The Turn of the Screw

By Benjamin Britten
Libretto by Myfanwy Piper, after a story by Henry James

April 12 & 14, 2013

Keith C. and Elaine Johnson Wold Performing Arts Center
Lynn University
Welcome to Benjamin Britten’s The Turn of the Screw—Lynn University Conservatory of Music’s first collaboration with Palm Beach Opera and our first performance of a complete opera in the Keith C. and Elaine Johnson Wold Performing Arts Center.

This is a marvelous opportunity for our student-musicians to partner with Palm Beach Opera’s Young Artists adding yet another important dimension to their exceptional educational experience at Lynn. Just as PBO’s Young Artist Program is a stepping-stone to a successful career in opera, the Conservatory brings a wide variety of performance experiences crucial to the foundation of a professional orchestral musician.

We invite you to hear the full Lynn Philharmonia Orchestra in our 2012-2013 season finale on April 20-21, featuring Timothy Cobb, principle double bass of the Metropolitan Opera.

On behalf of the Conservatory, we are delighted that you have chosen to attend The Turn of the Screw. We hope you experience, in this performance, the embodiment of our Conservatory: “When talent meets inspiration, the results are extraordinary.”

Jon Robertson
Dean, Lynn University Conservatory of Music

I’m thrilled to welcome you to this first collaboration between Palm Beach Opera’s Young Artist Program and the Lynn University Conservatory of Music. Training future musicians and communicative performers is at the heart of both our organizations’ missions, and this production adds programmatic depth to our respective programs.

I’m equally excited that the educational nature of the institutions and sophistication of our audiences allow us to produce a chamber opera in English, which expands our standard opera repertoire. The Turn of the Screw by Benjamin Britten is an accomplished ghost story set to wonderfully atmospheric music, asking both performers and orchestra to find their way into the psychology of the characters to bring them to life. A fitting way to celebrate not only our talented performers, but also the 2013 centenary of Benjamin Britten, who passionately believed in music education!

Thank you for sharing this evening with us, I look forward to seeing you again at our performances during the 2014 Palm Beach Opera Season.

SYNOPSIS OF SCENES

Prologue
Prologue relates a story written long ago by a woman once employed as the governess of two orphaned children in Bly, hired on the condition that she would never contact their guardian uncle in London, who was too busy to concern himself with them.

Act I
The Governess travels to Bly with apprehension. Her two young charges, Miles and Flora, and the housekeeper, Mrs. Grose, await her arrival. When the children welcome the Governess to the estate, she feels reassured about her decision to accept the job.

Mrs. Grose gives the Governess a letter stating that Miles has been expelled from school, which causes the Governess to momentarily recall her anxieties about Bly. Mrs. Grose says that Miles can be wild, but that he is not bad. As the Governess and Mrs. Grose watch the children innocently singing, they decide that the school officials are mistaken. The Governess resolves that she will not tell the children’s guardian.

The Governess, increasingly enchanted by the children, strolls the grounds of Bly. Yet she has heard cries during the night and footsteps outside her door. Suddenly, she is startled at the sight of a man standing on the tower of the house.

As Flora and Miles ride a hobbyhorse, the Governess describes the apparition to Mrs. Grose. Mrs. Grose tells the Governess of the master’s former valet, Peter Quint, his strange influence on the children, and his involvement with Miss Jessel, the former governess, who left pregnant and subsequently died. Mrs. Grose adds that Quint later died after a fall on an icy road. The Governess vows to protect the children.

The Governess is giving Miles a Latin lesson when he sings her a mysterious, plaintive rhyme. As the Governess and Flora sit by a lake in the park, Flora names the seas she knows, ending with the Dead Sea. She sings to her doll while the Governess reads a book. When the Governess sees the figure of Miss Jessel across the lake, she hurries Flora away. At night, Peter Quint and Miss Jessel try to lure the children outside. The ghosts disappear when the Governess and Mrs. Grose arrive.

INTERMISSION

Act II
Miss Jessel and Peter Quint reproach each other and discuss their desire for revenge. The Governess reflects upon the evil she fears.

In the churchyard, Mrs. Grose comments upon the children’s sweetness, but the Governess tells her of their bizarre behavior. Mrs. Grose urges the Governess to write their guardian, but she refuses. As Flora enters the church, Miles lingers to ask the Governess when he will return to school. When he makes mention of “the others,” the Governess realizes what she is up against and decides to leave Bly.

The Governess enters the schoolroom to find Miss Jessel seated at her desk, lamenting her suffering. When the Governess challenges Miss Jessel, she vanishes. The Governess then decides to remain at Bly, but writes to the guardian. The Governess tells Miles that she has written to his guardian. Quint’s voice calls out to Miles, causing him to shriek. His candle goes out. Quint hovers over Miles, encouraging him to steal the letter before it can be sent. Miles slinks off to the schoolroom and takes the letter back to his bedroom.

In the schoolroom, Miles plays the piano for the Governess and Mrs. Grose. When Flora slips away, the Governess and Mrs. Grose go to find her. Miles exults in his successful ruse. The Governess and Mrs. Grose find Flora at the lake. Miss Jessel appears, but only the Governess sees her. Flora, shouting abuse at the Governess, is led off by Mrs. Grose. After hearing Flora’s evil ravings during the night, Mrs. Grose decides to take her away from Bly.

Mrs. Grose reveals that Miles stole the Governess’ letter. The Governess, now alone with Miles, questions the boy, but Quint tells Miles not to betray their secrets. Miles becomes hysterical and admits stealing the letter. When the Governess urges the boy to reveal the name of his tormentor, he implicates Quint. His power destroyed, Quint vanishes, as Miles falls dead.

The Palm Beach Opera Young Artist Program is funded by The Edward H. Benenson Foundation.
Additional support is provided by Roseanne and Dennis Williams, Isanne and Sanford Fisher, Mr. Arnold S. Penner and Ms. Madaline Berley, The Gladys and Sy Ziv Foundation, The National Endowment for the Arts, Il Circolo, the Italian Cultural Society of the Palm Beaches, and Mrs. Bernice Lieberman.

The Palm Beach Opera Young Artist Program is a stepping stone to a successful career as an opera singer for post-graduate and emerging singers. During their five-month residency in Palm Beach they develop and polish essential stagecraft and performance skills, aided by musical and career guidance from Palm Beach Opera’s experienced artistic staff. The Young Artists are Palm Beach Opera’s community ambassadors, performing throughout the area in education and outreach concerts as well as covering lead roles and performing comprimario roles on the mainstage.

Each Young Artist will:
- Receive primary consideration for main-stage secondary and comprimario roles and cover appropriate role(s) in mainstage productions
- Perform principal roles in the One Opera in One Hour series. (Abridged semi-staged version with piano accompaniment performed at the Harriet Himmel Theater at CityPlace in West Palm Beach.)
- Sing concerts in community and attend/perform at donor functions
- Sing in the PBO chorus (when not singing secondary or comprimario roles)
- Participate in PBO educational activities
- Receive regular coaching with resident and visiting music staff and participate in masterclasses and seminars given by acclaimed guest artists and teachers, as well as sing for managers, etc.

PBO provides each Young Artist with:
- Monthly stipend as well as a housing and travel stipend
- Masterclasses, professional workshops, and vocal coaching with a variety of guest artists and teachers
- Auditions for managers
