iBook Tips

Sanne Unger and Carrie Simpson
Palm Beach Tech 2017
Introduction

iPad Revolution at Lynn University

From the start: iBooks!

Created by faculty

Created for Lynn students

Tips!
Writing a book: Collaborate!

- Collaborate
- Same subject colleagues
  - Divide chapters
  - Create videos
  - Case studies
- Input from other subjects
  - Different perspective
  - Application

Acknowledgments
Dialogues of Self and Society
Level 290
4th Edition
June 2016

Editors
Debra L. Ainbinder
Professor of Psychology
Sanne Unger
Assistant Professor of Dialogue of Learning

Series Editors
Katrina Carter-Tellison
Chair, Dialogue of Learning
Dean, College of Arts and Sciences
Mike Petroski

Contributors
Judith I. Johnson
Assistant Professor of Human Services
Debra L. Ainbinder
Associate Professor of Psychology
Roberto Cadilhe
Project Coordinator
Karen Casey
Professor of Criminal Justice
Gwendolen Dadtiste
Student of International Relations
Selina Reipsch
Graduate Assistant
Anna Krif
Associate Professor of International Relations
Mark Lutio
Associate Professor of Philosophy and Religion
Wilson Onn
Academic Coach
Liz Raffa
Graduate Student of Communication Studies
Daniela Santos
Graduate Assistant
Sanne Unger
Assistant Professor of Dialogue of Learning
Robert Watson
Professor of American Studies

Buddhism and the No-Self View
By Chris Rice, Ph.D.

Many people assume that they have a "self" that endures over time and is the center of their identity. This self is thought to be the defining element that remains with them throughout life and manages their various sensations, beliefs, memories, and choices. However, the Buddha, who lived and taught on the Indian subcontinent around 450 BCE, denied the existence of the self. According to traditional Buddhism, there is no enduring self and people need to grasp this fact in order to attain true happiness.

A Buddhist text called the Pali Canon tells the story of a monk who perplexed a famous king by raising questions about his chariot. The monk explained that none of the parts of the chariot, such as the wheels or the axle, were the chariot itself. But, the monk continued, there is nothing else besides these parts that could be the true chariot (Haberman, 2013, pp. 63-64).
Writing a book: On your own!

- Write in phases
- Publish as you go
- Add your own content
- Course specific
Widgets

- iBooks Author
- Bookry
- Bookwidgets
iBooks Author widgets

Interactive images
Quizzes
Popovers
Bookry widgets

More quizzes

Embed YouTube videos

Social media

Link to Ted Talks
Bookwidgets

Worksheets
Whiteboards
Mind maps
Games
Crossword
Bingo
Interactive graphs, spreadsheets
Planner

Export
Corrections on / off

www.bookwidgets.com/play/AB2N68
Including large files

PDFs

Slides

Links to outside sources

Photo Gallery
Organization

Sections

Boxes

Disable scrolling view
Use colors

Consistency

Topic related

Draw attention

Pretty
Benefits

Free

To create

To distribute

Tailor-made

Individual class needs

Update with current events

Editing is ongoing process

Sell?
Brainstorm

How can YOU use iBooks in your subject?

How can STUDENTS contribute?
References

http://bookry.com/

https://www.bookwidgets.com/

http://www.apple.com/ibooks-author/