About Walls, Cars, and People

As my first semester at Marymount College draws to a close, I feel it is appropriate to collect some of my thoughts about the school and offer them as an end of the year reflection.

If I were playing a word association game and someone said Marymount, I would probably snap back—walls! Now I’m sure everyone would assume I mean walls around Marymount that keeps us all trapped here with nothing to do but vegetate. Right? Well, no I don’t mean that wall, if such a wall does exist. No, instead I think back to a short observation by Rev. Malcolm K. Thorne. He said, “One car in the distance, just two like two very small bright eyes on the horizon, coming closer, closer, now very close, now they are here, now they have passed, now there is blackness... We will never know each other.” Sometimes I feel most of us here at Marymount are like those two cars, encased in our mobile walls. We pass each other to class. We eat our meals in the same place. We work and play together, yet there seems little real contact. We seem almost to be vegetating. I feel it might be appropriate to collect some of my thoughts about the school and offer them as an end of the year reflection.

Ron Falzone never had it so good.

Daryl Smith Basking in the Spotlight

Little Mary Sunzume opened this weekend on campus. The two act musical comedy is an excellent presentation of slap-stick humor. In the tradition of such greats as Charlie Chaplin and Groucho Marx, the lines are corny, the situations strongly resemble Dudley DeWright and the Northwest Mounted. The show is a well-staged farce from beginning to end.

The story involves the rangers’ assignment to bring in Yellow Feather, one of the few remaining Kadota Indians. Inter mixed with the rangers’ endeavors is the extremely important Jester and Twinkle’s romance. Jester is the mountain air. Captain Big (Daryl Smith, Jr.) is in continual pursuit of Little Mary sunshine, owner of the mountain Inn. Corporal Billy Jester Forget-gives Naughty Nancy Twinkle’s romantic indiscretions and General Os- car Fairfax has more going for him than Henry Kissinger in eventually snuggling his heart of Erseine Von Liebedich, an opera singer staying at Mary’s Inn.

The action on stage is always moving and, there fore, more enjoyable. The actors and actresses are in command of their stage presence, this is due to the endeavors of Mr. William Smith, Director, and Mrs. Marilyn Remus, Choreographer. Energy sustains the action on stage as well as the energy on stage is obvious to anyone attending the performance.

The action on stage is always moving and therefore, more enjoyable. The actors and actresses are in command of their stage presence, this is due to the endeavors of Mr. William Smith, Director, and Mrs. Marilyn Remus, Choreographer. Energy sustains the action on stage as well as the energy on stage is obvious to anyone attending the performance.

Daryl K. Smith can be seen sneering and snickering at every turn as the lovestruck corporal. His romantic interest, Mary Sunshine, is portrayed by Beth Condon as a sweet little heroine with a big smile plastered on her face. She looks very much like a smiling robot, Nicholas C. Gagliano, Jr., does much of the same in his part as the hapless Billy Jester and adds much comic relief to the show. Nancy Twinkle fits Barb ara Ann Vogel like a glove and her deviance is precious as Erseine. The influence of Charlie Chaplin is obvious in Falzone’s interpretation of Mary Had a Little Lamb when he plays Chief Brown Bear. His mere presence on stage is enough to draw a laugh. He, like Daryl Smith, never leaves character and adds greatly to the show.

The rangers and the girls should not be overlooked because their dances and songs help keep the show moving. The hard work they put into rehearsals is evident in their performance. They add a great deal of energy to the show as well as enjoyment to the viewer.

Little Mary Sunshine is a musical farce in the vein of slap-stick comedy. The songs are almost all strong and the action is always moving. The cost of an admission ticket is well worth the enjoyment.

DARYL SMITH BASKING IN THE SPOTLIGHT
Howie Does It All

Psychology teacher, Mr. Howie, has many roles at Greenhill. As the PULSE interviewed Mr. Howie to find out how he handles these different tasks.

A native of Pennsylvania, Mr. Howie attended Juniata College in Pa. and received a B.S. in Biology. He then went on to receive his M.A. (Psychology) at Washington College in Md. He has a wife and a 2 year-old son, and taught for five years, two in public schools and three in private schools, all in Maryland. He also was counselor, teacher, and coach of the basketball team and the tennis team.

When asked about his origin, Mr. Howie said, "I'm from Maryland! Mr. Howie said but would have to say that the majority of my origins were very good, otherwise I doubt I'd be talking to you right now. Marymount has a beautiful campus and is located in a wonderful area which in itself makes Marymount quite appealing. More importantly, I feel Marymount offers an excellent private, small, co-educational environment, and also has great potential in terms of future development. Perhaps, I did have second thoughts about the type of student and faculty I might encounter, though I feel that quite natural in entering a new job and new environment."

We asked him whether his impressions had changed much since then, and he answered, "Have I changed? Not really, M.M. is pretty much what I expected to be or at least hoped it would be. Furthermore, I've found the people here to be most co-operative and friendly. That includes both students and staff. I consider myself quite fortunate and I only hope I can do my part in contributing to Marymount!"

How he handles the tennis classes, we asked. "The tennis players I've been working with are beginning to show progress. Tennis is fun game and it takes a lot of practice and time to make it a good "tennis-player.""

Out next question was a "perplexed" one. Who are the better tennis players at Marymount, girls or boys? Mr. Howie said, "That question may not be fair to ask at all. If I had to say, I would say the best tennis players I've seen here are female. But you must consider the emphasis on tennis at Marymount has been towards the girls, not the boys." On the Ringling-King match, Mr. Howie said, he had thought Riggs would win, but Riggs seemed to prove she was more capable. He also added that he doesn't think of females as the weaker sex!

What does he prefer to teach, tennis or psychology? He replied, "Actually I couldn't say I prefer one over the other, I thoroughly enjoy the combination of the two. Teaching, to me, is a very rewarding experience both in the scholastic and physical education areas. I feel that the majority of Marymount's students who are active both mentally and physically. I find the enjoyment of teaching is unparalleled." Furthermore, Mr. Howie also added, "I've taught a number of Marymount students on a college level is quite challenging and rewarding experience both in the scholastic and physical education areas. I feel that the average Marymount student arrives at the day he departs. Furthermore, I want to encourage students to feel free to talk to us about what problems, attitudes, and general feelings they have that are of major concern."

In conclusion, I would like to say that many students have feelings of separation and feel that no one is concerned with their problems. Students must begin to realize that the counselors do have a genuine and sincere interest in each and every student. Furthermore, students should be aware of the policy of confidentiality that is, if an individual reveals his thoughts and feelings, they can be sure that anyone or any other individual without the direct consent of the student.

If you would like to know more about the PULSE, contact Mr. Howie at 391-7936.

Measurement of course students then could actually use and administer various tests for scoring and interpretation. In Abnormal Psychology, if students could have the exposure of seeing actual cases such as situations and prisons, they would understand allot more than just our checklist and teaching the students. And lastly, in his psychology classes, every student should be a critical person in their lives. They all should be able to use and administer various tests for scoring and interpretation. In Abnormal Psychology, if students could have the exposure of seeing actual cases such as situations and prisons, they would understand allot more than just our checklist and teaching the students.
Ross was dead, to begin with. There was no doubt about that. For weeks, the third floor of Trinity was dark. Had the good Doctor been alive, his 200-watt bulb could have illuminated the entire floor even as he sat in his study, reading his Quiet-Yet-Certified Public Accounting textbooks.

Hanley looked at the sleeping man. He decided to ignore it. It seemed more than a little strange to be woken from the past.

"Chrachedo," the old man screamed.

The little assistant-arch-enemy was a foundling, a bookkeeper-committee-fooker-knocker-keeper entered the room.

"Sir?" He chipped.

"I don't care what your nickname is," growled Hanley. "Did you extort...or...balance the fun?"

"Don't you link she can audit after see holidays, sir?"

"What holidays?"

"Creeeesmen.sirs."

"Creeeesmen... Christmas! Bah Humbug!"

"But, sir, I wish to spend holiday week; mine lieeite boy, Tiny Weldy...or seek..."

"What chid? What's wrong with the little "Christopher'"

"What time ez est, sir?"

"What...Oh...12:00..."

"Am set...our heart desires. He no usually have elephants until around 12:00."

"I don't care about your heart desires!"

"You will not go home and sleep those accounts! Get to work!"

"I wish to go home; my heart desires."

"Hanley decided that he had had enough of the conversation. He told the little man to seek out Tiny Weldy and drive to the Boca Lounge."

"Merriest Christmas, Mr. Hanley, sir," called the red-eyed butcher.

"Bah Humbug!" was the only comment Hanley could cough up, weakly.

Now, Hanley should have known better than to call "Bah Humbug!" a bartender.

For that reason, and probably because Hanley never left the man a tip, the bookkeeper spied Mr. Hanley's shadow through pouring in real root beer. Needless to say, the drink was just too much and the poor bookkeeper began to slip into unconsciousness.

Lights began to flicker. A tall man stood in front of his eyes, the major points being photographically unclear. The covers of back copies of "Golf" magazine, over the covers of back copies of "Golf." Suddenly, one date caught his attention. September 3, 1973. The last date anyone had seen Dr. Ross. Again, Hanley glanced stolen at the "Golf" photo. Quickly, he was blinded by that "Golf" photo and unconscious.

It was Ross.

"What are you doing here, Hanley?"

"I've come to make you see the sins of your life. That's what is right and that which is present."

"Don't throw all the blame on only me! It's sold out to Wilmington because of your...praise!"

"Not that sin! The one of pride!"

"He's failed, you! I don't have one!"

"I'm talking about your treatment of the people under you, particularly kind and lovable Chrachedo."

"That lousy..."

"He worked hard!"" beloved Hanley. "He worked hard all his life just to serve his family!"

"He worked hard!"" beloved Hanley. "He worked hard all my life by hawking used golf balls!"

"So, that's where you got your nickname?"

"What nickname?"

"Scr SCOGE."

"Well, Hanley, I am going to take you all through the past, even the parts you haven't been through yet."

"But I don't do it any more!"

"Now, come let us first depart to your grave."

With a whoosh, they were both gone. It was the Marymount cafeteria. There was a girl sitting alone. Hanley knew it must be that because students were actually talking to each other. Suddenly, a handsome hand popped down on her shoulder. He used swiftly to face his old friend, Stafford Money.

"Staff!"

"Not anymore, Dickie-baby. I'm now the Ghost of Christmas Past."

"My God, that's another story. Look to that table."

Hanley squinted and pointed. There, sitting on two stacked Howard Robson chairs, were two young people. On closer inspection, Hanley saw it was not other than himself and his beloved, the fair Miss Kelicke, a few years before.

He heard a laugh.

"Oh, Richard, I love you. Why won't you marry me?"

"I would but it just that..."

"Oh what, Richard? Please make me happy!"

"It's just that I've become as attached to my Teddy Bear."

"You must fly away to the convent!"

The menu scudded up and Hanley turned to face the chef. He had no idea who it was. But he was gone. In his place stood a crotty little cur. A g迁s of a girl. Her blond hair curling into little pigtails that danced down her shoulders. She was making a cup of coffee. She seemed a bit dazed.

"Could I have a cup of Christmas tea?"

"Sure, go ahead, Sir."

"I'd like a cup of tea, to start the day."

"Certainly."

"Thank you, God that's fine."

"No, you'll use less mon eyes to start mine own little band! I can see see now. Chrachedo and been Bah Bah Bah! No more do I half to stay home and watch records of 'I Love Lucy'."

"Ah, sacred friend," said the ecstatic Hanley. "I will be your business manager!"

"Chrachedo looked to the now-humbled man and with a wink in his eye, spoke.

"Bah Humbug!"

Dear Troubled,

I don't think you can really help me but I'll feel better getting talk off my chest. My problem is fried chicken. I love it and can't get enough of it. Every time I just think about Colonel Sanders I get crazy. I feel a little talking about it. Thank you for your time and please don't print my name.

Dear Doctor,

I'm having a little trouble trying to graduate. I've been going for two years and I'm still six credits short. The problem is getting me down because I was six credits short when I got here. What can I do?

Troubled

Dear Troubled,

I would go see my advisor and then make an appointment to see a psychiatrist. Do it quickly!

Dear Doctor,

I think my boyfriend is losing interest in me. Our first two dates were great but since then I only see him at meals and every night after midnight. Do you think he is using me?

Uncertain

Dear Professor,

Using you? How did you guess? He's destroying my reputation. I'm smartening up and enjoy yourself with someone who appreciates your company as well as your looks.

Salvatore A. Zagami, born 5-23 in Norwich, New York; Nationality: Italian, Honors awarded: a member of the National Honor Society, Phi Theta Kappa and an entry in the Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges.

This description, included in a circular which was around campus the first few days of the semester, belongs to one of the most talented and versatile students on campus.

Sam Zagami is involved in school in life, in art. His art is what wins him most of his recognition. His most recent showing was in the Boca Raton Art Guild in which he took a second and third. Recently his work was admired by Prof. Robert Keller of Binghamton University, where it is in exhibition in Thornbrook Hall in New York.

Right now Sam is a junior at F.A.U. where he is working for a B.A. and a Master's. He intends to become an art teacher when he is done with school.

Starting in January he will begin to enter several exhibitions in Boca Raton and surrounding areas. You are invited to attend.

Dear Editor,

In the dorms there are soda machines, in the cafeteria a cigarette machine. At night after the cafeteria has closed people get hungry and have to go all the way to the Boca Raton Art Guild in which he took a second and third. Dear Doctor,

I don't think you can really help me but I'll feel better getting talk off my chest. My problem is fried chicken. I love it and can't get enough of it. Every time I just think about Colonel Sanders I get crazy. I feel a little talking about it. Thank you for your time and please don't print my name.

Dear Troubled,

I'm having a little trouble trying to graduate. I've been going for two years and I'm still six credits short. The problem is getting me down because I was six credits short when I got here. What can I do?

Troubled

Dear Troubled,

I would go see my advisor and then make an appointment to see a psychiatrist. Do it quickly!

Dear Doctor,

I think my boyfriend is losing interest in me. Our first two dates were great but since then I only see him at meals and every night after midnight. Do you think he is using me?

Uncertain

Dear Professor,

Using you? How did you guess? He's destroying my reputation. I'm smartening up and enjoy yourself with someone who appreciates your company as well as your looks.

This description, included in a circular which was around campus the first few days of the semester, belongs to one of the most talented and versatile students on campus.

Sam Zagami is involved in school in life, in art. His art is what wins him most of his recognition. His most recent showing was in the Boca Raton Art Guild in which he took a second and third. Recently his work was admired by Prof. Robert Keller of Binghamton University, where it is in exhibition in Thornbrook Hall in New York.

Right now Sam is a junior at F.A.U. where he is working for a B.A. and a Master's. He intends to become an art teacher when he is done with school.

Dear Editor,

In the dorms there are soda machines, in the cafeteria a cigarette machine. At night after the cafeteria has closed people get hungry and have to go all the way to the Boca Raton Art Guild in which he took a second and third. Recently the finals of the Boca Raton Municipal Park Tennis Championships were held. It was a clean sweep by the Marymount Tennis Team. There were four girls from the Marymount team enttered in the tournament. In the singles competition, Yvonne Llarena & Billie Abney in doubles, Chris Hovorka and Carrie Meyer played as a team.

Eve Llarena won the singles competition with Billie Abney taking second place. Chris Hovorka and Carrie Meyer took first place in the doubles competition thrashing their opponents in the finals 6-0, 6-1.

It would appear that Marymount College has an excellent tennis team. The members of the team are ive congrugulated for their hard work and per-

CHRIS HOVORKA BACKHANDS HER WAY TO VICTORY

Our soccer team ended their season respectively this year with a win, 7 losses, and three ties. The team played admirably all year and were finally molded into a playing unit at the end of the season.
This can be attributed to the fine coaching work of Enos Russell. The team should really be a force to recon with next year under his leadership.

Captain Oscar Navarro led all scorers with 13 goals. Other outstanding offensive players were Clancy Dennis, Simon Bratt and Scott Westbrook. The defense, bolstered by Dickie Curville, Mario Mariani and Tom Hickam, was strong all year but got real tough at the end of the season with the strong play of Greg Malfitano at goalie. Greg should be commended for this

The team members wa-et to thank the faculty and student body for their support and expressed their desire for more help from the athletic department in the areas of win and it losses does not do justice to the efforts of the players and coach.

Many hard hours are spent in practice and this should be recognized because the team players are giving their all on the court. It should also be noted that two of our losses were decided by a scant point.

Jeff Sarvo deserves special mention among the players. He is the leading scorer and one of the hardest playing men on the court. Kevin Leahy, Mike Ryan and John Leach have done well as ball-handlers and Frank Zaccanelli has been superb, offensive as well as defensively. Tim Fogarty, Mike Kolb, Cliff Beck and Tim Wahl have absorbed the punishment of playing under the boards. Some nights it must feel like it is never going to end.

The team has enjoyed good student support. Let us keep giving this support, keeping in mind that the season is young and realizing that there is always next year.
