back.

Although she keeps herself busy academically, when Alvarez is not doing school work, she serves her time as the event chair for the FAU/Lynn Relay for Life, a Resident Assistant in Freiburger Residence Hall and as a student ambassador for the Office of Admission.

Alvarez aspires to one day be a writer and reporter for a major news network or newspaper. With two years of college in front of her, Alvarez looks forward to expanding her knowledge of journalism through new opportunities and experiences in iPulse.

Web Editor - Barbara Calixte

Barbara Calixte, originally from West Palm Beach, is the web editor for iPulse and is a sophomore studying multimedia journalism in the 3.0 program. This is Calixte's second semester as part of the iPulse staff.

Calixte aspires to be the first Haitian American news anchor for CNN or MSNBC. However, if life decides to take a different turn Calixte wishes to go into the public relations field, perhaps representing well-known global companies such as Google and Facebook.

Calixte is also influenced by fashion and music and Calixte dreams to learn how to produce music and learn how to play the saxophone.

In her spare time, Calixte co-hosts a Lynn radio show called "Shut up and listen". She works as a residential assistant in Freiburger Residence Hall and also volunteers her time at local youth center located in Palm Beach County.
Assistant Editor - Calvin Jordan

Calvin Jordan is a junior studying in the 3.0 program. He is currently majoring in public relations and advertising, though he plans to acquire a master’s degree in business when he feels prepared enough to apply after graduation from Lynn. He enjoys writing about politics, ethics, education and occasionally entertainment. In his free time, he enjoys reading endless amounts of news, compiling documents that allow him to better understand the world he lives in, and having discussions with all breeds of dogs. His dreams in life include leading a Fortune 500 as CEO, opening up his own revolutionary university and winning either the 2040 or 2044 Presidential election. Jordan would like to inform everyone to register and begin supporting him.

Editorial Support - GraceAnne Trumpfeller

GraceAnne Trumpfeller is a junior majoring in multimedia journalism. Eager to get involved with her college newspaper, she began as a copy editor her freshman year. Her work with the 2014 Millennium Campus Conference (MCC) was published in The Huffington Post, and she continues to write pieces she feels will register with students worldwide.

Copy Support - Brian Martin

Brian Martin is an interesting hardworking student who joined iPulse last year and now holds the position of copy support. As a staff writer last year, he covered entertainment news and anything else he found interesting for an article. He hopes to keep covering entertainment news this year by covering topics like new movies or television shows that students should look out for. He hopes to become more involved with broadcast radio her first two years at Lynn, Trumpfeller aims to start her own radio show in which she can interview artists and score exclusive access to upcoming music. She hopes to someday work for Rolling Stone magazine, ideally as a writer because of her passion for connecting interesting people.

Copy Support - Kristine Posey

Kristine Posey is a senior at Lynn, currently studying business administration. Posey enjoys pilates when she has free time and practices regularly. Though her roots are in Austin, Posey has come to love the sunshine state and all the amazing things that can be done here in South Florida.

Despite the distance between Posey and her family and friends, they are a constant grounding and inspiration for Posey. Her passion for travel, animals and nature shine through at all times. Posey is excited to join the iPulse staff this year and will be acting as a copy support this semester.

Posey takes her academics very seriously and was recently included on the Dean’s list. Following her graduation in May, Posey intends on getting her graduate degree in business at Lynn.
Copy Support - Gioia Sacco

Gioia Sacco is a second semester sophomore from Long Island. She is studying multimedia journalism and hopes to one day be apart of the national television world and work with Fox News, Good Morning America and NBC. She also writes a blog in her free time. Sacco is also part of the 3.0 program and loves to write, exercise at her favorite gym, Youfit and socialize with her amazing friends and anyone new who enters her life. Sacco has the dream of traveling across the globe, experiencing world culture as well and to one day give back to the global community by being a spokesperson for pancreatic cancer and breast cancer.

MEET THE CREATIVE TEAM

Social Media Editor - Tyler Babcock

Tyler P. Babcock, now a senior, has been with iPulse since his freshman year at Lynn. Babcock enjoys going to new food locations and trying different types of food. When not eating or writing for iPulse, Babcock is consumed in his schoolwork as an advertising and public relations major. Babcock tends to expand his artistic horizons. Other extra curricular activities Babcock indulges in are basketball, music and watching sporting events.

Social Media Editor - Lydia Ames

Lydia Ames is a junior at Lynn studying emerging media. Ames has a double minor in psychology and political science. She transferred at the beginning of the fall semester from Landmark College, where she received her associate's degree in liberal arts. Her hobbies include singing, acting and various athletic activities. This is Ames' first time being involved with a student run publication and she is looking forward to learning more about journalism. Ames will be acting as social media editor for the coming semester and will be utilizing iPulse's various social networking platforms.

Advertising Manager - Laura Garrido

Laura Garrido was born and raised in Cali, Colombia. She is currently pursuing her degree in advertising with a minor in communications. Musical theatre is one of her strengths, in fact Garrido performs as part of the Lynn drama club. She is a very optimistic student who likes to explore new adventures and opportunities. Thanks to her outstanding academic achievements, Garrido is part of the Dean's list and enrolled in the 3.0 program. Garrido will be taking on the role of advertising manager for iPulse this semester and is very excited to work with various different companies around the South Florida area and beyond.

Artistic Director - Alexandria Butterfield

Alexandria Butterfield is very passionate about art and design. When Butterfield graduates from Lynn, she plans to further her studies in art and design and study interior architecture. Her favorite art related activity is painting and digital design. Butterfield is a dual Turks and Caicos Islands and American citizen. Butterfield has been studying graphic design since she came to Lynn as a freshman and is very passionate about the subject. Butterfield is very excited to take on the role of artistic director this year for iPulse. She looks forward to sharing her talents and skills with the student newspaper and is delighted to be iPulse's first ever artistic director.
Graphic Support - Valeria Figueroa

Valeria Figueroa is a senior studying digital art and design. Figueroa was born and raised in El Salvador and decided to come to the United States to study at Lynn for her bachelor's degree and to potentially open doors for career opportunities in the future after she graduates from Lynn. She has worked with magazine editorials the last couple of years and has designed different magazine spreads for two companies. She is excited to be part of the iPulse team and is looking forward to this opportunity to expand her knowledge of graphic design and digital art.

Graphic Support - Esther Mendoza

Esther Mendoza is a junior at Lynn majoring in digital art and design. In high school, Mendoza was cover story editor for her school's newspaper The Muse for two years, which lead to her winning two Palm Beach Post awards for Excellence in High School Journalism in 2014, second place in News Writing and second place in Feature Writing. Although journalism is a passion of hers, she hopes that she can explore the more artistic side of graphic design.

Video Editor - Chris Daniels

Christopher Daniels is multimedia journalism major from York, PA. When not writing, or shooting video for iPulse he can be found acting in the theater program. His career aspiration is to one-day work for IGN. Daniels is very excited to be a video editor for iPulse this year. He will be hosting his own video segment with iPulse called, The Weekly Bit, which talks about the latest video game and geek news. His passion lies with making interesting informative videos on the expanding world of video games, which he believes to be the newest form of art in today's world of evolving media. This is his first time on staff for iPulse. He has previously shot videos while in the club. He is also planning on studying abroad in Ireland during the summer of 2015.

Video Support - Christian Frelinghuysen

Christian Frelinghuysen is from Tucson, AZ. He was inspired by Tucson's beauty to start taking photos and video editing because he was surrounded by it constantly. He is a film major who loves horror and psychological thrillers and a minor in political science. He believes that every moment is an opportunity to capture. He was inspired to study politics because he dislikes Arizona's leadership and that instigated him to learn so he could get involved. Frelinghuysen intends on broadening his horizons and learning more about video editing and the behind the production of broadcast pieces.

Video Support - Michael Oldaker

Michael Oldaker is a junior from Potomoc, MD studying communication and emerging media. Oldaker joined iPulse to further develop his skills in communication and his favorite soccer team is D.C. United. After he graduates, Oldaker hopes to become a soccer coach. This is Oldaker's first year on the iPulse team.
Brittany Noah is a junior majoring in multimedia design at Lynn. In her spare time Noah loves to workout and can be found at Orange Theory Fitness throughout the week. She loves fashion and loves to shop at Old Navy, Banana Republic and Teen Angel. She has a passion for photography and is excited to take on the role of photographer for iPulse this semester.

In the future Noah wants to work in reality television and has an interest in career in entertainment television. Noah hopes to further her photography skills through her involvement with iPulse and is very excited to be a part of the team.

Stephen Pelzer is a senior from Plantation at Lynn studying film making. Pelzer's most recent project was working on a series of social skills videos in Vermont. Pelzer hopes that having the experience of being in iPulse will give him an experience of being on a team, working with other people and having to think of ideas on the fly.

Pelzer enjoys going to the movies, reading, swimming and doing Sweatin' to the Oldies. After he graduates, Pelzer wants to work in film production and has an interest in many different kinds of film genres. His favorite director is Tim Burton.
Jennifer Ayala is a sophomore from Colombia who is majoring in communications and emerging media and minoring in sports management. Ayala is passionate about sports and a member of the women's golf team. In her spare time, she loves to watch movies. Ayala enjoys spending time with her family. Her biggest dream is to travel the world.

Victor Batista is a junior majoring in multimedia design at Lynn. Batista is originally from central Brazil. He currently serves as the international knight for the Knights of the Round Table and treasurer for Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Batista enjoys political subjects and discussions as well as photography and the arts in general.

Kate Britten is an international sophomore student that grew up in London, Malaysia and Singapore. Britten is majoring in multimedia journalism with a minor in fashion retail & marketing. Britten is passionate about broadcast journalism and hopes to one day be a host on a show that reports on pop culture, entertainment and fashion.

Christopher Byrd was born in Chicago. At the age of seven, Byrd moved out of the big city to a northern suburb of Chicago called Glenview. He is currently a sophomore at Lynn. Furthermore, he is also a member of the fraternity Sigma Alpha Epsilon. One of his favorite past times is skiing and he would gladly do it everyday.

Christina Canary is a senior majoring in advertising and public relations. Canary came to Boca in 2012 to start her college career and hopes to stay down here in South Florida and work after she graduates. When she is not working or at school, Canary enjoys learning new things and trying to make a difference in the community.
Anthony Carabetta was born and raised on a farm in Connecticut with four other siblings. He is currently a junior at Lynn. At the beginning of this school year, Carabetta decided he was going to study advertising and public relations. By 2017, Carabetta plans on having his bachelor's degree, and will be pursuing a master's degree in the future.

Steele Henrikson is a junior and was born not too far away in beautiful and sunny Miami. He is the child of Paul and Cyn-di. He also has a younger sibling named Drake. Henrikson is interested in advertising and PR and hopes to pursue these fields in the future. His favorite color is green.

Dominique Marghela is an advertising and public relations major. Marghela is from Long Island. She is a sophomore at Lynn. She has found love for advertising and public relations and hopes to work for ESPN. She also hopes to bring a new sorority to Lynn this coming spring. Marghela is very pleased to be a staff writer for iPulse this semester and is looking forward to writing for the student paper.

Dea Pero is in her senior year at Lynn and studying advertising and public relations. Pero has been recognized on the Dean's List for academic excellence. Pero has assimilated skills in writing and is proficient with using Photoshop. She is a hard worker and loves to travel in her spare time. Pero is looking forward to being a part of the iPulse staff and contributing to the paper.

Ashley Persaud is a junior at Lynn who was born and raised in Miami. Persaud decided to major in advertising and public relations because of her creativity. She has had poems published and is very passionate about creative writing. Persaud is very happy to be bringing her creativity and writing to the student newspaper this semester.

Julietta Diabo is an advertising and public relations major. Marghela is from Long Island. She is a sophomore at Lynn. She has found love for advertising and public relations and hopes to work for ESPN. She also hopes to bring a new sorority to Lynn this coming spring. Marghela is very pleased to be a staff writer for iPulse this semester and is looking forward to writing for the student paper.

Vanessa Desmarais is a sophomore majoring in communication and emerging media. Although Desmarais is originally from Massachusetts, she feels most at home here in Florida, surrounded by the warm weather. When she is not studying, she enjoys exploring new places, taking photographs and meeting new people.
Seth Lovely is a senior at Lynn. Majoring in public relations and advertising, he is eager to bring his creative marketing ideas to iPulse. He hopes to hone his writing skills and later take them into the communication field. Lovely believes he can achieve all of these things and more by his involvement in iPulse this year.

Mark Snellman is a student athlete at Lynn. He is a member of the lacrosse team. Through the university, Snellman found his passion for graphic design. During the past two summers, Snellman used his graphic design skills to market his family business, Snellman Construction. This is Snellman's first year as part of the iPulse staff.

Hart Pisani is a communication major in his final semester at Lynn. He previously wrote for iPulse in the spring of 2014 as well as for his high school newspaper a few years ago. Pisani will be covering film reviews for iPulse this semester. He is an avid fan of the New Orleans Saints and hopes to earn a job as a writer in New Orleans after he graduates in December.

Kaely Tomeu was born in Palm Beach on Jan. 8, 1996. Tomeu is a dedicated equestrian that cares about her friends and family. Tomeu is humble and down to Earth, but most importantly, she loves her horses and is very passionate about her sport and her hobby. Tomeu is hoping to improve her writing abilities and her knowledge of journalism this semester.

Matt Weitz is an active student at Lynn, a transfer student from University of Alabama and Eastern Florida State College. Weitz has a passion for covering all aspects of sports news and he is very excited to report on Lynn's Fighting Knights athletic teams. Weitz is very much looking forward to contributing his writing efforts and sports knowledge to iPulse this year.

Kaely Tomeu is hoping to improve her writing abilities and her knowledge of journalism this semester.

Briana Randall is a sophomore majoring in multimedia journalism. Randall is a very outgoing girl who loves meeting new people. Here at Lynn, Randall is the vice president of the Student Activities Board, a peer mentor and member of the National Broadcast Society. This semester, she will be working with iPulse and will co-host Lynn Knight Radios Shut Up & Listen on Friday nights.

Stephanie Woloshin is a junior at Lynn studying communications and emerging media in the 3.0 program. Woloshin is originally from Bucks County, PA. She has a passion for advocacy and politics. During high school, she worked as a congressional intern and a member of the Zionist Organization of America.

Alex Turner is a young man who was born and raised in Los Angeles. He has been playing baseball since the young age of four and is now a part of the Lynn baseball team. He enjoys spending time with his friends, playing video games and loves NFL football. Turner hopes to become an MLB player or work for the Dallas Cowboys someday.

Denisse Rodriguez is a senior from the Dominican Republic majoring in multimedia journalism. Rodriguez had the opportunity to study abroad in Denmark where she was able to explore the field of photojournalism while traveling to eight different countries in only four months. Rodriguez is a student ambassador at Lynn and she considers it to be her second home.

Adonis Salcedo is more than just a character, but a man of many achievements. He was born and raised in the handsome city of District of Columbia. Following his graduation from high school, he decided to go to school in Florida. Salcedo now is a fully active student at Lynn, where he plans to receive his degree studying drama in order to pursue a acting career following graduation.
Above: iPulse editors are excited to bring more red carpet coverage and provide the Lynn community with all the lastest news. LU Photos.
Above: The iPulse staff are ready to provide news to the Lynn community and beyond for the coming year. Staff Photo/ B. Rudisill.
CREATING MEMORIES
Joining A Club Changes The College Experience

By VICTORIA ALVAREZ & BARBARA CALIXTE

Exclusive:
NEWEST ADDITION TO ATHLETICS
New Athletic Director Devin Crosby Comes To Lynn
New Athletic Director Devin Crosby has many expectations and plans for a great first year at Lynn.

By TESS THOMPSON
Staff Writer

Athletic Director Devin Crosby came to Lynn to join a community that focuses on teamwork and dedication. "Spirit, service and strength are what drew me to Lynn," said Crosby.

Being a student-athlete while in college, Crosby ran track at Slippery Rock University, where he was inspired to become an athletic director.

On his first day, he met Bill Lenox, Crosby's original athletic director, and was terrified because his first impression was of Lenox yelling at the athlete next to him for wearing a hat.

For most of the year, Crosby avoided Lenox until the championship for track and field. Crosby was finishing his race and was by the long jump when he saw Lenox raking the sand. Crosby asked why he did not have an intern do it and Lenox responded with, "Because I love you." Once he said that, Crosby knew how much Lenox actually cared for all of the athletes and saw the compassion that Lenox had for the players.

At that moment, Crosby knew what he wanted to do with his life and it ignited the desire to become an athletic director.

At first, Crosby did not start out in athletics, but in the housing department as a hall director. He later contacted the athletics department to see if he could help out with anything. Soon after that, he began to change the lights in the scoreboard and help with events for the athletics department.

Crosby then traveled to many different schools around the United States and started to work his way up to deputy athletics director at Kent State, which had more than 42,000 students and 400 athletes while he worked there.

When the job opened at Lynn, Crosby came to visit the university. Once he came onto campus, he saw a banner that said, "Spirit, Service and Strength," which are the ideals that Crosby lives by. "Once I saw that sign all around campus, I knew I had to work here," said Crosby.

After seeing the personal relationships and trust that students had toward the faculty and the cultural trust across the board, Crosby could not imagine turning down the offer.

What Crosby hopes to achieve during his first year is to understand the culture of Lynn, soak up all of the traditions and build greater connections within the campus and the outside community.

Crosby hopes to have the athletic department become a national model that other schools will look at and strive to be.
Student Profiles

FROM THE US TO THE MIDDLE EAST
Junior Evan Hargrove Learns Many Lessons While Living Abroad

By KRISTINE SANTIAGO
Staff Writer

Evan Hargrove, junior, was born in Michigan but was raised in Dubai, giving him the opportunity to experience and be raised in two diverse cultures.

At a young age, Hargrove moved to Dubai along with his parents and older siblings. There, he attended school at American School of Dubai and was part of his high school’s football and track team. He has had the opportunity to travel along with his family to different places.

“This experience gave me the opportunity to see and experience the culture and language of a country so different to the United States,” said Hargrove. “It’s been interesting to be back in the U.S. after being away for such a long time.”

During his college search, Hargrove was invited to play college football in Georgia but he tore his ACL. He did not let this discourage him for what he wanted his college experience to be.

“After that, I kept my search and came across Lynn,” said Hargrove. “I saw the business program and it convinced me here is where I had to go.”

Throughout his years at Lynn, Hargrove has been very involved around campus. He is part of campus recreation, he has played in different intramural sports, is the athletics knight for Knights of the Round Table and is a resident assistant in de Hoenle Residence Hall.

“My favorite thing about Lynn is the diversity it has among the students and their cultural background, said Hargrove. “I have made friends with people from all over the world and have had the chance to learn about different cultures and places.”

With his remaining time at Lynn, Hargrove hopes to gain field experience in his major, as well as to have the opportunity to intern in the area. Hargrove is excited to stay involved around campus and enjoys having the opportunity to keep adding to his cultural knowledge.
Cover

CHECK OUT LYNN'S CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS:

Drama Club
Tri Sigma
Model UN
Adults Supporting Kids
Alpha Phi Delta
Black Student Union
Blu Notez
Graphic Novels Club
Inter-Fraternity Council
Kappa Delta Pi
KOR
Law and Justice Club
LU Records
Lynn Wake and Ski Club
SAB
National Broadcasting Society
Student Research Assoc.
Zeta Beta Tau College Panhellenic
LUCK (LU Catholic Knights)
Sigma Alpha Epsilon
Theta Phi Alpha
Animal Welfare Club
Best Buddies
Environmental Studies
Zoological Society
UNICEF
GSA
CREATING MEMORABLE EXPERIENCES
Joining A Club On Campus Changes The College Experience For The Better

By VICTORIA ALVAREZ & BARBARA CALIXTE
Editor-In-Chief and Web Editor

Lynn offers a variety of clubs and organizations to get involved with on campus. Whether a student is looking to make friends, be active or find people that share the same interest, Lynn offers it all.

Being involved at Lynn is very vital to a student's college years, with numerous clubs on campus, students are bound to find something that interests them.

"In my freshmen year, I joined Theta Phi Alpha and was able to not only meet some of my best friends but also gain many leadership skills that have allowed me to become a student leader on campus," said Jacqueline McAlister, senior.

Since her freshman year, McAlister has studied abroad three times, been president of Theta Phi Alpha and is now a resident assistant in Lynn Residence Hall. She believes that she owes her entire college experience to her involvement on campus.

Being involved means more than just making friends. It is about forming relationships, creating connections and making a difference. Various clubs and organizations at Lynn do more than just hold meetings. They host events, work with other clubs and even get involved in the local community.

There are countless amounts of clubs and organizations here on campus right at the fingertips of students.

If one is interested in a lifelong sisterhood or brotherhood, they can join one of the sororities or fraternities on campus. On the other hand, if a student is interested in the technological or broadcasting side of journalism, they can join the National Broadcasting Society or iPulse. But, it does not just end there. If a student is interested in conducting or making events happen around campus, the Student Activities Board is just the place to consider.

Due to the fact that Lynn is so diverse, the clubs and organizations encompass many different interests and passions.

"Getting involved on campus with clubs and organizations is what makes your college experience," said Tyler Bean, sophomore. "The people you join clubs with become more than just your classmates, but your closest friends as well."
AN OPEN LETTER TO NEW STUDENTS

Why You Should Get To Know Your Peer Mentor And Resident Assistant

By BRIANA RANDALL
Staff Writer

Just over a year ago, I was super excited to be moving into my first residence hall at Lynn. Pulling onto campus I saw many welcoming faces and was wondering if all of this was for me. I later discovered those welcoming faces belonged to peer mentors and resident assistants (RAs).

The peer mentor team and RAs spent two weeks before classes began to prepare for not only my arrival, but for the rest of my fellow classmates and peers, which was amazing to me. It was so cool to finally put a face to the people that had given me advice and had answers to my endless Facebook questions of what to expect in college.

As the year went along, I became very familiar with those faces and I saw them as people who I could look up to and always go to for advice. They were the students that I wished I could be just like — student leaders. Before I knew it, I became one as well.

For those of you who do not know me, I am a second semester sophomore here at Lynn. This year, I am now a peer mentor. In addition, I am also the knight for clubs and organizations on Knights of the Roundtable, vice president of the Student Activities Board (SAB), staff writer for iPulse and a member of the Fashion and Retail Association and the National Broadcast Society.

I would like to welcome all the new students who I haven’t met already and congratulate you all for getting through your first month of college here at Lynn. Hopefully my fellow coworkers and myself have given you some great advice thus far.

Some of you may question why you need to get to know your peer mentor or RA. Our jobs are to build connections with you. Personally, it was not until I was going through peer mentor training that I had realized why that connection is so important.

Every new student is beginning a journey here at Lynn by facing major transitions: whether it is attending college for the first time, entering a new country or adjusting to a new school. These transitions can be rather overwhelming, but luckily with someone like your RA or peer mentor to help guide you, we can make the process a little easier and a lot less stressful. It wasn’t that long ago that we were in your shoes facing the same changes, so it’s easy for us to relate.

Building a relationship with your peer mentor or RA is probably one of the best connections you can make because when you are faced with overwhelming questions or stressful times, we are there for you. We offer a listening ear, positive guidance and a shoulder to cry on. Our mission is to ensure that our mentees or residents are happy. As student leaders, we hope to set an example by inspiring you to get involved and to make a difference.

I cannot tell you how happy I was these past few weeks, seeing my mentees reach out for advice and guidance, along with knowing that they felt comfortable coming to me for help. I love seeing them settle in, making friends and finding their place on campus while getting involved.

Push yourself to make a connection with us. You’ll always have someone to depend on no matter what.
Ride Tri-Rail to campus and save some green.

Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.
Download our app
It’s free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

MEET THE iPULSE STAFF

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill

Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez

Web Editor
Barbara Calixte
Erin Soza

Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan

Editorial Support
GraceAnne Trumpfeller

Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Gioia Sacco

Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames
Tyler Babcock

Video Editor
Chris Daniels

Video Support
Christian Freilinghysen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Peizer

Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido

Artistic Director
Alexandra Butterfield

Graphic Support
Valeria Figueroa
Esther Mendoza

Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez

Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayal
Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabotta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Stephanie Hendricksen
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghena
Dea Pero
Ashley Persaud
Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pianki

Brain Randall
Denise Rodriguez
Adonis Saucedo
Mark Shellman
Kaely Tomoe
Alex Turner
Matt Weitz
James Williams
Stephanie Woloshin

Graduate Support
Kevin Studer

Faculty Support
Timea Varga
Andrew Vernes

Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
INTERNSHIPS ON CAMPUS

Lynn Offers Internship Opportunities To Students

By CHRISTINA DIABO

Exclusive:
TRAVELING WITHOUT A CAR
The Tri-Rail Offers Discounts To College Students
GEARING UP FOR NEW SEASONS
New Student Athletes Are Ready To Leave Their Marks On History

By JENNIFER AYALA
Staff Writer

Freshmen athletes arrived to Lynn this fall embracing the opportunity to play for Lynn with great expectations.

Not every high school athlete has the privilege to play a sport at the collegiate level and it is an honor for the freshmen student athletes to start their college career at Lynn.

Ready to wear the school's name on their uniforms and to represent the Fighting Knights with spirit, service and strength, the newcomers have arrived ready to challenge themselves.

Although many of the new athletes come from different countries, cultures and walks of life, all are ready to take on this year with pride for the Lynn community.

The Women's Golf team this year has five newcomers.

"Having a team that supports me is exciting as well as a coaching and training staff that supports me," said Jennifer Prendergast, freshman.

Another team with exciting additions is the Women's Volleyball Team. Sydney Tommie, freshman, shared her favorite part about being a Fighting Knight.

"Being involved in the sports community, I expect to feel passion, compete and win," said Tommie. Before coming to Lynn and meeting her teammates, Tommie had some fears.

"[One of my fears was] not fitting in with the returners on the team," she said. However, that changed once Tommie arrived, where she now proudly plays with her new teammates by her side.

From another perspective, Kayley Smith is one of the newest players for the Women's Soccer team.

"My favorite part of being a student athlete is that I'm always busy," said Smith. This school has great facilities. I get to meet so many people also supporting other student athletes and representing the school."

This experience of arriving at Lynn, joining a team and becoming part of the Lynn community, brings great expectations and emotions when it is time to play a game.

"Determination, competitiveness, hunger for success and perseverance" said Smith.

Although it may sometimes be difficult to be away from home, Smith finds that the experience is worth it.

As a transfer student, sophomore Matias Solari is one of the new players for the Men's Soccer team this year, Solari is ready for the challenge of defending a national title. "Sometimes being on a good team is hard to gain a spot in the starting lineup. But I took this as a great challenge," said Solari.

For Solari, being part of the Fighting Knight family has a lot of positive effects.

"I have all the tools I need to improve here," said Solari. "As an athlete we have the gym, trainers and healthy food at the café [Elmore Dining Commons], and as a student, the library has great services and the iPad mini makes it easier to study."

The newcomers for this year are embracing the opportunity to be a Fighting Knight. With the knowledge of challenges on the horizon, the new additions to the various athletic teams are ready to battle and Above: As the athletic teams push their way through the season, new student athletes grow comfortable in their new home. LU Photos.

GENERAL MOTORS SETTLEMENTS
GM To Pay $900 Million Punitive Damages Over Fatal Ignition Switch

By KRISTINE POSEY
Staff Writer

A settlement was reached in which GM will pay $900 million in regards to a defective ignition switch that GM concealed for more than 10 years, resulting in at least 120 deaths and more than 270 injuries.

This problem came to light in February 2014, when GM recalled 2.6 million cars due to faulty ignition switches. Disabling air bags and power steering, as well as ignitions abruptly shutting off were among the errors. This measure should have been curtailed years prior. Many feel deaths, injuries and heartache could have been avoided if GM came forth with this information much sooner.

Moreover, this is a case of gross negligence that brought unnecessary suffering to multiple families and their communities.

USA Today reported GM is being charged with "engaging in a scheme to conceal a deadly safety defect" and wire fraud. The unethical concealment of this knowledge continued for more than a decade. As of now, no individual criminal charges are warranted but that could change.

This may be a case to prosecute specific personnel; not simply the company as a whole. The tragedies which emerged from the faulty ignition switch could have been prevented if responsibility was taken immediately. There is no excuse when lives are at risk.

High standards and business ethics should be the standard. Catastrophe should not have to strike for improvements or faults to be corrected. Honest business practices can be a reality. Unfortunately, it is up to each individual American to keep aware of questionable business practices, as it stands.

Since the discovery and investigation of the defective ignition switch, GM has made positive internal changes. For instance, GM terminated 15 employees involved in these transgressions.

The automaker also pledges to transparency and following proper guidelines. GM has committed to offering compensation to all the victims' families.
LYNN STUDENTS CAN NOW WORK FOR Students Can Gain Real World Experience Through Various Jobs And
AN INTERNSHIP CREDIT ON CAMPUS
Internships Offered From The Athletic Communications Department

By Christina Diabo
Staff Writer

As the future grows closer, many students become more interested in internships.

Internships are a great way for students to start off their future careers while gaining real-world experience.

Although there are many internships available both on and off campus, the College of International Communication has teamed up with the Athletics Communication Department to create internship opportunities for students. This opportunity is a great way for students in the College of International Communication to not only gain experience, but also income and internship credit.

Many students obtain a part-time job while in college for necessities such as gas, food and some spending money. At Lynn, many students are taking advantage of working at school to gain experience in their future profession.

"The internship with the Athletic Communications Department deals with social media, multi-media and print," said Chad Beattie, director of athletic communications. "Students experience producing their own stories, writing their own stories, producing video stories, social media training, as well as photography and website creations."

By interning for the Athletic Communications Department, communication students can apply what they have learned and see it come to life in a professional setting.

Students receive internship credit by filling out a form from the Hannifan Center for Career Connections. If approved, the internship at Lynn will show on one’s transcript when applying for jobs.

"Students have been eligible to receive credit for quite some time, for example the College of Business [students are required to complete an internship, so we decided why not allow them to get credit for the internship and work on campus," said Cameron Gill, internship coordinator.

Working on campus is especially helpful if students do not have the transportation to get to their internships. Instead, it is right outside their doorsteps.

"Working at school provides a lot of flexibility, you don’t have to drive long distances you can work in between your class schedule," said Gill. "You can still get paid and gain experience."

Jobs are still available on the students job app that can be accessible from iPads and iPhones and are open to everyone with above a 2.0 grade point average.

Above: The Athletics Department is hiring students who are interested in getting involved with Lynn sports for on-campus internships. LU Photos.
AMERICA BEGINS TO FEEL THE BERN
Senator Bernie Sanders Begins To Rise In The 2016 Presidential Race

By DYLAN PETIT-JAQUES
Staff Writer

Outside of the Donald Trump campaign, Senator Bernie Sanders is currently the talk of the political world as he gains ground on former Secretary of State and frontrunner Hilary Clinton.

Sanders still has ways to go as recent polls show that he is still 18 percentage points behind Clinton, to 24 to 42 percent according to CNN and ORC polls. Sanders is currently leading in Iowa and New Hampshire according to CBS news polls.

For those who are unaware of Sanders, he was born on Sept. 8, 1941 in Brooklyn, New York. He is currently the longest lasting independent senator on the senate floor. Sanders is also the only politician in U.S. history to win a Senate race as a socialist.

Sanders has the ability to hold multiple policy positions and talk about the issues that Americans are concerned with, such as, the wage gap, income inequality, getting money out of politics and racial justice. Sanders position to reform Wall Street is very popular amongst democrats. What also makes Sanders appealing to the democratic base is that he has been consistent on these issues for the past 40 years.

Sanders' recent surge in the polls has surprised even him.

As mentioned before, Sanders does have a way to go. In a recent Gallup Poll, two-thirds of African American voters say that they do not have an opinion on Sanders because they have never heard of him. Clinton is still very popular amongst African Americans and Sanders has some work to do to receive more attention amongst the black community.

If Sanders continues to surge in the polls and relay his message to the democratic base, do not be surprised that he may steal the primary from Clinton. If he does, there is a very good chance that he will win the presidency as recent Quinnipiac polls indicate that he would beat almost every nominee on the GOP side. It is still very early, but this should be interesting race as the American people approach 2016.

Above: Senator Bernie Sanders is slowly beginning to get ahead and gain more voters. Some think he may win the primary. Stock Photos.
TRAVELING WITHOUT MY OWN CAR
How The Tri-Rail Saves Me Money And Time On A Monthly Basis

By VICTORIA ALVAREZ
Editor-In-Chief

When I was in high school, the talk of the town was driver’s licenses. All of my friends were taking their road tests and receiving new fancy cars on their birthdays. However, my high school experience was a little different from theirs.

When I turned 16, my parents did not let me get my driver’s license due to various reasons. A year passed and I still was unable to take the exam and drive legally on the streets. Another year passed and I had turned 18, and sadly, I was still left without a license or the ability to drive.

Now 19 and a sophomore in college, I’m surprisingly still stuck in the same situation: without a license and without a car.

Too bad, my inability to drive is quite the surprise. I always get the same reactions when people realize that I’m unable to get around on my own. The typical, “Oh my gosh, you don’t have a license? Why not?” paired with some chuckles and laughter is the usual reaction that I get from people. However, after the initial surprise, they begin asking how I get around town, or more specifically, how I get myself to travel to further places?

Although to some, traveling without a car seems almost impossible, I can proudly say that I have perfected the art and lifestyle of traveling without my own personal form of transportation.

How do I do it? Ladies and gentlemen, I present to you, public transportation and the Tri-Rail.

Originally from Pembroke Pines, Fl., I tend to visit home often, being that it is only about 40-minutes away from Lynn. To many, the 40-minute drive is not too long of a trek, but without the ability to drive, it becomes a bit more difficult.

But the difficulty level sank when I discovered the Tri-Rail, a way of transportation without putting too much of a hole in my pocket.

Located just up Yamato road and a short six minute drive from Lynn, the Boca Tri-Rail station is of easy access to any and all students. The trains, leaving the station twice an hour on weekdays and once an hour on weekends, are a great resource for students, like myself, who wish to travel to neighboring cities in the South Florida area. The train can take students from Boca to cities such as Fort Lauderdale, Hollywood and even Miami.

On various weekends, I would take the convenient shuttle bus from campus to the Boca train station to the Hollywood station, where my mother would then pick me up. By doing so, I not only saved her a 40 minute drive on gas, but I also saved money.

The prices of tickets for the Tri-Rail are extremely affordable and helpful, especially for college students. Students have a variety of choices for the types of ticket that they wish to purchase at the station. But, there is also a surprise in store for college students who take the Tri-Rail.

University students can save 50 percent on the Tri-Rail ticket fares by simply bringing along their student ID and showing it at the time of purchase. This discount not only makes the train more affordable, but it also allows students to travel more often with the extra money in their pocket.

My personal experience with the Tri-Rail has been more than a positive one. Not only does the affordable transportation allow me to save money, but it also allows me to catch up on things like schoolwork while on board. That way, I can have a stress-free weekend with my family without the worry of schoolwork.

With 18 train stations from Miami to Mangonia Park, the Tri-Rail is a great form of public transportation for college students.
Download our app
It's free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

MEET THE iPULSE STAFF

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill

Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez

Web Editor
Barbara Callixte

Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan

Editorial Support
GraceAnne Trumpfeller

Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Giola Sacco

Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames
Tyler Sabcock

Video Editor
Corey Capel
Chris Daniels

Video Support
Christian Freilinghuyzen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Pelzer

Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido

Artistic Director
Alexandria Butterfield

Graphic Support
Valeria Figueroa
Esther Mendoza

Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez

Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayala

Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabetta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Steele Henriksen
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghena
Des Perez
Ashley Persaud
Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pisan
Brian Randolph
Denisse Rodriguez
Adonis Salcedo
Mark Snellman
Kaely Torneu
Alex Turner
Matt Welz
James Williams
Stephanie Woloshin

Graduate Support
Kevin Studer

Faculty Support
Timea Varga
Andrew Verme

Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
KNIGHTS OF THE ROUNDTABLE
EXCLUSIVE
GROUNDBREAKING NEWS:
NEW RESIDENCE HALL
ANNOUNCING NEW RESIDENCE HALL

Groundbreaking Will Be In December With Hopes For A 2017 Opening

Above: In Fall of 2017, Lynn will open its brand new three-story residence hall that will not leave anyone disappointed. LU Photo.

By KEVIN STUDER
Graduate Support

Since current students have entered the front gates of Lynn, they have only ever seen five residence halls: DeHoernle, Freiburger, EML, Lynn and Trinity. Well Fighting Knights better get ready because a new residence hall is underway.

Lynn recently announced that groundbreaking on a new residence hall will happen in December and it should be open by Fall of 2017. The three-story building will hold 170 beds for upperclassmen.

While only plans have been seen for the new building, it is sure to not disappoint.

"I think it's beautiful," said Dr. Phil Riordan, Vice President for Student Affairs. "I think Gensler [the architect company] did a beautiful job. When it's all said and done students will race to get in there."

The first floor will feature quadruplet suites with two full beds on each side and a living room area in the middle. The second and third floors will be townhouses with two bedrooms and a kitchenette with a fridge and microwave on the second floor and three bedrooms and a nook on the third floor.

Students hoping for a full kitchen should not worry, as there will be a full kitchen area in the lobby of the building for people to share. There will also be an outdoor area with grills for those who like to cook out.

"It kind of has an industrial feel to it," said Riordan. "I can see students really taking some ownership of the building because it will be beautiful."

With groundbreaking beginning in December on the old soccer field behind EML and DeHoernle, it will still be a while before the Lynn community sees any part of the building go up.

"Construction always kind of fascinates me," said Riordan. "A lot of it is moving dirt and pushing it back and forth to get the ground."

When the new hall comes to be, students will see what they want. Gensler held meetings with students last year to take note of what students wanted, not just what staff members wanted.

When looking toward the future, several new residence halls will be built, but that does not mean that Lynn will become a very large school. To keep a small school feel, the maximum amount of students Lynn wants to grow to is 3,000.

"The goal is to accommodate as many people as we can to stay on campus," said Riordan. "We're never going to get to 5,000 or 10,000. That's never going to happen."

Unlike other schools, Lynn has always been focused on the three I's: innovative, international and individualized. The larger the school gets, the harder it is to stay this way.

"We don't want to be an FAU," said Riordan. "That's not why you came to school here. That's not why others came to school here. They like that small intimate feeling."

Get ready freshmen, by the time junior year comes around, this new hall could be available. Be on the lookout for more updates on this building as the year continues.
Around Town

ATLANTIC AVENUE VS MIZNER PARK
Palm Beach County’s Premier Entertainment Venues Go Head To Head

By CALVIN JORDAN
Assistant Editor

Enjoying time out with family or rebelling in a night out with friends are both easy to do in sunny South Florida and there are two particular locations that the Boca native should consider when making a choice of destination: Atlantic Avenue in Delray Beach and Mizner Park in Boca Raton.

Deciding between these two hotspots ultimately comes down to personal preference, but there are two main factors to look at for guidance: variety in dining and ability to entertain.

Mention the words "Atlantic Avenue" around a local and more often than not they will elaborate on how their favorite restaurant is the best thing since air conditioning or mosquito repellent.

Valeria Figueroa, senior, is not an exception to that peculiarity. Her recommendation for food would send diners to El Camino, a Mexican restaurant and tequila bar.

"I think the Taco Tuesday deal is the best—each taco is $2 and you have your choice of wheat and protein," said Figueroa.

Other notable mentions for restaurant suggestions include Caffe Martier (Mediterranean cuisine), Taverna Opa (Greek selections) and Lemongrass (an Asian bistro).

For those looking for activity in lieu of food, the Community Redevelopment Agency hosts a green market every Saturday on the Avenue that generates a welcoming environment for farmers, vendors and buyers alike.

In addition, once a year a fashion week is held by the Delray Beach Downtown Development Authority that has helped to further the awareness of the shopping boutiques and unknown talent that lies within the community.

Closer to campus lies Mizner Park, an upscale outdoor plaza that will not disappoint those looking for a lavish atmosphere.

While the restaurants in Mizner are more chain-focused, like Ruby Tuesday's and Ruth's Chris Steak House, several students commented on their affinity for Yardhouse, an eatery known for generating good times with rock music and inexpensive drinks.

"Yardhouse has got to be one of my favorites," said Lauren Hellstern, sophomore. "The food there is just too good and it's like I can never get enough.

As for events taking place in Mizner Park, concerts are hosted irregularly. Big names such as Darius Rucker, Idina Menzel and Disney-sponsored boy band, R5, have all held performances in recent years.

Anyone looking for a guaranteed way to spend their time in style can take their money over to the iPic Theater, where moviegoers can be spoiled with reclining seats, blankets and gourmet food.

"iPic is an amazing movie experience, but can be very expensive," said Kevin Studer, graduate student. "I tend to only go if I have a gift card or if there is a movie that I really want to see."

No matter which location one chooses, it is hard to go wrong in the South Florida area. Both Atlantic Avenue and Mizner Park are places to be. Just make sure one's wallet is in good condition.
MEET LYNN’S BRAND NEW KNIGHTS
A Brand New Semester Brings A Brand New Group Of Knights To KOR

By KEVIN STUDER
Graduate Support

When in college, the best way to make a change in the campus community that one lives in is to work with the student government. At Lynn, we call this the Knights of the Roundtable (KOR).

A group of 12 students have been selected to represent different areas of campus and be a liaison between the professional staff and students. For the first time since KOR has been implemented, the entire board is new. With the majority of last year’s knights being seniors, a complete overhaul of KOR was put into place.

This year’s KOR board is composed of Academic Knight Karina Da Fonseca Parreiras, Athletic Knight Evan Hargrove, Auxiliary Services Knight David Gibson, Community Knight Eloisa Sarmiento, Financial Knight Alisson Haon, Information and Technology Knight Diego Rodriguez, International Knight Victor Batista, Parliamentarian Knight Calvin Jordan, Public Relations Knight Manel Atie, Secretary Knight Madelyn Russo and Student Affairs Knight Tess Thompson.

Sophomore Briana Randall was just added as the Clubs and Organization Knight.

KOR is dedicated to making student voices heard across campus. With an open meeting once a month, students are able to come and speak about issues across campus that they want to see fixed or change. The other three weeks each month, KOR meets in a closed meeting to discuss current issues that have been brought up.

"[I want] to make the students have a voice and be comfortable enough here to call it home," said Thompson, junior. "Also, I want to make sure that the students can have a chance to make a difference at Lynn."

With KOR, the Knights are looking at long-term goals to ensure that generations to come are satisfied with Lynn.

"I want for us all to end this year feeling proud with what we’ve accomplished," said Jordan, junior.

KOR is filled with people from different backgrounds – the U.S., Brazil and Ecuador to name a few – as well as many different majors – International Business, Hospitality Management, Psychology and Public Relations and Advertising are all covered as well as several others.

The Knights are excited for what is to come this year and hope that people come to them when they see something they want changed.

To contact KOR, attend the open meetings, visit them during their office hours on the second floor of the student center and following them on social media @LynnU_KOR.

Above: It is time to welcome the brand new members of Knights of the Roundtable. Staff Photos/ D. Rodriguez.
THE STORY BEHIND BOBBY FISCHER

"Pawn Sacrifice" Tells The Truth Of The Youngest Grandmaster Of Chess

By GIOIA SACCO
Copy Support

Actor Tobey Maguire brings moviegoers together over a game of chess and insanity as he plays the role of Bobby Fischer, the greatest and most well-known chess player of all time.

"It's a war of perception, this poor kid from Brooklyn against the whole Soviet Union" said Michael Stuhlbarg, actor.

Robert "Bobby" James Fischer was the youngest grandmaster of the chess world. Winning the grand title at only 13-years-old, he astounded audiences with his brilliance.

To some, the man on the screen is radical, insane and scared, but to others, there is a sign of brilliance and integrity within him.

Fischer was self-taught at a young age, and started studying how Russians played the game of chess for eighteen hours everyday for more than four years.

Fischer's ultimate goal was to beat the Russians, who were the best in the world at that time. Fischer was self-taught at a young age, and started studying how Russians played the game of chess for eighteen hours everyday for more than four years.

Throughout Fischer's journey to becoming the best chess player in the world, one is able to experience the paranoia and the delusional psychosis that he felt throughout his young adult years.

The game itself is a never-ending hole, one that no one can escape. One's mind can deteriorate into a mental state that they are not prepared for.

This movie is different to the norm that the audiences witness in the theaters today. "Pawn Sacrifice" is able to capture the mind and soul of any audience member and brings out wonder and imagination to the human eye.

"Pawn Sacrifice" is now in national theaters. Buy a ticket and take a seat, one might just learn something new.
Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at trl-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.
Oct. 9, 2015 - iPulse - Page 9

Download our app
It’s free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill

Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez

Web Editor
Barbara Calixte

Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan

Editorial Support
Grace Anne Trumpfeller

Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Gioia Sacco

Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames
Tyler Babcock

Video Editor
Corey Capel
Chris Daniels

Video Support
Christian Frelinghuysen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Pelzer

Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido

Artistic Director
Alexandria Butterfield

Graphic Support
Valeria Figueira
Esther Mendoza

Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez

Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayala

Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabetta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Steele Henriksen
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghena
Dea Pero
Ashley Peraud
Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pisani
Brian Randall
Denise Rodriguez
Adonis Salcedo
Mark Snellman
Kaely Tomeu
Alex Turner
Matt Weitz
James Williams
Stephanie Woloshin

Graduate Support
Kevin Studer

Faculty Support
Timea Varga
Andrew Vermes

Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
LYNN HAS BEEN NAMED ONE OF THE

"TOP 25 INNOVATIVE SCHOOLS"

EXCLUSIVE DELIVERY DUDES
A NEW OUTLOOK ON FOOD DELIVERY
Athletics

MEN'S SOCCER TEAM REBUILDS
The Men's Soccer Team Takes On New Players This Season

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

After losing three key soccer players from the championship-winning team last year, the Men's Soccer team is going through a rebuilding process with new players that are proud to be marching to the beat of their own drum.

The men's first loss of the season was to St. Leo and although they were disappointed, they will continue to stay positive and make progress while learning from one another.

Under the pressure of being the number one team in the nation last season, the Men’s Soccer team is strengthening their growing team.

"Right now with 18 new players, we are just trying to develop our team and get better," said Coach John Rootes. "Our soccer conference is the best in the country. So from top to bottom, everyone is really good and really competitive."

While the returning players are familiar with what to expect, some of the new players are happy that they chose to become part of the Lynn family.

"It's a completely different experience and so far I am loving every moment of it," said Hussein Heidari, freshman. "There are many talented players within the team which makes practices really competitive and to a high standard."

During practice, the team takes "keeping your eye on the ball" to a whole different level.

"We play a lot of four against four, defense against offense or 11 vs. 11," said Luca Puster, freshman. "All of our drills are with the ball. Practice makes perfect so for the future, the team is hoping to improve on their skills with one another and to keep focus during games.

"We are getting better and that has been our goal from the beginning: to get better and better as the season goes on and hope to end up being in the mix at the end of the season," said Rootes.

The team will continue to work hard toward their goals as well as competing for another championship title as the season continues.

Above: A Lynn player evaluates the field before making his next move. Staff Photo/ D. Rodriguez.
Around Town

DELIVERY DUDES TO THE RESCUE
Whenever Hunger Strikes, Let the Dudes Fight The Battle

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

College is tough: there is homework to be done, essays to write and exams to spend time studying for. Students will not always have time to go out to eat and might as well end up binge eating all the granola bars stashed away in their residence halls. Well, those days are officially over. Welcome to the era of Delivery Dudes.

The Dudes have partnered with roughly 75 different restaurants in Boca. Anyone can call in or order the food online and they will pick it up and deliver it for $5.

Delivery Dudes takes pride in their service, making sure to get the food delivered in less than an hour while always handling it with loving care.

"You want barbecue and your roommate wants pizza? Not a problem," said Mike Visnick, shift operator. "The dudes will pick up food from multiple restaurants and deliver them together for you in the time promised."

The quirky company founded three and a half years ago is the answer to everyday delivery dilemmas. Delivery Dudes is also changing the game by working with a variety of different businesses such as Publix in order to bring students the groceries they need with service they deserve.

"I wish I had known about Delivery Dudes when I was a freshman living on campus," said Tess Keegan, senior. "It would have been nice to get my grocery’s delivered when I didn’t have a car."

The passion that the Dudes have for the company does not go unnoticed. Make an order to see how exciting, innovative and remarkable this company truly is.

"I love working at Delivery Dudes," said Matt Solomon, manager. "There are always positive vibes and we pass the happiness onto our customers by delivering unending joy straight to their mouth’s."

Visit deliverydudes.com

Above: Two Delivery Dudes employees out of many.
Staff Photo/ C. Canary.

Right: A current DD employee sports her company’s cape
Staff Photo/ C. Canary.
LYNN IS NAMED ONE OF THE "TOP"

Lynn Becomes More Up to Speed With The Latest Technology
Story

25 MOST INNOVATIVE SCHOOLS
That Allows Students To Access Information Right At Their Fingertips

By CALVIN JORDAN
Assistant Editor

As students may or may not know yet, Lynn has recently been recognized by U.S. News and the World Report as one of the top 25 Most Innovative Schools across the entire nation.

Ranked at number 21 on the list, members of the close-knit community can easily point out a notable reason why the school continues to remain so progressive: the campus-wide iPad initiative is revolutionizing the way young adults are experiencing their education.

"Alongside our professors and peers we have been given an opportunity to learn in a totally new, different way," said Marianna Meyer, junior.

In spite of such exciting news, one might be hard-pressed to find a student that is fully aware of the distinction Lynn just received.

"I had no idea that [Lynn] made that list," said Nikki Mannarino, sophomore. "It does make me feel good about myself and makes me feel as though coming to Lynn was the right choice for college."

While not everyone is completely in the know just yet, those who are also know that the institution is more than deserving of the ranking. Lynn has been consistent about dedicating its flow of resources toward keeping its technology at its newest and this ultimately pays off for students who can learn these skills here to apply out in the real world.

"When you go to some older schools it's easy to see that their tech isn't as up-to-date as the tuition price tag would lead you to believe," said Toni Jordan, senior.

"Going to school in this mediated world means that we have to be completely adapted to working with technology and Lynn makes sure that its graduates are more than prepared."

Lynn was also ranked among the Best Online Bachelor's Programs in addition to being highlighted as enrolling the fifth-highest percentage of international students at 24 percent.

As the Lynn family continues to grow and achieve new heights, all Fighting Knights are fully cognizant that the best has truly yet to come.

Above: Students know that there are resources ranging from Microsoft Office to free iPad apps. Staff Photos/ D. Rodriguez.
Politics

THE APPEAL OF DONALD TRUMP
How A National Joke Became Front Runner For Commander-in-Chief

By DYLAN PETIT-JAQUES
Staff Writer

On June 16, 2015, billionaire and businessman Donald Trump announced that he was running for President of the U.S. with a mission to “make America great again.”

Since his announcement, Trump has held onto number one in the national polls although recent weeks have seen a lack of political correctness. To many potential voters within the GOP, his unwillingness to come off as politically correct resonates with much of the party base.

Trump has a lack of political correctness. To many potential voters within the GOP, his unwillingness to come off as politically correct resonates with much of the party base. Some in the GOP despise political correctness because they feel that it makes the candidate come off as weak and dishonest in the name of remaining inoffensive.

Trump does not care who he offends. He will give his opinion whenever and however he wants — and it is working.

Trump has a controversial stance on immigration. Trump believes that birthright citizenship should be stripped from the constitution because those born on U.S. territory “do not have American citizenship,” and birthright citizenship is “not going to hold up in court.” Birthright citizenship is a constitutional right that grants citizenship to all persons born or naturalized in the U.S.

According to Forbes magazine, Trump is worth $4 billion. When Trump supporters are asked why they support their candidate, they are quick to point out his numerous success stories in the business world, figuring that somehow it all could somehow transfer over to the Presidency.

Dylan Petit-Jaques is a senior majoring in American Studies. This column does not represent the opinions of the i Pulse, but his personal thoughts and views.
Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.

TRI-RAIL™
Part of the South Florida Regional Transportation Authority

1-800-TRI-RAIL • www.tri-rail.com
SUPPORT THE FIGHTING KNIGHTS AND WIN

By Christina Diabo

Exclusive: New Yoga Classes At Lynn
Visit The Third Floor Of EML
Ben Carson Rises To Second Place In GOP Race In Recent Polls

By DYLAN PETIT JAQUES
Staff Writer

Retired Neurosurgeon Ben Carson has stepped into the GOP race as a clear underdog, but is now second among most polling averages behind GOP frontrunner Donald Trump.

Before surging in the polls, very few voters knew who Carson was, much less his policy positions. However, in recent debates Carson has managed to impress some of those who were initially skeptical about his candidacy. This serves as a shocker for political figures who have doubted the viability of his campaign due to his lack of applicable experience: Carson has never held or ran for a political office until this year.

In his book “America the Beautiful,” he explains why he decided to enter politics, stating that “[he believes] it is a very good idea for physicians, scientists, engineers and others trained to make decisions based on facts and empirical data to get involved in the political arena.”

Though Carson has little experience in politics, his resume is quite impressive. He is the first neurosurgeon to separate twins who were conjoined at the head. He also is the youngest person to ever serve as the head of a major division at John Hopkins University in 1987. In addition, Carson was also awarded a presidential Medal of Freedom in 2008 by President George W. Bush.

Carson’s rise in recent polls has also caught the attention of voters even though he has been targeted for making some very controversial statements regarding Muslims. In a recent interview with Face the Nation, Carson said “[He] would not advocate that we put a Muslim in charge of this nation. [He] absolutely would not agree with that.”

It is still very unclear if Carson can successfully snag first place in the polls ahead of Trump, who still remains highly popular amongst likely republican voters. In order to get ahead of Trump, Carson must continue to ride his momentum and capitalize on his success during debates to show voters that he, out of the many candidates, is in fact the right choice for the GOP nomination.
Around Town

SAY "YES" TO RHINO DOUGHNUTS

Rhino Doughnuts Is Changing The Doughnut Game With Their Artsy Treats

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

Located on NE 2nd Street just south of Mizner in Boca, Rhino Doughnuts has been taking the town by storm for more than a year now. Featuring a different and crazy variety of doughnuts, Rhino's is nothing like anyone has ever tasted before.

"I love that they are made fresh every single day," said Madeline Fryburg, senior. "The freshness is something you can taste and see."

No one will ever have to worry about getting a leftover doughnut here because every morning they get a fresh shipment in from their Sunrise location.

"They get 200 doughnuts a day but are always sold out by the time I get out of class," said Bridget Lord, senior. "It's becoming so popular that you have to get there early."

Flavors include everything from crème brûlée, which is their most popular, to doughnuts topped with Reese's puffs, chocolate with bacon or nutella and banana. There are some doughnuts that are consistently available every day, and some that are constantly changing.

Not only do they serve doughnuts but there are also a variety of different pastries, coffee and cappuccinos that are available. There is always something for just about everyone.

"I love that it isn't the same old thing everyday," said Stephanie Leighty, senior. "It keeps it new, fresh and exciting."

You may also pre-order the doughnuts online if you are beginning a study group, team meeting or any type of event that might require delicious doughnuts.

With only three locations in the world, visit Rhino Doughnuts in Boca and be one of the first to try a product that is sure to rise up on the market.

At $1.99 per doughnut, this is a great place to hang out with friends in a comfortable and welcoming ambiance. When one's brain is fried and he or she just cannot stand to be in the library any longer, take a break and go visit Rhino Doughnuts.

Above: Just a preview of some of the delectable treats one can buy at Rhino Doughnuts and Coffee located at 126 NE 2nd St. in Boca. Stock Photos.
WIN GREAT PRIZES FOR ATTENDING
An Array Of Amazing Prizes Can Be Won By Students This Semester By

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

While many universities just offer free admission for students to attend their sporting events, Lynn Athletics steps up its game by offering prizes to students by simply scanning their school ID when attending any event.

A few years ago, the Athletics Department started the Fighting Knights rewards program that offers several types of prizes to students that attend home games.

Each time a student attends a home game, they should stop by the Fighting Knights Marketing tent and check in with their Lynn credentials.

By doing so, the student can begin to rack up points that they can then use to redeem prizes for the student.

“The first time you go to a game, you get a Lynn t-shirt,” said Javier Lopez-Mochon, athletics marketing assistant.

Many students who have been attending this year’s games are already contending for the next few prizes.

When a student hits a certain threshold, they are eligible for the prize correlating to the amount of points earned.

The second prize for this year is a tumbler and already, many students are getting close to winning the reward.

“[At] the end of the year, the people with the most points fight for three prizes, which are a scooter from Boca Scooters, a custom paddle board from Bogaert Boards and a pair of Beats headphones,” said Mochon.

“We try to make [the students] have the best experience [at each game].”

Not only does Lynn offer prizes just for attending the games, but also for participating in halftime activities that take place.

During halftime, students who sign up can try to win a gift card for local restaurants such as Pizza Hut, Duffy’s Sports Grille, Chick Fil-A and Jamba Juice, simply by throwing a ball; the person who gets closest to the sign will win that gift card to that specific location.

“It’s a great activity and [these activities] are the things that college students look forward to while attending sporting events,” said Morgan Garrison, sophomore.

So make a point of attending each sporting event that one can—it might just pay off.

Above: Lynn students support the athletes and fellow classmates by attending a number of different home games and participating in
THE FIGHTING KNIGHT'S HOME GAMES
Simply Attending Home Games To Support Lynn's Fighting Knight's Teams

In a number of various activities to win different types of prizes and have a good time at the Fighting Knight's home games. LU Photos.
Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.
THE POPULARITY OF THE F-WORD
Feminism Is Becoming A Famous Topic Today For Both Men And Women

By LYDIA AMES
Staff Writer

Notorious celebrities such as Beyonce, Taylor Swift, Amy Poehler and Emma Watson all have one thing in common aside from being famous—they openly identify themselves as feminists. In society today, there is more conversation surrounding feminism than ever before, yet studies indicate that only 18 percent of Americans consider themselves feminists.

"I am tired of hearing people say I can't do certain things just because I am a woman," said Colleen Black, freshman. "I am woman and I deserve the same rights and treatment that men get."

Feminism often comes with the connotation of man-hating and bra-burning women who are screaming "down with the patriarchy" at the top of their lungs. And while that may be an explicit perversion of feminism, it is not the average sort that exists this year.

In September 2014, actress Emma Watson gave a speech to the United Nations about feminism as an issue for everyone. "For the record, feminism by definition is: 'The belief that men and women should have equal rights and opportunities. It is the theory of the political, economic and social equality of the sexes.'"

In this day and age, most people who consider themselves feminists strive merely to be given the same voice and same opportunities regardless of their gender.

"The only difference between men and women are the biological ins and outs," said Black. "But when it comes to the workplace or school, we should be equal. Women are just as great and powerful as men."

Feminism is equally an important topic for men as well. Because it has "fern" in it, most people do not understand that striving for equality between the sexes benefits members of both. One of the things males are taught at a young age is that they have to be tough and that emotions make them in some way weak or inferior. On the other hand, females are told it is completely okay to talk about their feelings and to express themselves through behaviors such as crying. Feminists would like to change that and offer equality for all.

"Feminism is a step toward a more equal society where men and women are valued the same way," said Black.

While the Federal Communications Commission will not censor this harmless "f-word" when celebrities utter it on live broadcast, the controversy surrounding it might otherwise lead one to believe it should be.
Download our app
It’s free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

MEET THE iPULSE STAFF

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill

Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez

Web Editor
Barbara Calixte

Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan

Editorial Support
GraceAnne Trumpfeller

Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Gioia Sacco

Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames
Tyler Babcock

Video Editor
Corey Capel
Chris Daniels

Video Support
Christian Freelinghuyzen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Pelzer

Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido

Artistic Director
Amanda Butterfield

Graphic Support
Valeria Figueroa

Esther Mendoza

Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez

Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayala
Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabetta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Steele Henrikson
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghella
Dea Pero
Ashley Persaud

Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pisan
Briana Randall
Denisae Rodriguez
Adonis Salcido
Mark Snellman
Kaely Tomeru
Alex Turner
Matt Wiltz
James Williams
Stephanie Wooshin

Graduate Support
Kevin Studer

Faculty Support
Timea Varga
Andrew Verme

Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
MEET LYNN'S NEW PULSE AGENCY

EXCLUSIVE:

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF BRIAN BOWSER
GENERAL MANAGER OF LYNN'S CAFETERIA

ATIBEL ALVAREZ
HER PURSUIT OF EDUCATION

By Seth Lovely
Life at Lynn

FEELING BALANCED WITH LOKAI
The Psychology Of Having The World’s Two Extremities On A Wrist

By SETH LOVELY
Staff Writer

What if it was possible to have a part of the lowest and highest points on the Earth wrapped around one’s wrist, leaving one’s arm in the middle of them both?

A company has made that possible, and their name is Lokai. The Lokai Bracelet is a bead wrapped band that contains mostly clear beads, but has one black and one white at opposite sides. These two beads contain two very intriguing elements. The white bead contains water from Mount Everest, the highest point on Earth, and the black holds mud from the lowest point on Earth, the Dead Sea.

In addition to the bracelet being extremely attractive, it supposedly gives off an energy that Lokai sums up in the company’s slogan: “Sometimes you’re on top, stay humble. Sometimes you’ve hit a low, stay hopeful,” says founder Steven Izen on the website where he posts his story on how he founded Lokai.

“A few years ago, I found myself going through a large amount of sadness over my grandfather who had recently been diagnosed with Alzheimer’s. The black bead of the Lokai bracelet holds mud from the Dead Sea to represent this moment, when I felt at my lowest point,” said Izen. “Yet at the same time I was struck by a feeling of immense gratitude for where I was in my life. The white bead of the Lokai bracelet carries water from Mount Everest to represent this moment, when I felt like I was on top of the world...I hope that Lokai will remind you to stay balanced and centered along your journey.”

Lokai’s main message is that giving brings balance, so they donate 10 percent of sales to charitable causes. In a short amount of time, Lokai has already created numerous connections with important charities all around the globe. For some of these charities, Lokai has released limited edition bracelets that incorporate different colors depending on the foundation.

Working in conjunction with organizations such as the World Wild Life foundation and Charity: Water, Lokai has produced both camouflage and blue bracelets to help support.

Most recently, Lokai has teamed up with the Susan G. Komen foundation which is the largest breast cancer awareness group in the world. With a pink-beaded bracelet that connects around the wrist, Lokai is now donating $1 of each sale with a minimum donation of $250,000 per rack.

With all of the great things Lokai has been doing for these charities, they have gained quite the following. With about one million Instagram followers, Lokai has built a charity of its own that helps numerous organizations all around the world.

Purchasing one of these bracelets not only amplifies one’s wrist game, but also helps to support a great handful of charities.

So go ahead and get some new wrist candy to show off. As they like to say, make sure to #LiveLokai.

Above: Campus life can use more balance. Staff Photo/ S. Lovely.
Profile

THE ROAD TO FINDING A PASSION
A Senior Shares Her Love And Passion For Majoring In Education

By VICTORIA DE LA CRUZ
Staff Writer

Lynn is known for having many exceptional students who go above and beyond their studies. One of these students is Atibel Alvarez, graduate student.

Alvarez, originally from Casa de Campo, Dominican Republic, grew up playing tennis and enjoying the beautiful Dominican weather close to the sea.

Since a very young age, Alvarez has always had the drive for helping a noble cause.

"Since I was a little girl, I have developed a passion for helping and working with people with disabilities and learning differences," said Alvarez.

When she arrived to Lynn, Alvarez chose to get heavily involved in the university. She especially had her mind set on working with individuals who have special needs, which was something that she realized that she was passionate about in high school.

"In my junior year of high school, I tutored an 8-year-old girl and then realized that I also had a passion for teaching," said Alvarez.

Alvarez is taking her passion to another level in hopes of making a solid career out of it. She graduated in May with a degree in Exceptional Student Education (ESE) and a minor in psychology.

Alvarez not only enjoys helping others, but serving as a great leader wherever she goes.

At Lynn, Alvarez was very involved with the community throughout the past four years. She worked as a tutor for Project Access, was an activity coordinator and member of Best Buddies, a resident assistant and a student ambassador for the office of admissions as tele-counselor and tour guide.

Alvarez has continued her studies in ESE while also working for the office of admissions as a graduate assistant. She feels greatly honored by the school for accepting her into the position.

Alvarez will soon become a Lynn alumna, but she has a simple, yet important, piece of advice for her fellow students.

"Get involved as much as possible in your college life," said Alvarez. "This will bring you many good things like lasting friendships. Always have an open mind and an open heart."
THE FIRST LOOK INTO LYNN'S NEW

Lynn's Student-Run Public Relations Agency Will Be Handling Real Client

By SETH LOVELY
Staff Writer

A new and exciting student-run organization is now on campus that very few Lynn attendees know about.

Professor Gary Carlin's COM 342 Advertising Management class is taking on a new role this year as a student-run advertising and public relations group, Pulse Agency, that handles real clients along with real money. The agency is also a club that meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10 a.m. every single week.

Pulse Agency is a branch of iPulse, currently selling advertising space on periodical printed editions. The team has also taken on just about any PR and advertising real client demands that come their way.

"Modeled after the success of iPulse, we are using real job titles and running it like a real advertising agency," said Carlin.

In Pulse Agency, all students are given the opportunity to choose a role that best suites them. They also must provide an explanation for why they are the best fit for their desired position.

"It empowers students to have real job titles inside of a class," said Carlin.

The positions within Pulse Agency include a graphics director, web master, account manager, advertising sales manager, social media director, strategy and research director and a video production manager - all of which are roles that would be used in any advertising and PR agency.

"I'm hoping to see myself somewhere up in the food chain directing the team because I know I'm capable and willing to orchestrate difficult tasks," said Calvin Jordan, junior. "I feel like starting my own PR and communications firm is exactly what I want to do after college anyway, so for me, this is kind of the perfect 'test drive' experience."

Students are gaining real world experience through Pulse Agency by creating press releases, organizing events, developing logos and successfully executing social media posts.
PULSE AGENCY CLASS AND CLUB

And Money, Giving Them Real World Job Experience Before Graduation

With real world experience being so important upon graduation, Pulse Agency is helping students get an idea of what they like and dislike by working with real clients and material to create something that excites each party.

Pulse Agency has already taken on a few clients, two of which are posting advertisements in the iPulse. One being the South Florida Tri-Rail, which travels all the way from West Palm Beach to Miami. Their advertisement promotes the 50 percent student discount that they offer.

Another client is Robert Reich, assistant professor in the College of Business and Management.

Reich is hosting an event on campus for the Academy of Business Research (ABR) and International Organization of Social Sciences and Behavioral Research (IOSSBR). Reich came to Pulse Agency with a proposal for a themed logo for the event that could be used on programs as well as commemorative t-shirts. The event is hoped to draw more than 100 attendees.

With Pulse Agency being tied to the iPulse periodical, students can use both of these classes to not only get credits, but also gain practical experience within the communication field that can help benefit them for future jobs.

For those students who are not currently enrolled in the COM 342 class, it is open for all participants to join.

This is the start to a successfully agency that will push students to further their involvement and experiences.
The Mastermind of Lynn Dinning

A Day In The Life Of General Manager Brian Bowser Of The Dining Commons

By HAUWA INDIMI
Staff Writer

General Manager of Sodexo in the Elmore Dining Commons Brian Bowser is a leading provider of Quality Of Life Service in the U.S. who has helped craft its proposal to partner up with Lynn by providing its professional dining and catering services.

Since the summer of 2013, Bowser has been a great asset to the Lynn community. He makes sure that the dining experience is much more than merely satisfactory.

Bowser, originally from Virginia, has a nomadic family background. Traveling has always been an all-time activity. By the time he was seven, Bowser had already moved to 11 different places.

Having started in Virginia, he grew up in Ohio and later attended college at Sullivan University in Louisville, KY, where he earned a degree in culinary arts and business management.

Since then, Bowser has gained an ample amount of work experience in a field so dear to his heart. From fine dining to independent bistros, to country clubs to eventually owning personal businesses, Bowser is experiencing it all.

"We have a rule in my family," said Bowser. "If you don't cook, you have to do clean up afterwards and I hated doing the dishes. So, I knew at 13 that if I helped my mother cook, I won't have to clean up afterwards. I knew that if I can cook and if I can cook well, I will always have a job and I will always be able to eat."

With a degree in culinary arts in his possession, he highlighted that his signature dish is roasted salmon over a bed of Israeli couscous tossed with marinated artichokes, arugula and sun-dried tomatoes.

His second favorite dish is a well-cooked macaroni and cheese.

"It's so dirty, it's good," said Bowser.

At work, he still works in the kitchen, tastes the food and guides the staff, so that the food hits the taste buds just right.

Bowser has an interesting way of being on top of his work. He said the secret behind being a good manager is by walking around.

"You can't wait for customers to come to you," said Bowser. "You go to them."

This is why majority of students see him perambulating the rows of the cafeteria at meal times.

"I won't rest until Lynn is recognized as one of the best culinary and dining service programs in the country; not just for Sodexo, but overall," said Bowser.

However, one of the challenges for the dining team is that a huge part of the Lynn population is international.

"You have to bring authenticity to what you do," said Bowser. "If you are going to call something curry from India, it has to have authentic flavor. It needs to have the look, the taste and the texture because you will get called out on that."

Bowser believes that having a variety of options available in the dining commons will surely satisfy the customers.

70 percent of the produce they use is organic.

"It's fresh, it's local [and] it's from 40 to 45 miles away," said Bowser.

With a large amount of experience under his belt, Bowser is grateful for everything that has come his way.

"I count everyday as a blessing," said Bowser. "I get to do what I love for a company that I enjoy working for and I can't think of a better home to be in than Lynn. So much that I am going to be an alumni."

Bowser has enrolled in the masters program here at Lynn for hospitality management this fall to further extend his career and education.
Athletics

COLE KEEPS SCORING FOR LYNN
Sophomore Donish Cole Is On Fire With The Women’s Soccer Team

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

After previously being red-shirted on the Women’s Soccer team, Donish Cole, sophomore, is more than thrilled to be back and to play the sport that she loves and continues to make headlines for the team.

Originally from New York, Cole lived in Jamaica before moving to Florida, where she was raised for most of her life.

At 4 years old, Cole was introduced to soccer by her father. Instantly, her passion for soccer began to flourish.

“I started playing U-10 when I was 6 years old,” said Cole. “When I became a teenager, I started playing on [the men’s] teams because I wanted a challenge and I was always tiny and skinny, so I needed to learn how to play faster and how to be more physical, just so when I played with girls, I wouldn’t get shoved and bounced around.”

Those boys did their jobs and surely toughened Cole up to be prepared for the game that she plays today while in college.

“College soccer is more intense and harder than high school soccer just because in college, it’s more of a big deal,” said Cole. “In high school you would have players that weren’t as good as others, but in college, you can bet that [the] majority of everyone on the team is good and passionate about soccer.”

The passion that Cole has for soccer is exemplified by the fact that she has been making headlines for the Women’s Soccer team.

“I’ve scored in every game since the PBA game,” said Cole. “The goals I have scored have been goals that ended up allowing us to get back into the game.”

Cole is pleased to be considered as a powerful player for the team and is looking forward to playing hard with her teammates.

As far as her aspirations for the team go, Cole seems to be heading down the right path.

“My goal this year is to be the lead goal scorer on the team and for my team to finish in the top five of the conference and be ranked regionally.”

Cole will continue to try improve her skill sets every game that she plays in and hopes to stay consistent for the Fighting Knights.

Above: Cole performs at different games with her teammates proudly representing. LU Photos.
OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS
Career Connections Gears Up For Annual Internship Fair

By Seth Lovely

Exclusive:
WALKER BOWS OUT OF GOP RACE
A Governor Announces He Is No Longer Running
LYNN’S NEWEST CATHOLIC CLUB
Many Students Join Forces To Strengthen Their Faith All Together

By LAURA GARRIDO
Advertising Manager

The well-being of students is important to the Lynn community in every aspect of life.

Many spiritual traditions encourage participation in a community. Spiritual fellowship, such as attending church or a meditation group, can be sources of social support systems by providing a sense of belonging, security and community.

This is why Johanna Jimenez, sophomore and co-president of the Catholic Knights club (L.U.C.K) at Lynn, took the initiative to let students know the main goals of L.U.C.K.

"Of course the main goal of the club is to connect with the Catholic community on campus," said Jimenez.

"As well as providing events and social meetings to the Catholic community at Lynn to unify and embrace our religion."

Many hope that this new movement will be beneficial to those students who want to embrace a spiritual life.

“Our ultimate goal is to invite all people at Lynn, whatever their social or cultural background is, to hear the message of salvation in Jesus Christ so they may come to join us in the fullness of the Catholic faith,” said Carolina Bucio, sophomore.

“One of the purposes of L.U.C.K. is to have an active Catholic community were the members can share their ideas, thoughts and beliefs. Also supporting voluntary activities,” said Marcela Coronell sophomore and co-president of L.U.C.K.

Coronell quotes a popular quote from the Bible, “then the king said to the man of God, ‘Come home with me and refresh yourself, and I will give you a reward.’” Kings 13:7. Coronell continues setting forth that God wants his followers to get to know him.

Whatever one’s source of strength is, drawing closer to it will only make each person stronger in every aspect of his or her own life. The Catholic Knights invites all students to give it a chance and to embrace this opportunity.
Food and Dining

M.E.A.T. BRINGS FLAVOR TO BOCA
The Restaurant Has Made Its Way From The Keys To Palm Beach

Above: The restaurant that is well-known for its burgers is becoming a crowd favorite to both Boca locals and students. Stock Photos.

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

It all starts at mile marker number 88 in the Florida Keys: M.E.A.T. Eatery and Taproom was built to present a whole new twist on the typical burger joint. This year, M.E.A.T. Eatery was named the number one burger place in Florida. Fun fact, they also makes their own bacon, sausage, ice cream, ketchup and mustard from scratch.

Arriving in Boca more than a year ago, the M.E.A.T. Eatery team takes all of the same pride and joy in their work as they do in their location in the Keys. "It's not your typical restaurant," said Max Johnson, senior. "When you arrive, you order from the counter and they bring you your food to your table. It creates a more relaxed feel."

The dining area of the restaurant is very different. There are huge booths with comfy colorful pillows. It makes their customers feel like they are right at home. "Many people don't know about them because it is inside of a business building kind of tucked away and hard to see," said Mike Visnick, senior. "It is something you have to go and find. It will be well worth it."

M.E.A.T Eatery does not only offer burgers. They sell a variety of different wings, soups, salads, breakfast sandwiches, corn on the cob and their most famous, duck fat fried french fries. The staff is small, but each employee is extremely kind. "It is the perfect place to go out to dinner with your friends and just spend hours laughing and enjoying yourself," said Madeline Fryburg, senior. "It is a hidden gem in Boca."

The next time someone is craving a burger or a milkshake, or just want to try something new, visit M.E.A.T Eatery and Taproom located at 980 Federal Highway.

There is always something new brewing at M.E.A.T Eatery.
WHEN OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS, LYNN

The Hannifan Center For Career Connections Prepares To Host Their Annual Internship Fair

Above: The annual internship fair gives students the opportunity to put themselves out there in search of a brighter future. LU Photos.

By SETH LOVELY
Staff Writer

After students graduate, it seems as if they suddenly stop in their tracks when employers ask for college graduates with one to two years of experience. These employers are not kidding and it continues to be a huge problem for graduates. Lynn has taken notice to this issue and has created a way for students to gain the necessary experience for the workforce with great opportunities.

On Nov. 3, the Career Connections Center is hosting their annual internship fair with more than 50 employers attending. Representatives from organizations such as the Miami Heat, The Hilton, ESPN and Zimmerman Advertising and many more will be in attendance.

“Getting an internship is very important,” said Anne Marie Van Casteren, alumna and coordinator for programming and student engagement at Career Connections Center. “It’s great to get your degree, but employers want to see experience. You become more marketable.”

The process of landing an internship is very daunting, but through the Career Connections Center, students are now able to properly prepare.

“Students may be scared to take that initiative and that first step through the door, but as soon as they come in and show us that they are serious about doing this, we will help them from start to finish with building their resume to preparing for the final interview,” said Van Casteren. “We will be there to coach them and help them land a really cool opportunity.”

The Career Connections Center also hosts a mini boot-camp prior to the internship fair, in which, students go through a series of different stations. One being a resume helper, an interview session and even a wardrobe stylist.

The Career Connections Center gives students the
STUDENTS WILL ANSWER THE DOOR
Annual Internship Fair To Allow Students A Chance To Succeed Right Now

Above: Last year, many students siezed the opportunity and went to the internship fair in search of various internships and jobs. LU Photos.

By students applying for internships early, they gain an incredible number of knowledge not only through numerous opportunities, but because they get to figure out what they like and dislike before starting a career in their particular field. Perhaps hospitality is what a student likes in the classroom, but when he or she start working in the field, he or she may strongly start to dislike it. By getting a jump start on work experience, students have the opportunity to work through all of their likes and dislikes.

"We are hoping to have 300 students attend the internship fair," said Van Casteren.

She also believes that the Career Connections Center has hopes for about 350 students to be enrolled in internships throughout this year.

In order to attend the internship fair, students must register through the Career Connections Center. When doing so, the student will receive a full list of all of the employers who will be attending.

It is important to know that students should not go into the internship fair blind-folded. Make sure to do some research on the many organizations prior to attending. It should also be noted that business attire is mandatory upon check-in.
How To

HOW TO: DESIGN A CHEAP COSTUME
A Guide On Getting Ghoulish For This Upcoming Halloween Season

By DEA PERO
Staff Writer

With Halloween right around the corner, the pressure of finding the right costume for a reasonable price is on.

With just a few easy tips, one can create the perfect Halloween costume. Do-it-yourself costumes are a great way to be original and have fun while doing it.

Some may think that making their own Halloween costume can be quite costly, but if one keeps in mind these few simple tips, he or she might just actually save themselves some money. Instead of going to a costly Halloween store, one can go to their local thrift shop to find creative pieces that they can use for their costume.

Thrift shops will have vintage clothing that can be used for dressing up in different time eras. Such as the 20s and the 50s. This is a fun way to create a costume because it will be a one-of-a-kind look that no one else will have.

Another way to create one's own costume is by using their basic pieces of clothing that already exist in their closet. Sometimes the clothing itself is not the most important part to one's getup. Using certain accessories or even doing one's hair or makeup a certain way, can be the key to the perfect costume.

"This year I am going to make my own mermaid costume for Halloween," said Sara McAveney, junior. "I love making my own Halloween costumes, that way I get to be creative and no one else will have my costume."

There are a variety of different hair and makeup tutorials that people can find on Pinterest or YouTube. An example of a creative kind of costume is a sugar skull. This costume only requires black clothing, a flower headband and face paint.

One can also use certain printed clothing to make a costume, such as floral prints to create a hippie look. Using one's own clothing is also an easy way to dress up as celebrities. If so, one may need to purchase a wig.

"I would rather make my own costume because you can mix and match what you already own with new items that you can use again," said McAveney.

There are plenty of fun alternative ways to make Halloween costumes unique. Spending a lot of money on one's Halloween costume is not always necessary. Being creative and crafty is half the fun of dressing up for Halloween.

Above: Making a costume for the spookiest night of the year is easier than one thinks if they just start with a general idea. Stock Photos.
WALKER IS NO LONGER RUNNING
The Wisconsin Governor Is the First to Bow Out Of the GOP Race

By DYLAN PETIT-JACQUES
Staff Writer

Current Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker has announced that he would step out of the GOP presidential race in order to “clear the field in this race so that a positive, conservative message can rise to the top of the field,” according to CNN.

Walker also wants other GOP nominees to follow in his footsteps and clear the field as well.

“I encourage other Republican presidential candidates to consider doing the same so that the voters can focus on a limited number of candidates who can offer a positive, conservative alternative to the current front-runner,” said Walker to CNN when referring to Donald Trump.

Walker is not the first GOP presidential candidate to drop out of the race. Former Governor of Texas Rick Perry has also recently dropped out of the race due to his lack of funding from GOP donors and failure to capture the attention of republican voters.

Many question, who else may follow in their footsteps?

Trump and Ben Carson are currently the top two in the GOP race as they have both run impressive campaigns that have captured the attention of conservatives. Nominees such as Lindsey Graham, George Pataki and Jim Gilmore have failed to even receive a percentage point from conservatives. This is due to their poor performances in recent debates.

The next batch of republicans who arguably should consider dropping out of the race in the next few months are Senator Ted Cruz, Senator Rand Paul, Governor Chris Christie, former Governor Mike Huckabee, former Senator Rick Santorum and Governor Bobby Jindal. All six of these nominees are polling at just five percent and it is highly unlikely that they will rise in the polls due to high number of nominees running in this race.

If the GOP wants to win the presidential election in 2016, they have to make the field smaller in order for republican voters to focus on a few nominees as opposed to 15. There is still five months until the first republican primary in Iowa, but in order to select the right candidate, those outside of the top six should also be encouraged to clear the field as well.
WELCOME TO LYNN'S NEWEST INTRAMURAL FIELD

BY CHRISTINA DIABO

EXCLUSIVE:
WHEN PR CAMPAIGNS GO TOO FAR

BOCA'S NEWEST CAFÉ:
APURA JUICERY AND COFFEESHOP
With The Presidential Election Coming Up, Students Ask Tough Questions

By STEPHANIE WOLOSHIN
Staff Writer

College students may often disregard political parties who are trying to attract voters. However, the ideas and values of college students should be taken into careful consideration due to their ability to change the poll results.

It is important for the concerns of young adults to be addressed. These individuals will be the people who will change and affect society in years to come, so it is the responsibility of politicians seeking election to be inclusive and fair, regardless of a person’s youth.

"Our politicians need to focus on our economic state and relate more to the younger generation," said Krissy Ortiz, freshman. "Currently, our country is in a deficit. I am concerned because in the future, I will have to pay for the mistakes our current politicians have made. Politicians need to start connecting with the younger generation."

In the progressive world of today, it is shocking how the younger generation is unfairly judged based upon age. By the time these new voters reach a mature age, the decisions made by their parent’s generation will be their reality.

"As an international student, I think politicians should talk about immigration reform," said Rocio Carreno, freshman.

Young voters have a different perspective about this country and the direction it is heading. Therefore, the influence of the youth can shape an interesting political renaissance.

"I would love if politicians addressed safety concerns for college students in the schools and their security," said Dianne Goldsher, freshman.

Sadly, college age students feel their votes are useless and not taken seriously by the older generation who runs this country. This is due to the lack of effort exerted from the two dominant political parties in regards to connecting with young voters.

"I think to me as an international student, it will be important for politicians to talk about what’s happening in Syria if there’s going to be a war or not," said Lea Himpens, freshman.

Above: The rapid use of social media over the years has changed the way Americans interact with politicians. Staff Photo/ S. Woloshin.
APURA JUICERY AND COFFEEHOUSE
Boca’s Newest Health Café Brings Healthy Options And Smiles To Community

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

Apura Juicery and Coffeehouse is a health-based café located in Boca on the Southwest corner of Palmetto and Powerline. Their delicious menu varies from cold press juices to vegan sushi and acai bowls, including a variety of other options.

Although juice bars are on the rise and continue to become more popular in the area, there is something unique and different about Apura that makes it stick out from the other juice bars in the area.

“When you walk into Apura, you are always greeted with a warm welcome and a smiling face,” said Bridget Lord, senior. “And their juice is the best I’ve ever tasted.”

In November, Apura will reach its one year anniversary, but its perfect ambience will make those who visit the café think that it has been open for a very long time.

It is no surprise that the phrase, “made with intention,” is written on the back of each staff member’s shirt. Apura is a company that truly aims to help benefit the local community. After a meal at Apura, visitors are sure to feel ready to take on any challenge the day might bring.

“If you aren’t sure if you will like something, just ask for a sample,” said Brooke Mackey, graduate student. “They are so cool about giving you a little sample of whatever you want to try.”

The Apura menu gives people the opportunity to try things that they normally would not have the opportunity to sample.

“When I went there, I had a bistro burger made out of beets,” said Stephanie Leighty, senior. “I was very skeptical at first but it ended up being amazing.”

For those times when students find themselves stressed from studying for too long, experiencing writer’s block in the middle of an essay or just need a break from the hectic college lifestyle, they should consider visiting Apura Juicery and Coffeehouse. This place will sure get one’s juices flowing.
Cover

CAMPUS ENJOYS NEW MARY ANN AND

Lynn Students Can Now Enjoy A Sports Field Where They Can Play Various

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

The dedication of the Mary Ann and Harold Perper Intramural Field was held just in time for the flag football team to stomp the fresh grounds.

Lynn has named the intramural field after the Perper family in recognition of their continued generosity and kind donations.

Not only have the Perpers given students a chance to play club sports on a brand new field, but they are supporting Lynn's 2020 master plan that includes new residence halls and other exciting improvements to campus.

"Intramural flag football is basically a friendly game of kids that either played football in high school, in college or just enjoy the game, and want to come out and play," said Karla Rosario, sophomore.

All students can participate in a friendly game of flag football every Monday and Wednesday night on the intramural field under the lights, which all students are encouraged to participate in.

Like traditional football games, the six teams play on a schedule with a set of seeds and continue onto the playoffs.

Since the new addition of the scoreboard and lights, the teams are happily continuing to play and have fun after the sun goes down.

"The lights are a lot better and the fact that we are playing on a bigger field has its ups and downs, but overall it's great," said Alex Embree, sophomore.

Embree and his group of friends created their team

Above: Students now have the opportunity to play club sports in the recently dedicated Mary Ann and Harold Perper Intramural Field
HAROLD PERPER INTRAMURAL FIELD

Games Together, All Thanks To The Generosity of Mary Ann And Harold Perper

last year and have thoroughly enjoyed playing football together while still being competitive.
"It's a lot of fun especially since I never got to play football competitively," said Alex Rogoff, sophomore. "It allows me to really understand the concept of the game."

Campus Recreation has a sign-up sheet for students who are interested in signing up.
The creation of this field would not have been possible without the gracious support from the Perper family.

"Intramural flag football is basically a friendly game of kids that... just enjoy the game and want to come out and play," - Karla Rosario, sophomore that will provide a space for students to participate in many different sports and other exciting athletic events on a regular basis. LU Photos.

WHEN PR CAMPAIGNS GO TOO FAR
“Call of Duty” Latest Marketing Campaign Raises Ethical Questions

By BRIAN MARTIN
Copy Support

When it comes to marketing the upcoming release of a movie, television show or video games, marketing tactics can be a great hit or major miss with their audiences.

Recently, the “Call of Duty” marketing team created a fake terrorist attack on Twitter in a failed attempt to promote the upcoming game, “Call of Duty: Black Ops III.”

The latest entry in the long-running franchise is set in a dark, distant future where soldiers have been augmented with cybernetics and must go on many covert operations around the world.

The marketing campaign consisted of changing the “Call of Duty” Twitter page to a fake news outlet without mentioning any warning. The campaign then included breaking news of a terrorist attack in Singapore, with no disclosing statement to the public that this was not real.

Instead, it was designed to give fans a sneak peek of the world in which the game is set in. However at the time of the announcement, this was not evident. The PR stunt was met with a large number of criticism because it was too realistic and could have caused a public panic. Fans and other online users were outraged that the marketing team would even perform a campaign such as this.

“Although many video games are known for... pushing the envelope, I think this marketing campaign went too far.”

- Professor Gary Carlin

Gary Carlin felt that creating fake stories about a terrorist threat was not the right move.

“Many people read things on social media and believe it’s true,” said Carlin. “Spreading false news is never a good idea.”

Other tactics could have been employed that might have resulted in a better outcome from the marketing stunt. Carlin thought it would have been best for the PR to utilize a better method in delivering their message.

“I applaud their creativity,” said Carlin. “However, there are other ways to get your message out without alarming people. Perhaps a better approach would be to focus on game reviewers with this campaign.”

Another idea that could prevent this marketing stunt from being a failure would be if the PR team could come up with different ideas about how to execute the campaign.

“I don’t know the specifics of the game, but I would direct my PR team to come up with several alternatives based on the uniqueness of the game,” said Carlin. “The next step would be evaluating these alternatives and picking the winning PR campaign that would gain attention, but not literally scare people.”

With the marketing for “Call of Duty: Black Ops III” being criticized for how threatening it was, it would seem that coming up with another way of marketing the game might have been more effective. Hopefully, the marketing team has learned from this failure and will remember what tactics to avoid in order to promote their next video game in the future.
Ride Tri-Rail to campus and save some green.

Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.

TRI RAIL
Part of the South Florida Regional Transportation Authority
1-800-TRI-RAIL • www.tri-rail.com
INTERVIEW WITH FASHION BLOGGER
MADISON LANE

LYNN'S NEW ORGANIC STAND
EATING & LIVING HEALTHY
Entertainment

'MR.' IS THE EASIEST NEW MUSIC APP
With A Sleek Design And No Advertisements, Mr. Allows Free Streaming

By JAMES WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Music Radio (Mr.) is an innovative radio streaming application that allows users to create music stations based on how they are feeling or what they are doing, without constant advertisements or complex playlist arrangements.

Mr. was created by Shellanoo Group. Shellanoo Group is known for creating an Israeli application, Music Messenger, which was the first music streaming application to allow users to send music back and forth to one another. The man behind Shellanoo Group is Japanese-Israeli Internet entrepreneur, Oded David Kobo.

The Shellanoo Group has been working on this particular project for quite some time. The company has gained some very prominent investors from across the globe, including famous musicians such as Avicii, Will.i.am and Nicki Minaj.

Although Mr. is not the first app to utilize the idea of being able to stream music depending on the user's mood or activity, what is interesting is that it is promising it will remain free of charge without advertisements.

One of the most appealing aspects of this service is how user friendly and easy it is to use. Mr. does not confuse listeners with an overly complicated system like many other streaming services.

"I really like how quickly this app allows me to listen to music instead of asking me so many questions," said Amber Williams, senior.

Although there is no official business plan on how Mr. is going to generate revenue without advertisements or making users pay, the app seems to be gaining more popularity each day. Music Messenger has been making Shellanoo group money through third-party advertisements and applications for a couple of years, so Mr. does not seem to be in any danger of bankrupting the company.

Micah Nesson, junior, downloaded the application to test its effectiveness and found it user friendly.

"I can see this app becoming bigger than Pandora or even Songza in the near future," said Nesson. "I just hope they stick to their promises on being one hundred percent free without any ads."

If students are looking for a music streaming service that will not bombard them with advertisements or siphon funds from their wallets, Mr. might be just the answer to their prayers.
LYNN’S NEW ALL-ORGANIC STAND
Eating And Living Consciously Is Easy Thanks To The Dining Commons

By LAURA GARRIDO
Staff Writer

Many students aim to maintain a healthy way of living throughout their time in college.

Exercising, staying hydrated, maintaining a regular sleeping schedule and eating fresh foods all provide a variety of different benefits by keeping the body lively and energized.

Sodexo now offers another way for students, faculty and staff to maintain a healthy diet while eating in the Elmore Dining Commons.

Local, organic and non-genetically modified organism (GMO) products are now available in the dining commons. Everything is sourced within the state and within a 100-mile radius of campus. Courtesy of environmentally and animal-friendly farms, the Lynn community can now benefit from organic foods.

“This semester, I wanted to start a healthy diet and organic food has definitely helped me during my process,” said Karla Rosario, sophomore. “I genuinely love it.”

“We made a commitment that 75 percent of all the products on the salad bars have to be local and organic products, as well as all of the fruit that we serve,” said Brian Bowser, general manager of Sodexo at Lynn. “So it’s really about not only being aware of what we are eating, but where it’s coming from and how it’s being sourced.”

Many students are extremely excited about all of these brand new changes within the dining commons.

“I have always wanted to maintain a healthy diet,” said Jennifer Ayala, sophomore. “I find myself rushing here and there because of my tight schedule, but now that I have the organic option, it saves me so much time and I don’t have to worry about the ingredients they cook my food with.”

The main goal of the dining commons staff members is to offer the best quality food to their consumers.

“Let’s work with the best ingredients we possibly can for our students and our faculty as part of our job is making sure we educate the people that are coming in,” said Bowser. “You are not putting those extra preservatives or pesticides in the food. Anything that would sustain the life of a product, you are not putting all those into your body.”

So join the movement and go organic. One might just end up loving what they find.

Above: Shelves full of fresh bananas and apples sit next to organic plum tomatoes from Alderman farms in Boynton Beach, FL. LU Photos.
The love of fashion and photography inspired Lynn sophomore Maddy White to create her very own style blog. Since then, her blog has built up a large following base with thousands of fans on social media who eagerly await her every post.

White's blog is about her daily outfits, fashion and beauty tips she has to offer and other lifestyle choices. With such a distinctive and unique style that makes her stand out in the online community. It is no surprise that many people enjoy her daily posts. She inspires others with her outfit choices, which have drawn in the large audience.

"[My friends] would describe my style as preppy and classic," said White.

While it may appear to be simple, many people are not aware of the challenging aspects of running a blog. Keeping up with the latest fashion trends on a college student budget and finding someone to photograph her is a weekly struggle.

White's dedication and talent has paid off, with major national magazines featuring her in their publications. One of her most memorable moments in her blogging career was being published in "Seventeen Magazine."

"I posted a photo with a pink bag and I has then tagged my photo and 'Seventeen' saw it. They contacted me and they put me in the magazine," said White. "In the magazine I was just in the article, but then I've been featured on their website like three times and their Instagram twice."

White is a part-time blogger, but she hopes to be able to blog full time after she graduates from Lynn. White is also an athlete at Lynn, playing on the Women's Softball team, and when she is not blogging, she is practicing with her team. She also enjoys shopping with her mother and hanging out with her friends and family.

White finds inspiration from other bloggers, Pinterest, Tumblr and magazines. She also enjoys finding YouTube channels that focus on fashion and lifestyle.

"My favorite magazine is probably either Glamour or InStyle," said White. "I like to watch YouTube channels. 'Vogue' has an amazing channel and doing that is another way for me to get ideas."

Surprising to some is how much money bloggers can make. Often bloggers make money through advertisements on their blogs or through collaborating with companies.

"I do make money, I work..."
Story

AND LYNN STUDENT MADISON LANE

Blogger, Maddy White Regarding Her Fashion Blog “It’s Madison Lane”

with a company called Reward Style and they are a company that work with the top bloggers and this is how all the big bloggers make millions of dollars,” said White.

Although, she enjoys a wide variety of brand names and styles, White’s favorite store is J.Crew and she earns commission for every follower who clicks the link to J. Crew’s website from her blog and purchases something.

Every blogger has a favorite post and a least favorite post. White is no different and spoke about hers.

“My favorite post was my prom dress. I had a BCBG black dress that I loved with these bright pink big earrings,” said White. “I have one [least favorite outfit] from the very beginning. I had this midi black tool kind of skirt.”

White has a number of blogs she follows and is inspired by. Two such bloggers are Rachel Parcell of Pink Peonies and Julia Engel of Gal Meets Glam.

“Both of them are preppy but classic and high fashion at the same time,” said White.

White is now an experienced blogger and has useful advice for someone wishing to start a blog.

“People want to see high quality photos,” said White. “Just keep up with it, because [success] is not going to happen overnight.”

White’s two-year blogging anniversary was on July 26 and she hopes to continue blogging for many years to come. Students can check out White’s blog at www.itsmadisonlane.com. White is also active on Snapchat and Instagram under the username “itsmadisonlane”.

Above: White has been featured many times in popular international magazines, such as Seventeen Magazine. Photos/ itsmadisonlane.com
By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

Being a freshman is hard enough with new surroundings, unfamiliar faces and the numerous amounts of school assignments. Adding a collegiate sport on top of that may seem like a hassle, but freshman Emily Weisberg is coping with the new environment as well as working her way toward the top of the Women's Soccer team.

Originally from Waxhaw, NC, Weisberg has known that she wanted to play collegiate soccer since she was in middle school. When Weisberg came to visit Lynn, she instantly knew that she could see herself growing both academically and athletically here, in addition to creating a connection with the coaching staff and players.

"It was definitely an adjustment from high school and club soccer," said Weisberg. "It's much faster and it's way hotter here, but it's just something to get adjusted to. It's tough at times, but it's all worth it."

Weisberg is fitting in just fine with the Women's Soccer team.

While playing mid-fielder, Weisberg has been named the Sunshine State Conference (SCC) Offensive Player for the week of September 28 for scoring three goals against Barry University, leading the girls to a victory.

During the rival match against Barry, Weisberg landed herself seven points during the game, which is the most for a Women's Soccer player since 2009."It was an honor to be named the SSC player of the week, especially as a freshman," said Weisberg.

Even with the NCAA distinction, Weisberg has made sure to not let the title get to her head.

"I'm really proud to be part of [the] team," said Weisberg. "We are constantly getting better and coming closer to our team goals. For me, my personal goals are to continue to grow and develop as a player."

Just like the rest of her teammates, Weisberg is hoping that this will be the year that the Fighting Knights will win another national title for Women's Soccer.
NO NEED FOR NYC TO SEE A SHOW

The Wick Theatre And Costume Museum Provides A Broadway Experience

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

With a visit to the Wick Theatre and Costume Museum, students can take some time to expand their cultural horizons.

Owned and operated by Marilynn Wick and her daughter, Kimberly, the theatre presents well-known productions, such as "Hello Dolly" and "Peter Pan," as well as smaller scale productions, to audiences of all ages.

The museum is a sight to behold as the collection contains actual Broadway costumes from the past 100 years created by some of the finest designers in the industry. There are $20 million worth of original pieces in their collection, which includes original costumes from award winning shows, such as "Guys and Dolls," "My Fair Lady," "The King and I" and "Titanic," worn by actors like Julie Andrews.

"Boca has its own little piece of Broadway and it is amazing."

"A visit to the Wick Theatre and Costume Museum should definitely be on your bucket list," said Delano Williams, senior. "There is definitely something for everyone."

The Wick Theatre offers viewers the New York City night-on-the-town experience without having to leave Boca.

"When you walk into the Wick Theatre it's all glitz and glamour," said Mike Visnick, Boca resident. "From the beautiful chandeliers to the elegant rugs, it makes you feel like you're a celebrity."

The theatre brings the community together and gives people the opportunity to express themselves through the arts.

"It is amazing that there is so much history kept right here in our city and many people are unaware of it," said Madeline Fryburg, senior.
Lynn’s Literary Magazine, Quest Is Now Accepting Submissions

By ALEXIS WOODYARD

ALSO:
EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW WITH JASON BLUM
INHALE POSITIVITY, EXHALE NEGATIVITY
Students Gather For Nightly Yoga Sessions In Lynn Residence Hall's Studio

By ALEXIS WOODYARD
Staff Writer

From Savasana to Tree Pose, Lynn students and alumni gather daily at 9 p.m. to partake in one of the most relaxing occasions on campus.

Once just a dance studio, Lynn Residence Hall's third floor common room now hosts nightly yoga sessions. The class is taught by Sebastian Castellanos, who has been a yoga instructor for three years.

"It's nice to exercise and meditate at the same time," said Nina Cintron, freshman. "It really helps me destress after a long day."

With only five students for the first session, the class has really expanded with about 15 to 20 eager new faces each day.

The one-hour class is open to anyone on campus, with styles and experience varying from person to person. From the inflexible beginners to the experienced yoga-goers who can bend easily already, the class welcomes all who are interested.

"I've become a lot more flexible and happier," said Kara Stevens, sophomore.

Students can drop in at any time, grab a mat and relax. Unfortunately though, the small studio does not have enough room for everyone, so it's important that those who are interested try to get there early.

"There are usually a ton of people crowding in," said Mariana Vernet, freshman.

If a student yearns for even more serenity, candlelit yoga in the residence hall quad features a natural setting paired with mellow vibes. Students can join their peers and follow the teachings of a guest instructor while enjoying live music at one of Lynn's most rejuvenating classes.

For more information, students can stop by the Campus Recreation Department and ask about all of the details pertaining to not only yoga, but about the many other activities that they put on for the students to get involved.

Above: Students can enjoy practicing yoga, which is a perfect combination of exercise and relaxation. LU Photos.
By AISLING MCENTEGART
Editor-in-Chief

Producer Jason Blum seems to have been involved with every successful horror movie released over the last few years and after a seven-year run with "Paranormal Activity", Blum prepares to terrify fans of the series one last time. Blum and his team have gone all out to ensure "Ghost Dimension" concludes the "Paranormal Activity" series in a memorable manner. For the first time audiences will be able to witness the paranormal and see their appearance. Viewers will also receive the answers to many of the questions that have been on their minds over the last few years.

"There are going to be revelations about Katie, but there are going to be many more revelations about Toby," said Blum.

Blum, the executive producer of the "Paranormal Activity" series has mixed feelings about arriving at the finish line. While Blum is sad to say goodbye to the series, he is also looking forward to more projects that are in the pipeline.

"It's been really fun to work on the ['Paranormal Activity'] movies over the last seven years, but it's also sad that ['Ghost Dimension'] is the last one. It's bitter sweet," said Blum. "It's sad that it's the last one, but there's also a lot of other things that we're doing that I'm excited about. Things that wouldn't exist if it wasn't for 'Paranormal Activity.'"

"Paranormal Activity" has experienced a huge amount of popularity for what was originally a low budget and independently developed film. The level of exposure the original film received even exceeded Blum's expectations.

"We all thought the first movie could be a fun cult success, but not what it turned into. No one thought we would make five more," said Blum. "It's been a very happy surprise."

Audiences may wonder if there is a particular skill set required for actors cast in scary movies. According to Blum, the biggest asset an actor cast in a scary can have is talent.

"A great scary movie actor is a great actor, period. It's very hard to act in a scary movie because you have to be totally petrified of nothing. The sets aren't scary. When watching it, a scary movie isn't scary, unless you really believe that character is scared. The quality of actors in a scary movie is such a crucial thing," said Blum.

Through his own experiences with the paranormal, Blum has mastered the art of conveying scary stories - though it is not an experience he wants to relive anytime soon.

"I saw a ghost once. I was in my early twenties and I was living in an apartment in New York. I was living in a basement and I woke up in the middle of the night," said Blum. "It was holding a child. I don't know if it was a man or a woman, but it was a figure holding a child, staring at me at the end of my bed. It was really weird."

While most moviegoers fear the demonic creatures in scary movies most, Blum explains why it's the ambiguous ghostly presences that are actually the most frightening.

"I think ghosts are scarier than demons. Demons wear their evil on their sleeve. You see a demon, you run. A ghost, you don't know. They could be good or could be bad," said Blum.

For dedicated "Paranormal Activity" films who dreading the conclusion of this series, there is even the possibility that they may see more "Paranormal Activity" movies in the future. Although, Blum states it would have to be in a very different capacity.

"In five years if some amazing film maker that I love comes and says here's a whole new way to approach "Paranormal Activity" that might happen. We have no plans, we're not going out to pursue that. What's special about this movie is that it's the end," said Blum. "Even if it's a huge hit and does a ton of business."

Make sure to see "Paranormal Activity: Ghost Dimension", in theaters now. While viewers may have to sleep with the lights on for a few nights, this blockbuster is a definite must see.

Above: Producer Jason Blum predicts fans are in for a fright watching "Paranormal Activity: Ghost Dimension". Stock Photos.
LYNN'S LITERARY MAGAZINE, QUEST
All Student and Faculty Writers Have The Amazing Opportunity To Have

Submit:
Art & Photos
Comics and Graphic Novels
Poetry and Plays
Short Fiction
Scene Treatments
Digital Media and Design
Videos and Short Films
Fashion Design

All submissions must be original artwork. Email work to bbonincontri@lynn.edu

Call for Submissions: Students, Staff, & Faculty
Deadline: November 9th
IS NOW ACCEPTING SUBMISSIONS
Their Own Original Pieces Published And Featured In Quest This Year

By ALEXIS WOODYARD
Staff Writer

Many students pride themselves on their ability to use their creativity and produce works of art. Whether it be through poetry, drawing, painting, writing, graphic design and more, students can excel through their artwork.

At Lynn, students are pushed to think outside of the box and use their creativity to their advantage. With so many diverse students on campus, creativity is not hard to come by.

“Diversity, creativity and individuality are some of the main foundations of the student body that make up the Lynn community,” said Victoria Alvarez, sophomore. “And with so much talent walking around campus, it only makes sense to put all of this artistry into a single place.”

Although many students have seen iPulse around campus, which features news and editorials of some of Lynn's talented writers, there is another student publication circulating around Lynn. Lynn's literary magazine and arts journal, better known as "Quest" features photos, poetry, plays and more.

Originally starting as a print magazine, Quest has expanded to an iBook format. Going digital not only expands Quest's horizons, but now allows video submissions as well. The iBook first debuted in May 2015 at the Celebration of the Arts.

“Quest” is not exclusive. Any student, staff and faculty member who is interested may submit. Quest is an opportunity for all to showcase their talents and express themselves through many forms. The arts journal allows the Lynn community to not only appreciate the arts, but embrace them as well.

The newest iBook edition of "Quest" will be debuted at the 2016 Celebration of the Arts. For students that wish to have their work published in the literary magazine, all work must be submitted to bbonincontri@lynn.edu by Nov. 9.

Above: Lynn's literary journal, Quest is now accepting written and video submissions for their 2016 edition. Photos/D. Rodriguez.
How To

MEAL PREPPING TO STAY HEALTHY
How To Prepare Meals In Advance To Maintain A Balanced Lifestyle

By DEA PERO
Staff Writer

In order to maintain a healthy lifestyle, planning ahead is crucial. Some may feel planning out every meal is boring, but preparing meals ahead of time can be the exact opposite.

Planning meals at the beginning of the week means that one has more time to think about what exactly they want to eat throughout the week. It will also get rid of the temptation to snack throughout the day.

Eating proper portions will decrease hunger. Having meals ready at hand will help one to decide what goes into their body.

The first step to meal prepping would be making a plan for the week. Make a grocery list and have all the recipes sorted out.

Having good containers to store the food in is important as well. Sectioned containers are easy to work with and help incorporate protein, carbs and vegetables into all meals.

A food scale is important to have in order to portion your meals. When it is time to start cooking, make an assembly line.

Cook all proteins at once to reduce the prep time. Just because one is meal prepping, it does not mean they have to eat grilled chicken and veggies seven days a week.

“I like to measure my food portions so I do not over eat,” said Brittany Fioto, alumni. “Otherwise if you put a big plate of food in front of me, I will eat it all.”

Do not be afraid to switch it up by cooking chicken, turkey or seafood. Keep in mind, if one cooks seafood eat it on the first day in order to prevent food poisoning.

“My favorite healthy meal to eat is grilled chicken and veggies,” said Veronica Hagger, senior. “I also like to drink a protein shake before I work out and before I go to bed as a dinner meal replacement.”

Cooking with colorful vegetables will help make meals not seem so boring. If one sees the same protein with the same green vegetables, meal prepping will grow old fast. If food looks appetizing, it will taste more appetizing as well.

“I like to eat healthy throughout my week so that way on weekends I can really enjoy the foods I love,” said Brian Thibault II, senior.

Eating healthy will lead to a happy, long life. As Benjamin Franklin once said, “failing to prepare is preparing to fail.”

Above: Meal prepping allows for proper portions to be created, especially with containers that hold three sections. Stock Photos.
BUT FIRST, LET'S GRAB A COFFEE
Subculture Cafe In Delray Beach Is A New Hotspot For Coffee Lovers

By CHRISTINA CANARY
Staff Writer

There are a million and one reasons why college students need caffeine. Sometimes students find themselves accidentally watching an entire season of Netflix in one sitting and suddenly it is 4 a.m. and that take home midterm still is not finished. The next day certainly will call for coffee.

In March 2015 Subculture Coffee opened their second location on Atlantic Ave in Delray Beach. A new alternative to Starbucks and Dunkin' Donuts, Subculture is offering a more unique, original and colorful twist to traditional café hangout spots.

"Subculture is my favorite coffee spot," said Brooke Mackey, graduate student. "It's relaxed vibe is like no other."

Located in between Tramonti's and Sazio's, Subculture is open until midnight and they are not just serving up coffee. Also available are wraps, juice, pastries and other beverages. Subculture is a one-stop shop.

A red roaster sits inside of the café where they display in house roasting and bake Subculture beans several days a week.

"My family is big into caffeine so I know the difference between good and bad coffee," said Amanda Daddio, senior. "You can taste that they brew their beans on sight."

Subculture also offers healthy alternatives to whole milk. Almond, coconut and soy milk can be replace in almost any beverage.

"I love walking in there," said Steph Leighty, senior. "They draw on the walls with chalk and have it decorated perfectly."

The ceilings are covered with pictures of people sipping on coffee. There is a wooden bar, marble tables and plenty of outdoor seating for anyone to sit outside and work on homework while sipping a delicious caramel latte.

So the next time one is feeling groggy from staying up way late visit Subculture on Atlantic Ave and see what they have on sale.

Above: If students are looking to venture out and try something new, Subculture Cafe is the perfect place for them. Photo/C. Canary
Download our app
It's free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill
Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez
Web Editor
Barbara Calixte
Erin Soza
Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan
Editorial Support
GraceAnne Trumpfeller
Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Gloia Sacco
Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames
Tyler Babcock
Video Editor
Corey Capel
Chris Daniels
Video Support
Christian Frelinghuysen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Pelzer
Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido
Graphic Support
Alexandria Butterfield
Valeria Figueroa
Esther Mendoza
Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez
Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayala
Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabetta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Steele Henriksen
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghena
Dea Pero
Ashley Persaud
Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pisan
Briana Randall
Denisse Rodriguez
Adonis Salcedo
Mark Snellman
Kaelly Tomeu
Alex Turner
Matt Weltz
James Williams
Stephanie Woloshin
Graduate Support
Kevin Studer
Faculty Support
Tineau Varga
Andrew Vermes
Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
Martin Phillips

A LOOK AT LYNN'S RESIDENT STAR ON THE RISE: ALI FOX
BY BRIANA RANDALL

EXCLUSIVE:
A LOOK AT BOCA'S MORIKAMI GARDENS HOW SOCIAL MEDIA AFFECTS POLITICS
INSIGHTS INTO WORKING IN A JAIL
Danielle Paschall Uses Internship Experience To Choose A Career

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

Born and raised in Boston, MA Danielle Paschall has been playing soccer since she was in eighth grade and has always loved the idea of working with people. Originally, Paschall came to Lynn not only to play for the Woman's Soccer Team, but to also start a career in the criminal justice field.

During her time at Lynn, Paschall has had the opportunity to work in places some students would never dream of. "I first worked for Securitas at the global financial service company State Street," said Paschall. "Here I was a paid intern and worked with fingerprinting, surveillance and basically observed in the main security room which has surveillance cameras for State Street buildings around the world."

The State Street buildings are located in 29 countries that are responsible for protective services. If that was not thrilling enough, Paschall's second internship gave her a chance to step out from behind the desk and into the action. "This past summer I was a paid intern at the Norfolk County Sheriff's department," said Paschall. "It was a jail; however due to the length of sentences and the severity of the crimes it was more like a prison."

Working in a prison, Paschall learned a great deal about working in a prison. She worked in many areas, from the case workers who handled the legal proceedings to the correctional officers, who work directly with the inmates. "In the jail, I mostly observed the case workers and all the legal processes that go on during the time a person is serving time," said Paschall. "Also the efforts that the sheriff has enforced inside and outside of the jail to decrease the percentage of [re]offenders."

One of Paschall's duties also included working with the inmates. Although daunting, Paschall faced the challenge head on and came to terms with the dangerous aspects of the job. "I worked one on one with the inmates in their units," said Paschall. "There was no restraints on them which was a bit intimidating the first week I was there but as time went on this among other seemingly unsafe things became a norm to me."

Although she enjoyed her time working with the Norfolk Police Department and at Securitas, the experiences served to reaffirm her belief that she did not want to work in government or corrections. At Lynn, Paschall made the decision to change her major from criminal justice to communication. Paschall desires from her job than just work. "I want to make my own hours and pay I don't want to just clock in and out everyday," said Paschall. "I want to have the chance to make my own salary by how hard I work and not to be tied down to only what's expected of me."
ENJOY A PIECE OF JAPAN IN BOCA

The Morikami Museum And Japanese Gardens Are A Sight To See

By GRACEANNE TRUMPFELLE
Editorial Support

Even on the busiest street in South Florida, the wildlife seems unlimited. Palm trees, lush greenery and a whole lot of insects and animals can be found everywhere.

Unfortunately for South Florida residents, there is no foolproof way to avoid a stray palm branch getting stuck in between windshield wiper blades, or dodging pesky lizards. However, rest assured that there is, in fact, a way to enjoy all the perks of Floridian wildlife, without all the hassle.

The Morikami Museum and Japanese Gardens offer plenty of natural beauty to keep one entertained, while still having an option to stay out of the endless Florida heat.

"I love the weather in Florida, but sometimes the heat can get too intense," said Alia Buoniello, junior. "The Morikami gardens are beautiful, and I can always stop into the museum itself to cool down and check out the new exhibits."

One does not have to stray far from campus to enjoy this experience. The Morikami Museum and Japanese Gardens, a center for Japanese arts and culture, is located minutes away from Lynn at 4000 Morikami Park Rd, Delray Beach, FL 33446. The museum itself, the Yamato-kan, houses several exhibitions of Japanese art and artifacts throughout the year and is located on its own island. Though exhibits tend to change roughly three times a year, one could discover the origins of the Yamato colony and envision Japan through the museum's two permanent exhibits.

"I've been to the museum multiple times and every time I go, there's something new and exciting," said Sydney Trezza, senior. "The permanent exhibits are fascinating, but I love seeing what's additional exhibits they've added."

Morikami also features six authentic Japanese gardens, totaling up to a mile-long path. Along the way one will take a trip through time. Each garden represents a style unique to the ninth through the 20th centuries, from sprawling greenery to serene rock gardens.

To cool down after a stroll through the gardens, one can enjoy a drink or a delicious lunch at the museum's Cornell Cafe. The Cafe offers a Pan-Asian inspired menu from 11:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Though there is a separate air-conditioned area to dine, there are tables out on the terraces overlooking the gardens.

"The food is so good," said Buoniello. "Their sushi is really fresh tasting and the prices are reasonable."

Guests are also encouraged to stop by Morikami's store, where they sell apparel, jewelry, books and stationary, specialty teas, and home décor. From Oct. 1-31, they are having their Annual Woodstock Chime and Rain Chain Sale, where one can save 15 to 25 percent off various wind chimes of different sizes and styles.

For those interested in Morikami, the museum offers discounted membership to students and educators. To gain student level general membership, there is a fee of $40 and one gains unlimited free admission to the museum and gardens as well as exclusive invitations to members-only receptions and events. Just present student ID at purchase and reap the benefits.
LYNN STUDENT WORKED HARD TO GAIN

Sophomore Ali Fox Continues To Work On Her Growing Music Career After

By BRIANA RANDALL
Staff Writer

It would seem that Lynn has a star on the rise. Ali Fox, sophomore, from Medfield, MA, was recently signed by a small label in New York City over the summer, her first recording contract to date.

Fox is from a small town outside of Boston and has been singing since she was four. Here at Lynn, Fox studies drama and just last year she was offered the opportunity to travel with the rest of the drama department to Dublin, Ireland to perform "Is There Life After High School?"

Now the 19-year-old is working on releasing her first single and EP with popular media management software iTunes and Spotify this coming January.

Although she has been performing almost all of her life, Fox does not recall a specific moment in when she realized that she wanted to dedicate her life to singing.

"There was never really a certain moment where I decided that it was what I wanted to do. It's just my favorite thing to do, there is nothing I love more than performing and singing," said Fox.

Fox plans to finish school and get her degree, while simultaneously continuing to work on her blossoming music career. She hopes to get picked up by a major record label one day.

"I know that's a long way away, so I plan to keep working towards that," said Fox.

Currently, Fox is working with a label where she gets to have professionals help her produce new music. The label has produced The Countess from "The Real Housewives of New York" and has also worked with major artists like the Weeknd, Ashlee Simpson and Ellie Goulding.

With them Fox recorded five songs over the summer, and co-wrote the music with songwriter Elena Goddard. Goddard, a student like Fox, studying at Berklee College of Music in Boston. After recording the songs, Fox's song "Set Me Free" got picked up by Billboard, which she hopes will be the first step in a long career.

She continued to explain that once her single and EP drop around January 2016, she'll be marketed to major labels and agencies, a major step for upcoming artist.

"I still don't really understand the whole thing," Fox said. "It's a whole new world to me."

This whole new world has a lot in store for Fox and through it all she has the love and support of her family. Stay tuned and make sure to keep a close eye on this student's rise to fame.

Above: Ali Fox's singing career is growing everyday. Stock Photos.
Story

RECORDING CONTRACT OVER SUMMER

Releasing Her First Single While Managing To Continue As A Full Time Student

Above: Ali Fox is a very active member of the drama department here at Lynn and preforms on a regular basis. Stock Photos.
Entertainment

THE RISING IMPACT OF SOCIAL MEDIA

How Social Media Platforms Are Changing The Political Landscape

By STEPHANIE WALOSHIN
Staff Writer

Technology has rapidly changed society has transformed the world of politics.

In the modern era, people receive most of their political information through popular social media platforms. Snapchat offers live post events such as the Grand Old Party (GOP) debate and has enabled its viewers to obtain insight into the campaigning process through their live posting in Iowa.

"I use Snapchat’s live story to look for political news. There I can find out things very easily since I use Snapchat all the time. I can just swipe to the right and I have everything," said Sarahlina Castillo, freshman.

Due to the exposure to these candid moments, voters become more informed about their favorite candidates. Similarly, politicians use Twitter as an up to date method of interacting and responding to the ideas and concerns of voters.

"I use Twitter the most for news because I like how you can go and reblog stuff. Twitter is interesting because you can tweet to whoever you want and you can also see who they have on their account," said Betsey Jeffreys, freshmen.

"I like getting news from Twitter because it is usually accurate. It is better than watching it on a TV because it is instant and quick. I think that it makes people more aware because they are always checking social media rather than the newspaper. I think that it is interesting to see what politicians think not only on their own personal social media accounts," said Allyson Miller, freshman.

Above: Both citizens and politicians use social media to reach out to their followers and express their own viewpoints. Stock Photos.
Ride Tri-Rail to campus and save some green.

Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.
Download our app
It's free!

Find us in the app store or scan the QR code

MEET THE iPULSE STAFF

Publishing Editor
Brooke Rudisill
Editors-in-Chief
Aisling McEntegart
Victoria Alvarez
Web Editor
Barbara Calixte
Erin Soza
Assistant Editor
Calvin Jordan
Editorial Support
GraceAnne Trumpfeller
Copy Support
Brian Martin
Kristine Posey
Gioia Sacco
Social Media Editors
Lydia Ames

Tyler Babcock
Video Editor
Corey Capel
Chris Daniels
Video Support
Christian Frelinghuysen
Michael Oldaker
Stephen Pelzer
Advertising Manager
Laura Garrido
Graphic Support
Alexandria Butterfield
Valeria Figueroa
Esther Mendoza
Photographer
Brittany Noah
Diego Rodriguez

Staff Writers
Jennifer Ayala
Victor Batista
Kate Britten
Chris Byrd
Christina Canary
Anthony Carabetta
Lucas Cartwright
Vanessa Desmarais
Christina Diabo
Johnny Gavin
Steele Henriksen
Seth Lovely
Dominique Marghella
Dea Pero
Ashley Persaud
Dylan Petit-Jaques
Hart Pisan
Briana Randall
Denisse Rodriguez
Adonis Salcedo
Mark Snellman
Kaeli Tomeu
Alex Turner
Matt Weitz

James Williams
Stephanie Woloshin
Graduate Support
Kevin Studer
Faculty Support
Timea Varga
Andrew Vermes
Faculty Advisor
Stefanie Powers
Martin Phillips
HALLOWEEN SPECIAL

HOW TO:
PUMPKIN DRILLING
NO MORE CARVING

LOCAL BUSINESSES PROVIDE SPONSORSHIP TO LYNN
THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE RACE

Kevin McCarthy’s Withdrawal Causes Chaos Amongst the House Republicans

By DYLAN PETIT-JACQUES
Staff Writer

Last week, front-runner for the Speaker of the House Kevin McCarthy announced that he was dropping out of the race after rumors of an alleged affair. If the rumors are indeed true, McCarthy had no choice but to drop out of the race abruptly last Thursday.

According to the Huffington Post, a cryptic letter was sent by Congressman Walter B. Jones of North Carolina to Chair of the House Committee Cathy McMorris Rodgers of Washington, asking that, “any candidate for Speaker of the House, majority leader, and majority whip withdraw himself from the leadership election if there are any misdeeds he has committed since joining Congress that will embarrass himself, the Republican conference, and the House of Representatives if they become public.”

This has caused a lot of stress and grief within the Grand Old Party (GOP), as Current Speaker of the House John Boehner steps “down from the role at the end of the month and the party still has not elected his successor.

So, who will be the next Speaker of the House? Though there are not too many big names competing for the role, there are many qualified candidates to throwing their names into the race.

Paul Ryan of Wisconsin is one of the most recognizable faces in the Republican Party. He was the vice presidential candidate alongside Mitt Romney in the 2012 presidential elections. Though Ryan did claim that he has no interest in running for the speakership, pressure from his GOP colleagues may force Ryan to join the race.

Daniel Webster of Florida announced last Monday that he would indeed run for the speaker position. On Webster’s personal website, one of his goals is to “rein in out-of-control bureaucratic regulations that stifle the ability of small businesses to grow our economy and create jobs.”

Jason Chaffetz of Utah, threw his name into the race last Sunday to help fix “the toughest issues facing the United States of America.” Chaffetz added in a TV interview with ABC that he has the ability to bring the two parties together.

“I think I’ve earned a reputation of being fair and that I’ll hear all sides from the entire political spectrum,” Chaffetz said. “Really, the role of the speaker is to be the constitutional officer that makes sure that the process is fair, it’s balanced.”

Above: The Speaker of the House is a very important political role to undertake. Stock Photos.
KNIGHTS RECEIVE SPONSORSHIPS

Lynn Athletics Is Affiliated With Local Companies That Support Lynn

By CHRISTINA DIABO
Staff Writer

When watching a collegiate game one will notice that there are signs around the field or court advertising places like Pizza Hut or Jamba Juice. However, many students do not know what it means for companies to sponsor Lynn's Fighting Knights.

Here at Lynn, many different corporate and business partners have teamed up with the university to provide sponsorship for student athletes and the athletic program.

Several businesses have been sponsoring university athletics for as long as some can remember.

Both well established companies and new, up-coming companies show their support for the Fighting Knights.

"[Blaze Pizza] sent us gift cards because they just opened a few months ago so they did some research and found Lynn University and this sets up a target to attract students for dinner" said Javier Lopez-Mochon, athletics marketing assistant.

The gift cards that Blaze Pizza donates to Lynn are up for grabs during the halftime activities that take place during all games. Anyone can win the gift cards simply by playing these games.

Well known restaurants like Moe's Southwest Grille, Panera Bread, and Duffy's Sports Grille have also advertised through Lynn athletics.

"From my personal experiences I take full advantage of eating out at places such as Panera Bread, one of my favorites or after a game we receive free pizzas," said Adam Hutchinson, senior soccer player.

The Fighting Knights are also affiliated with popular companies such as Adidas and GEICO. Athletes are beyond-happy that Adidas is a brand that supports Lynn's teams.

"It's awesome knowing that not only do we get great products/gear during season and get to eat good food locally but it's even better to know that all these big names brands know us as a school and a program and want to support us," said Nikki Colonna, sophomore colleyball player.

The Fighting Knights are proud and thankful that they can be supported by these well-known companies and hope that these supporters may one day be future employers of Lynn students.
HALLOWEEN AROUND THE WORLD
International Students Discuss How They Celebrate Halloween

By DENISSE RODRIGUEZ
Staff Writer

As Halloween approaches, people are starting to decorate their homes and look for the perfect costume for this year's Halloween party.

Halloween is a festival that originates from celtic cultures, such as Scotland and Ireland. It became popular in America when the immigrants of Ireland and Scotland traveled to America to start a new life.

However, in many countries around the world the notion of Halloween is strange and perhaps even considered dangerous.

Many international students seem to be astonished by the idea of knocking on some stranger's door asking for candy, but for Americans this seems to be normal on Halloween night.

"Halloween in Honduras isn't really encouraged to be celebrated," said Eloisa Sarmiento, Junior. "It is sometimes thought to go against common religious beliefs."

"In England children celebrate Halloween just like in America,“ said Karina Da Fonseca, sophomore. "They dress up in costumes and go trick or treating."

"Only young people celebrate Halloween in Ukraine," said Ivan Zhykhariev, junior. "It is an opportunity for friends to get to together."

"In Brazil Halloween is not about dressing up and candy," said Euvaldo Luz, sophomore. "But people use this as an excuse to have a party with friends."

While Halloween might be a night of celebration and fun for others, in some cultures this is not the case.

"Sending your kid outside to ask for candy would be too dangerous in Venezuela," said Michael La Chapelle, sophomore. "I think that that's why Halloween is not a tradition in Latin America."

"In Saudi Arabia Halloween is a taboo," said Omar Martinez, Junior. "The few people that know what it is think that it invokes devilish ideas so they do not celebrate it."

If one thing is true, it is that Lynn students will be spending their Halloween in a variety of different manners.

Above: Different cultures around the world celebrate Halloween in different manners. LU Photos.
STUDENTS GEAR UP FOR HALLOWEEN
Fighting Knights Enjoyed A Week Full Of Fun Events For Fall Fest 2015

Above: Fall Fest 2015 included many events such as pumpkin decorating, the annual haunted halls and Founder's Day. Stock Photos.
How To
A UNIQUE WAY TO CARVE PUMPKINS
Carving This Years Halloween Pumpkin With A Drill Is The Best Fall Fun

By DEA Pero
Staff Writer

For those sick and tired of carving a pumpkin the traditional way here is a way to carve a completely unique pumpkin in a fun and easy way.

Put away the old pumpkin carving set, all that is needed is a few tools and an imagination. Instead of pumpkin carving, this is called pumpkin drilling.

Pumpkin drilling is not only fun, but also makes for great fall décor. Put in a tea light candle or a fake candle and it will make the pumpkin light up in beautiful designs.

"I love that I can still carve pumpkins in Florida with my friends, because it reminds me of being back home in New York in the fall time," said Jacqueline Mcallister, senior.

It is easier to drill the pumpkin before scooping out the center, that way the pumpkin will have greater stability. Make sure to know how to use a power drill before drilling the pumpkin. In order to make the process simpler, do it with a friend so they can hold the pumpkin still.

"Carving pumpkins with my kids is always a fun way to get in the Halloween spirit," said Jeff Skulnik, alumni.

The first step is to use a dry erase marker to draw a design onto the pumpkin, using painter's tape as a guide. Once the design is complete, use a skewer to poke holes. This will make it easier for the drill to poke through the pumpkin.

There are endless designs that can be put onto the pumpkin. For a beginner, it might be easiest to do a simple flower or polka dots. All these designs require bigger and smaller drilled holes.

The second step is to use various sized bits and drill into the pre-marked spots. Make sure to have a steady handle on the drill so it creates a perfect circle. Once all of the marks are drilled through, clean off the pumpkin and prepare to scoop out the middle.

Once the middle is scooped out, the drilled pumpkin is complete. Wait until dark to light up the inside to see the designs in full detail.

"I think drilling pumpkins sounds like a really fun idea," said Alyssa Terry, senior. "I love decorating for fall, so I think this will be a unique way to decorate my apartment."

Above: These four easy steps show just how fun it is to try something new by drilling pumpkins for the fall holidays. LU Photos.
Tri-Rail is the smart way to commute to campus. Students who ride the train enjoy:

- 18 train stations from Miami to Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach
- Convenient shuttle buses to and from campus
- A 50% savings on fares with university ID
- Catching up on schoolwork while onboard
- Access to bike racks and lockers

Get a FREE TICKET to #TryRail and enter to win an Apple Watch.

Experience the benefits of a stress-free commute! Register at tri-rail.com for a free day pass to #TryRail and you will be entered for the chance to win an Apple Watch.