November 6th dawned whimsically, and was to be the biggest "happening" so far this year. Wonderful Wednesday was an opportunity to "do your own thing," and "let it all hang out."

Early that morning the Marathon Swim began and lasted for fifty-four hours. The three dorms competed against each other, and South Hall won a wet victory.

There were two tours on Wonderful Wednesday: the IBM tour, sponsored by the Business Department, and the Beach Trim of the Science Department, which was a search for chemical specimens on nearby beaches.

The Philosophy Department tried to argue the point "Is There A Mr. Belford?" If you walked the sidewalks from Founders to Trinity, you would have stepped on a "Do-It-Yourself" Mural. This has now become a masterpiece of Marymount originality.

Noon, and 500 hungry "hang loosers" barefooted to the Cook-Out on the lawn. Mod hot dogs and psychedelic potato salad were fed as fuel for four more hours of action.

Included in the afternoon activities was a Pot Party. A new kind of pot, however, was given out - clay. Very original work came out of the clay play, but everyone enjoyed making mud pies. Really hanging loose!

Dr. Anthony's seminars gave their interpretation of the New Testament in "Theatre in the Square," and Mr. Steuer held a discussion, entitled "Religion Today."

The best part of the day, for both faculty and students, was held in the auditorium. The title, "Let It All Hang Out," best describes this happening. It was a weird mixture of drums, faculty, Sophisticated Sissy, students, Horse, Respect, Soul, African twist, Gloria, more Soul, glow paint, feet, black lights, and blown minds.

This conglomeration was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone, especially the members of the faculty who learned to dance and sock it to "em."

The action-day was topped off by a play of one-line statements which was absurd and unbelievably funny. Each person in the auditorium gave a "line" for the play and a type of "Laugh-In" skit was constructed. This last original production, full of ingenuity and wit, marked the end of a day not easy to forget, and so much enjoyed that it will be a necessity next semester.

Marymount's first marathon swim began at 8:00 a.m. on "Wonderful Wednesday" and 54 long, wet hours later South Hall had won the gold plaque awarded to the team with the most endurance. East Hall placed second and Trinity third.

All day and all night, the crowds were good and enthusiastic. At night the bystanders, dousing the swimmers and blankets, danced while their harder classmates swam on. Freshman Mary Landon of East Hall set the endurance record, which was 7-1/2 hours. CONGRATULATIONS to ALL who participated!!!
Dear Editor:

Congratulations on a very outstanding paper. I found the last issue one of the best college papers I have ever read. I am very proud to mail it out to prospective students. I believe it demonstrates a closer glimpse of life here at Marymount. Just one or two comments which may be of interest.

Your paper seems to suggest a grave problem of "overcrowding"... I agree, but I think it is better to have a class of 20 than of 40, but that means of course a smaller building... Marymount should consider the class sizes of American colleges today, an overwhelming majority of one of 400 or 500, and to most of your colleagues across the country, a class of 20 would be considered a cozy seminar! Your remarks prompted me to do a little research on actual class sizes. I discovered that the average class size is 28-1/2. The faculty-student ratio is 1:14. Your article refers to a point out that a class of 40 is always welcome to have an individual conference with her professor during office hours which he sets aside for that purpose. As a matter of fact, I am not critical of your editorial point, but I think it does not reach the full extent.

One more comment: you mention that you deserve better since you are Marymount students, but, after 20 years I deserve the very best we can give you, but please don’t ever think it is because you pay a certain amount. You shouldn’t put a cap on your education. You have a right to claim the best possible educational opportunity only because it takes money to provide the conditions which will enable you to learn and grow. And you should be proud of your achievements, not resentful that the student bodies in other institutions have not the same advantage for education and feeding one student - the balance must be made up in other ways. But whether you pay $27,000 or $2,700 or $27,000, you are entitled to the best... I am sure the right of every student to have his education. Sincerely yours,

Sister Richard Marie

FOR WHAT IT'S WORTH

So now Wonderful Wednesday has come and gone. Was it worth the trip? I believe it was. It is the highlight of the month for the most part it was. Even though not everyone in the school participated in the wonderful Wednesday it should have been welcomed. The only negative thing was the weather. But the fact of the matter is the day was a success for it to have enthusiastic supporters. And those who came and took part are to be commended and made to see what a wonderful day it was.

A large group of people were involved in the planning and making of the day. They worked hard to make sure that everything ran smoothly. The weather was not the best, but it did not dampen the spirits of the participants. The day was filled with activities and fun for everyone.

For those who were unable to participate, there are still many opportunities to get involved in Wonderful Wednesday activities in the future. Keep an eye out for upcoming events and join in the fun! It's a day that everyone should look forward to.

To the Editor:

First, let me congratulate you on your fine newspaper. I've always admired the way wonderful Wednesday paper. All remarks that I heard from the faculty were most complimentary.

Secondly, I would like to share with you what I feel is one of the most interesting images of the Marymount student who spends two weeks in Mexico. I read it closely, I think you will agree that for appearance of a number of students, the comments and I, am sorry to say, the language being used, does not fit. I cannot accept credit for its originality for it is a paraphrase on something written by an English speaker.

From the exotic country of Brazil we hear the songs "Eu estou apaixonado por voce" and "Medallion" through the warm voices of Maria Gilberta. Not only in the sentimental songs, but also in the more energetic songs, she brings the distinctive Brazilian loneliness to the stage. As one can clearly see in her songs and in her way of singing, the Mexican pride show the foreigners how to perform their role as "Mexicans". Other songs that are sung with so much life and that are easy to sing are "Cielito Lindo" and "Guadalajara".

RESTLESS?

By SISTER JOHN BOSCO

In reading through journals, papers and other literature devoted to the life of college campuses today, I am often confronted with the phrase "restless, students with every conceivable type of revolt and protest." And the thought comes to mind -- why is it that there are many people who are READY in making your decisions -- but simply are willing to give of their time, energy and knowledge to be a support to you in the many situations that arise in the world today. Yes, and yet there are so many students who feel that if there is no one to turn to while they are striving, they may be able to become thoroughly acquainted with their candidates' beliefs and positions.

Electoral results for the office of the president were: Annette Paluska, President; Marc Thorlath, Vice-President; and Liz Saur, Treasurer.
