Florence Unlimited Is a Hit; Student Efforts Are Praised

Marymount’s first dramatic production, “Florence Unlimited,” is living proof of what students can do, given a cause, good leadership, and motivation to work. The Drama Club started out as a student project, organized totally by Lindy Kirk, with the cooperation of Mr. Carrigan and Mr. Hussey from the English Department. The response was overwhelming. A total of about 60 students signed up for the club. The ones that were willing to work remained, others were dropped through a system of precise organization. But most members were interested enough to follow directions. The final performance took place on May 1, 1966 in front of a full house at the Marymount auditorium. The debutante actresses were worthy of Broadway. Janet Horat, as the Mr. Laughton’s quiet secretary, Cheryl Sweeney as his unpredictable, excitable nurse, Jody Wilbert as the “sweet, Southern Belle,” who wasn’t always sweet, Joyce Grant, as a sweet, sensible Southern Belle, and her improved Parisian accent, Patti O’Brien as the “sweet smelling” Aunt Addie. They were the visible results of a carefully organized project, originated, directed and successfully carried out by Jennifer Kirk, who deserves unlimited amount of praise, if only for heading the best organized club in the school. All those connected with the play were responsible for making it such a success. Hopefully, this is only the beginning.

L’AZUR: the Ideal, the unattainable, the compelling Beauty and Truth we yearn for, and too often run from...

Marymount...Evermore

There’s nothing but a good college where your days seem to blend with new life; where close friends you’ve made you will never let fade and the memories you’ve made bring such joy.

Though we’ve finished our two years of college and we’re anxious for what lies beyond in our hearts will abide loyalty and great pride of our college, our dear Marymount.

There’s something about Marymount college, where the lanterns of truth is held high where we’re taught to hold dear the ideals of our years.

Marymount, we’ll love you...evermore.
EDITORIAL

Use the Key

For the past two years, we have attended Marymount. We have gone to classes, listened to what the teachers had to say, done the required assignments, and perhaps, if the course was specially interesting, we have done some independent work. But now, with final examinations over, we don’t have to worry about grades any longer. We can feel free to forget everything we struggled so hard to remember during the past two years. And no doubt some of us will.

If we think we will succeed in making real friends of the dedicated teachers who actually believed at times that they were teaching us something, We will make fools out of our parents who spared nothing to give us what they thought we would need to last a lifetime. And of course, we would be the biggest fools of all for wasting two years pretending that we were learning, when we could have been working, traveling or maybe even married.

Except that, without an education, just what kind of work could we possibly be doing? How prepared would we be to become wives? How good would we be at the art of conversation with friends we make while traveling? Obviously, without some education, we wouldn’t be prepared for much. In our contemporary society we need an education just to be a good citizen.

Some of us claim, “All I’m going to do is get married.” How much more important an education is then! If not for our own sake, for the sake of the children. All they will learn in the first few years the formative years, they will learn through us, their mothers. What kind of a mother will we make when we have nothing to teach them, because we didn’t think learning was worth the effort?

But we’re not only responsible for our immediate family. Our world has shrunk with the advances in communication and transportation. Where a famine in Viet Nam was unknown to us 200 years ago, today it is as much our concern as it is the Vietnamese. The age of nationalism has given way to the citizen of the world. Nations are too close together in our time to allow petty reasons, such as 3 yards more or less on their side of the border, to cause war. War has become too lethal a weapon to be used. We’ve had two world wars. Supposedly they would stop all future wars. They did not. The next war could, There would not be anyone left to fight.

It is our duty to use our education, to put all the wonderful theories we’ve discussed and praised in History class to practice. The fact that we are women cannot stop us anymore, since we have the same legal rights as men. The place to start is at home. Even if women don’t make most permanent decisions, their husbands do. And who has the ability to influence a man more than his wife? But then again, the wife must understand the crises at hand in order to be able to influence her husband into making the right choice.

 Improvements for ’67?

The Power of Suggestion

By Nancy Babb

From coffee machines to a Student Union to an art center -- freshmen at Marymount have voiced their opinion in the need they see. Tackling at the present, suggestions and improvements for Marymount are only minor, for all have agreed that a more beautiful and modern school could not be found in the area. But no two institutions of learning is complete without complaints from the student body. Next year’s Sophomores would like to see a few added improvements such as more buses and reduced cab rates available for transportation to town and back.

ANN ABBATE suggests, “Next year I hope to see a stronger bond between the freshmen and sophomore classes and by doing this we might have students become more interested and participate more in school functions,”

CANDY BROWN: “As far as curriculum programs are concerned, I think that ones should be introduced other than really like and music, such as a drum concert or one with any other musical instrument spotlighted. We also need music in the dining room at all meals.”

TERRY ROGERS: “We should have radio machine, the juke box should be for free, and I think we should have a list of punishment events for a cause instead of being campused for any little thing.”

JODI EWALD: “Better notification on coming events, especially for the benefit of the day students is badly needed here.”

DENNIS WHITE: “We need water, fountains in the dorms.”

MARIA AMADOR: “We should have a Student Union which would provide greater class unity, and more freshmen-sophomore communications, Reverend Mother wants to start an art corner -- I think we need it!”

EILEEN ROETTLE: “I think the students need better notification so that we can know what is going on around here.”

JANET HUTARD: “There was a lot of confusion last year at registration, I think we should have sophomores present with the advisors to tell the freshmen what the classes are really like and what is required for graduation.”

PAT COSIER: “The school should present more of an academic challenge to the students. There is not enough opportunity for creative work. Actually, Marymount needs nothing materially, it’s like a country club -- but it does need spirit.”

Cas Wrightson wills Barbara Cosgrove a room in the New Dorm, or would you rather fight than switch?

It's to Trish Gorak a dozen pairs of knee socks, or an electric shaver, to Terry Gosen a Senior Lifesaving Insignia, Ginny McCarthy leaves Ridley Halley an autographed picture of Bill Stager, to Pam Mansour, a Doctorate in Psychology. Julie McCrath leaves Carmen Carrasquillo 10 easy lessons on how to ride a horse.

Sue Mahoney bequeaths Jean Johnston "Mike.

to Denise Nonnally, a bottle of peroxide, to Mary Alice Reynolds, she reluctantly leaves a blue corval...

Sheila Maloof leaves Peggy Slattery a personal electrician, the size of a flea to Sherry Moore, a 1:00 permission signed, so she can ride in Shelly's XKE, to Maureen Kirby her accent.

Cas Wrightson wills Barbara Cosgrove a room in the New Dorm, or would you rather fight than switch?

The Sophomore Class now leaves to the Freshman Class: "Frigidities!" in the dinner line.

The news had just been told.

Who would argue the facts?

The sign led to Marymount.

We tried to celebrate the occasion.

We fought over who would be in first.

Although it was hard to concentrate.

Jean's attitude was exotic!

Our insanity was a true downfall.
There was a lot of pride

Finally at the end

The pool! — One great night it happened

A toast to a speedy recovery

A mythological approach was added
