W. DANIEL TAYLOR’S PORTFOLIO

(COMMUNICATIONS & DIGITAL MEDIA: EVENING GRADUATE 2018-2019)
Daniel Taylor is in his experimental phase he is letting his mind and soul express and form is art. As a young artist his work is still evolving. He is on a path of self-discovery and innovation. The work in this portfolio follows the themes of two-dimensional media techniques as well as digital three-dimensional concepts. He also seeks to experiment with the foundations and principles of art and design theory and interpretation through digital technologies.

He is experimenting with two-dimensional media and techniques. As an artist he is stimulated by the interaction with the media and the various techniques. Over the years many media and techniques have become standardized. Meaning that with the advance in technologies, a deluge of new processes and materials have become accessible for experimentation and development. While some are increments of traditional methods, others, like computer-generated imagery are without precedent. Daniel is currently intermixing traditional and nontraditional techniques through a multidisciplinary apparatus. He sees his works of design, drawing, and motion graphics as a means of experimentation.

“Philosopher John Dewey said it right: “The deepest urge in human nature is the desire to be important.” We want a grand purpose, with challenging goals and an ambitious plan to achieve them: a life measured not in the number of likes or retweets we get, but in the things that we have built, the people we have helped or inspired with what we’ve done”

“A wise person once said that the two most important days in your life are the day you’re born and the day you find out why. When we were born, we won the lottery. Not only did we win the one-in-trillion-chance-to-even exist sweepstakes, we were born into the most technologically advanced society our species has ever known. We are among the most educated people in human history. Being who you are, right now, is the single greatest gift anyone could ever be given. You know it in your bones. Everyone feels it, and the need to make something of these gifts burns inside each of us. We want our lives to really matter! ”
