IT’S ‘OCTOBERFEST’ LYNN STYLE!
Homecoming and Alumni Family Weekend to Kick Off in October

By SHEENA FOSTER

Clear your calendars! The fun and festivities of Homecoming Week will kick off on Oct. 21 with window painting in the lobby of the cafeteria and will end with the “Anything Floats Race” sponsored by the Knights Activity Team on Oct. 25. But what is Homecoming Week without the Mr. & Ms. Lynn University pageant? Each year, contestants are asked to apply for the coveted throne by submitting applications or applying through their clubs or organizations.

Former Ms. Lynn University, junior Leury Moreno, wishes the competitors the best.

“I hope that they are full of school spirit!”

Lots of good activities are planned for Alumni and Families weekend on Oct. 26 and 27, says Patrick Beswick, Coordinator of Programming and Student Life.

“There will be body art painters, music, food and a caricaturist,” he said.

“And oh yeah,” he adds with a devilish grin, “I’ll be taking lots of pictures for the yearbook, too!”

Gareth Fowles, head of the Student Alumni Association estimates 400 alumni will return to Lynn. Undergrads are encouraged to meet them. Says Beswick, “This is an excellent time for the students to mingle with the graduates and see accounts of their ventures into the real world.”

MEET THE GOVERNOR
Bush Comes To Lynn

By RENEN KATZ

Governor Jeb Bush came to Lynn on Sept. 19 to do a 5-minute interview with Jim Brosmer of the College of International Communications. The interview is part of Democracy 2002, a show the students produce, which airs on WPTV News Channel 5. Political guests are candidates in the show’s coverage area, and vary from city council representatives to the governor.

Students who are involved with the show say it’s a great resume builder. I asked the governor a few questions concerning students and voters.

My first question was how he plans to bridge the gap between the quality of health care and services provided by big businesses and the self-employed. This is important to college students, especially seniors, because after graduation many are no longer eligible for their parents’ health care plan.

Governor Bush responded that the state is working on “a bare bones health care policy which would lower costs to make it more affordable for...
LETTER FROM THE EDITOR
I Have Only Just One Minute!
By MICHELE JACABACCI

Welcome, but don’t sit back and relax, tomorrow is graduation.

College is the greatest and fastest four, five, or six years of your life. The essence of college life is not only in the classroom, but also outside. I mean the classrooms of Dolphin games, Student Activities, O’Connell’s, HUSH, the beach, the dorm room two doors down, and of course, Fridays 101.

If I were to offer any advice, it would be learn who you are and, most importantly, whom you want to become. It is in college that we make life-long friends within a week; find our best man and maid of honor; and begin developing into the person that we have dreamt of becoming.

It is not just going to English, Math and History class that make us part of the educated society, but the qualities we take from the relationships we have made. As someone said: “I have only just one minute, only sixty seconds in it, forced upon me-can’t refuse it, didn’t seek it, didn’t chose it. But it’s up to me to use it. I must suffer if I lose it. Give account if I abuse it, just a tiny little minute. But eternity is in it.”

MESSAGE FROM KAT PRESIDENT

By JODI COHEN

What’s up everyone! I just wanted to welcome the new students to Lynn as well as all the returning students. I hope everyone’s first two months at school went well.

In the world of the Knights Activity Team (KAT), we’ve been having a great time. With incredible activities offered, a hard working executive board, almost 20 new members, and awesome event turn-outs, we look forward to the year ahead of us.

KAT is offering many new events this year, such as the first annual tailgate party, a sex and relationship lecture, a motion simulator; as well as improvements to your favorite events. Movie nights are always popular days so in order to get things organized, KAT will be restructuring the event. Keep your eyes open for changes in November. But for now you can still pick up your movie tickets at Muvico, but remember, get there early because tickets go quickly!

Also, we have Homecoming approaching soon, so get a team together and compete in the week’s events to win up to $560!!

I’d just like to thank everyone for coming out to our events and also remind you that more fun is on the way. After all, “KAT is the word”.

Have a great year and good luck to everyone.

MESSAGE FROM KOR PRESIDENT

By JONATHAN WILLIAMSON

On behalf of Knights of the Roundtable (KOR), I would like to say, this year is off to a great start!

KOR is a liaison between students, staff, and faculty as well as providing student leadership at Lynn. Although KOR is not an organization you can sign up for at the activities fair, it is an organization you can be nominated for by any staff or faculty member on the campus this spring. Please let it be known to your professors, or another staff member if you are interested in becoming part of the team.

As I write this article and reminisce over my past three years here at Lynn, I cannot believe how much has changed in such a short amount of time.

KOR is working tirelessly to plan the annual Holiday Gala, set for Dec. 6 at Maggiono’s. This event is always an excellent way to celebrate the holidays before the break, and to blow off some steam before finals. Remember, if you plan to attend, you may want to bring cloths back from Thanksgiving break as this is a semi-formal event.

KOR is also planning another event at Ski-Rixxen’s cable park. For those of you that have never done it, it’s a blast! The event includes water skiing, wake boarding, knee boarding, wake skating, and much more.

This is an event that you do not want to miss! College is what you make of it!
Benjamin Joslin's Bloat Bag Of Opinion
Money, The Root Of All...Stupidity

By BENJAMIN JOSLIN

Simply put, Americans are money driven people. Our social status is often determined by how much cash we’ve plunked down on ourselves. From wrist watches that could feed a small village in Central Africa, to pants that cost more than my monthly rent, despite looking identical to the ones I bought at Sears.

But we citizens can’t even come close to challenging the masters of frivolous spending, the government.

The following are a few instances in which our government seems to have lost its financial mind - although it's questionable whether it had one in the first place - and spent taxpayer's money on some of the most bizarre things one could imagine.

- Over $13M since 1993 was spent on researching potatoes. Not on anything in particular, they simply want to research potatoes. All that and they still can't get the spuds to do anything but grow and be eaten.
- $119M was spent by the Pentagon each year on commercials. Maybe we can get The Pulse in on that action.
- $2.2B was spent for one B-2 bomber, which means the plane, which weighs 160,000 pounds, is worth more than $15,000 per pound. That's three times more than gold. I wonder how long it will take for a rapper to have one in his video with 50-inch rims on it.
- Over $34M for screw worm research, which doesn't even exist in the U.S. anymore.
- And here's a good one, $11M spent by the Pentagon to employ psychics to provide military info. I guess that's where Miss Cleo got the money for her info commercials.

However, some of the smaller amounts spent are the most ridiculous!

- $180,000 to study owl vomit.
- $1M to study brown tree snakes (only found in Guam).
- $84,600 to discover why people fall in love.
- $40,000 to calculate how long it takes to cook eggs.
- $400,000 for the Maui Algal Bloom crisis (made even more ridiculous by the fact that there is no such crisis).
- $230,000 to buy a half-acre of land in Washington, DC it turns out the government already owned.

So even though you should feel like a fool for spending half of Uganda's GDP on your wardrobe, remember: no matter how extravagant you are, our government has always got you beat.

CAMPUS HUMOR
You Know You Go To Lynn If...

By JODI COHEN

* You're willing to park in a lake to avoid a Boca PD ticket
* The only reason you picked Lynn was because Jonathan Williamson gave you the campus tour
* You'll spend $3,000 on Gucci gear, but you'll run to the bar to save on two-fers
* You realized that the reason you paid more to live in the "New" Lynnh Resident Hall was for insurance on 7 A.M. flash floods
* You're wondering why the average age of freshman is 25
* You're on the 8 year plan and your parents are OK with it
* Your graduating in December and telling every freshman girl you meet that you're looking for a long-term relationship
* Your tuition includes a 5-day Carnival Cruise
* You can't figure out why it's 300 degrees in the middle of October
* You live in a gated community, where the gate is always broken
* You're wondering why you didn't go to FAU
* You've changed apartments 13 times in Centergate because your neighbors report you for noise violations
* You're aspiring to use your degree to become Lynn faculty

New Construction Temporarily Hampers Parking

By ADAM LOPEZ

If you couldn’t tell from the congestion in the North Lot and from the random cement trucks around campus, construction has begun on the new maintenance building. The building will be two stories high and will house all of the maintenance staff, the Events and Facilities Coordinator, the marketing department, and the Director of Physical Plans. It is scheduled for completion by March 1.

Though it currently inhibits parking spots and lanes, in the long run, says John Thomson, Lynn’s Director of Physical Plans, “It will save the school a lot of money. Right now, the school rents warehouses, and has some trailers to store school furniture. The second floor of this building will house all that furniture.”

The furniture includes beds, tables, desks, and Pine Tree camp equipment. Lynn will now be able to buy much of the furniture it usually rents for conferences and events, and store it in the maintenance building. Therefore, the building will eventually “pay for itself,” said Thomson.

When the new building is finished, the area where maintenance is currently located, right behind the cafeteria, will be vacant. It will most likely be used to expand the bookstore, and will become the site of the new mailroom, student cafe and outdoor patio.

“The outdoor patio will be much like the one in the Student Center, except it will have more trees. The location is perfect, since it is right in the middle of the school,” said Thomson.

However, this is still only in the concept stage of planning.

When construction is finished and the new maintenance building opens, the third row of the parking lot will re-open, relieving some of the parking stress students have been experiencing!

“LYNN” BURGERS

Two Lynn Hospitality Graduates Open Lindburger

By GABRIEL PREMINGER

Seth Rothman, Inside Lindburger

Four years ago, Lynn students, Jared Arson and Seth Rothman were new freshmen entering the hospitality program. Neither of them expected to be running a full-scale restaurant just four years later, but this is what happened.

In December of this past year, Arson and his father Marty, decided to buy into the Florida burger franchise, Lindburgers. They found a spot in the heart of Boca Raton on Rt. 1, just north of Glades Rd. Because Arson had moderate knowledge of the business, father and son decided there was no one better to run the restaurant than Arson’s long time friend and fellow hospitality major, Seth Rothman. Rothman had already interned at Pete Rose’s Ballpark Café, formerly of West Boca. He learned the management functions such as food purchasing, staffing and customer relations. With Rothman’s experience and expert training at Lynn by professors such as Dr. Linsley Deveau, Dr. James Downey and Dean Joseph Rooney, the Lindburger crew was ready to begin.

“I was very excited to open this restaurant,” said Rothman. “I could finally put everything I had learned to good use.”

The staff was hired, hand-picked by Rothman from his past co-workers and friends. On May 13, Lindburgers of Boca Raton officially opened to much success.

“The business has been doing very well and we definitely have the best burgers in town,” said Arson. “We have accomplished more than we ever thought possible. If all goes well, Lindburgers will be a national household name.”

Both Rothman and Arson will be graduating next May and plan to stay in Boca to expand the business. Rothman’s parents would like him to return to his native New Jersey, but he feels his career has been set and he wants to follow it. Arson, a resident of Boca Raton, plans to get more involved in the ownership after he graduates and run the business for himself.

Lynn Bookstore vs. the Internet
We visited three well known websites to see if we could get a better price.

There are many ways student can save some book bucks. Used books, more money... does this sound familiar? This is a common thought between many students at Lynn, where book prices are skyrocke

According to bookstore manager, Rita Lourreiro, the main reason is because the store buys small amounts of books from publishers. "The size of our school doesn't allow us to buy in bulk. We buy about a hundred books right away," Lourreiro said.

There are many ways student can save some book bucks. Used books, more money... does this sound familiar? This is a common thought between many students at Lynn, where book prices are skyrocketed. The average amount a student spends is between $400-600 for books each semester. But why?

"The construction workers ran. Sister Euphrohia picked up a big wooden stick from the construction site and killed the snake. Mother Superior very calmly said 'Gentlemen, Sister Euphrohia would like you to have this dormitory ready by the end of this week.' It was finished when the young women arrived."

"It is finished when the young women arrived."

As universities like Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame made admission for women easier, Marymount was not able to maintain enrollment. In 1971, nine years after the sisters of Sacred Heart of Mary established the college, the trustees decided to close the school. It was then the 27-year-old president of Wilmington College, Donald Ross, came to Boca Raton to purchase Marymount's library holdings. He immediately realized Marymount had great potential. He thought the campus was majestic and tranquil in a residential setting. It had everything Wilmington did not, which was situated on an old motel site in Delaware.

Ross persuaded the board of trustees of Wilmington to join with Marymount in an unique consortium to profit both colleges. The board agreed and nominated him as president. But Marymount's problems continued to plague Ross. He had to convince potential benefactors and banks in Boca the institution still had some life in it despite its $6 million debt.

Ross remembers the first fund raising event. "We held it on the patio outside the student center. We had a band and served Margaritas. I think ten people showed up. It was a hard sell."

In the early days Ross says, "Military Trail was a two-lane road about as far west as you could go. It ended on Glades, and you meandered down a small road to get to the Turnpike. One dirt road led out of the school. We used to joke that if a car came, it was probably lost."

"Despite the adversity Ross succeeded."

In 1974 Marymount became the College of Boca Raton. It was then when Ross asked insurance magnate Eugene Lynn - who had just moved his company from Kansas City right next to the campus - to give the school a mortgage. Lynn declined saying politely, "We don't lend money."

But at Christmas, Ross was delightfully surprised to receive a $100,000 personal check from Lynn. It was the beginning of a long and rewarding friendship. In 1991, the College of Boca Raton was renamed Lynn University to reflect the academic and global growth of the institution, and to honor the Lynn family who have been longtime benefactors. Since then Lynn has grown at astonishing speed.

"Universities like Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame made admission for women easier."
SCARS OF 9/11
INS New Procedures

By SELYMAR COLON

September 11, 2001 is a day that no one will forget. It was more than an attack to the United States; it is a war against world freedom. After years of different races trying to convey the American dream and actually surviving all the difficulties, one man, one day, one minute changed this forever. This is why this semester, professors have to take attendance in class, because they need to report any anomaly to a Designated School Official (DSO).

Because of 9/11, the U.S. government realized that "we have the laws but what are we doing with them," said Sheila Shephard-Sciarra, Assistant Director for International Programs and Services. The Department of Justice Office of the Inspector General, appointed that the Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS) had "deficiencies in the foreign student processes". This happened as a result of an investigation of the files of two of the terrorists of 9/11, in which they noticed they changed their status applications to students without much inconvenience.

Because of this the INS created the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS). SEVIS enables the INS "to collect information, on an ongoing basis, from schools and exchange programs relating to nonimmigrant foreign students and exchange students during the course of their stay in the United States" according to the Federal Register, Vol. 67, No. 95, Thursday, May 16, 2002.

SEVIS will be mandatory for all schools after January 31, 2003. International students in order to come in the United States, need to have an F, J or M visa. Each classification has a different purpose; F visa is strictly for students. The J visas are for exchange program students and falls under the Department of State. The M visa is for students in vocational schools. With this new program, new visas are coming too. What the INS is trying to create is a "barcode" that will identify every immigrant. When they go through immigration, the designated INS officer will enter that barcode and all the information of that student will come up. Mohammed Al Alawi said "America was not like this, now I feel uncomfortable because all these new procedures.

Some people may think that this is just what we needed to do, but, at the same time, foreigners may feel like they are part of a big prison, because almost everything has to be reported. An anonymous international student said, "It's good to maintain control of who gets in and out of the country but they are creating a stereotype and suspicion of the international students".

The INS says it has "to keep track" of them, as if they were a package. The international community understands this was going to happen. Due to 9/11 the US is creating more and more boundaries for foreigners to bring to life their own American dream. 9/11 was a tragedy but it doesn't seem appropriate to punish everyone because of one man and his followers.

LATIN GRAMMY WINNER
Colombian Rock Star Juanes Isn't Going Anywhere

By ALEJANDRA HANABERGH

Latin Grammy winner Juanes has done it again, taking home another Grammy for Best Rock Song at the third Annual Latin Grammy awards on Sept. 19.

In early 2002, Juanes released his second album, titled Un Dia Normal. Recorded in Los Angeles, Juanes teamed up once again with Spanish rock expert Gustavo Santaolalla who co-produced the album.

The first single from the album, "A Dios Le Pido," happened to be the Latin anthem for peace this summer. Capturing the Latin fusion of rock and the sultry sound of Colombian folk music, the song reached #1 in multiple countries throughout the world and remained in the top 5 in the U.S. Latin singles chart for over four months. "Es Por Ti," is the second single from the artist. It flares up a soft rock love song with the combination of Counting Crows meets U2. "Luna" is one of the tracks that displays rhythmic guitar strumming and combines sounds of cumbia (Colombia's cultural and ethnic sound), introducing instruments such as drums, congas, maracas, and flutes along with a type of vallenato nostalgia. Colombia's vallenato includes the sounds of accordions, Amazonian, Andean and local native Chimila Indian flutes and percussion.

Incorporating the vallenato style into his music clearly shows that fellow musician Carlos Vives, who has carried the native sound for several years, has rubbed off on young Juanes.

After the break up of Ekhymosis in 1998 Juanes, founder and creator of the Latin rock group, decided to move to L.A. and began working with producer Santaolalla. Having won three Latin Grammy's for his debut solo album Fijate Bien (Look Closely) released in 2000, his hard work has paid off in a market that is constantly changing searching for that unique sound. Juanes (Juan Esteban Aristizabal) who was born in Medellin, Colombia, was intrigued by many different sounds of music such as Led Zeppelin, Jimmy Hendrix, and Celia Cruz. The combination of urban, pop, rock, and Latin American rhythms really hit home for fellow Colombian listeners and are guaranteed to keep this 28-year-old Colombian star rocking for years to come.
GET ON BOARD!
The Opportunities You Are Missing
By SELYMAR COLON

Lynn has a large International community. But do people have the opportunity to know more than the one culture that surrounds them? The answer is no. Many of Lynn graduates have said, after they graduate and become part of the workforce, they realized how lucky they were to have people from all over the world around them. But they regret not taking the time to know them better.

Along with many other things, the school has a Study Abroad program. College is the perfect time to travel and have a one-on-one interaction with other cultures. LU’s Study Abroad program offers three options: Ireland, Japan and Argentina. But students also have the opportunity to attend non-Lynn programs. Non-Lynn programs are any programs Study Abroad is not affiliated with. For example if you want to go abroad to Madrid, Spain you do it through the Study Abroad office but it is a non-Lynn program.

If choose to go abroad to any of Lynn’s affiliates you pay that school’s tuition, which, in many cases, is lower than Lynn’s. Also many of Lynn’s Study Abroad program applications come from non-Lynn students, who are interested in the three tours available.

The American College in Dublin is a small, private college located in downtown Georgian Dublin. “Dublin is Ireland’s national capital and largest city. It is a city of young people, which offers an overwhelming array of cultural venues and events”, according to Lynn’s Study Abroad Brochure. Justin Bodner, a graduating senior said, “Dublin was a great experience and attending a school in another country was a completely different learning style”.

The Japan program offers a greater variety of schools and the opportunity to experience “the beauty of Japan and become part of the country’s centuries old traditions, vibrant culture, unique geography, dynamic performing arts and extraordinary festivals”, according to Lynn’s Study Abroad Brochure.

Buenos Aires, Argentina is the host city of it’s Lincoln University College. Students have the opportunity to immerse themselves in Latin American culture while at the same time enjoying two summers during one calendar year because seasons are reversed south of the equator.

Argentina’s capital, Buenos Aires, “is a thriving port city where people are friendly and welcoming to students and visitors. A European style, cosmopolitan city with picturesque architecture, it has the finest offerings in culture and art as well as a famous nightlife including late night eateries, coffee shops, weekend markets and discotheques”, according to Lynn’s Study Abroad Brochure.

Jamie Myers, Study Abroad Director, said, “The best time to go abroad is your sophomore year”. Myers also said, “When you go abroad, you have a better outlook of life because you are surrounded by other cultures”.

Imagine studying and getting credit while you experience other parts of the world. From non-Lynn Programs, you can choose from anything. The only thing you need to do is pick the school and country you would like to study in and the Study Abroad office will patiently take care of all your paperwork and guide you through all the necessary steps.

Being abroad can make you realize how small this big world can be. Besides the study abroad programs, you can also choose from one year to four week programs. The Academic Tours vary from year to year and they reserve only 16 spots for students and faculty members for the tour. This past year, one of their study tours was to Germany. Students received three credit hours for a communication course. Along with many other things, students who went on this trip said that the best part is, they were learning, having fun and getting credits while interacting with the German culture. The Academic Study Tours include accommodations, ground transportation, and tickets for museums, and parks, among other things. The Academic Adventure this year will be in January and it will be a cruise in which approximately 500 of the passengers will be Lynn students.

Meeting other cultures helps you grow as a person and gives you many tools that can be helpful in your real life scenarios. College is the best time to do it.

SPRECHEN SIE DEUTSCHES?
Students Tour Media Facilities in Berlin
By RAGHU VEER SINGH

Dr. Erika Grodzki, and Dr. Sharaq Rehman organized a study tour to study the media outlets and museums, and to give the students a better understanding of the history and the methodology of German media. I was on the trip and we were encouraged to investigate the differences between German and American media systems.

On the July 7, the students arrived at Tegel International Airport. Some endured the 9-hour flight from the U.S. to Berlin, while others, already in Europe, met up with the group. After we checked into the sparsely decorated Fjord Hotel, we all walked to the Sony Center at Postdamer Platz for dinner. We were 15 - some from the College of International Communication, and some from other colleges at Lynn.

The trip included comprehensive lectures and visits to Berlin’s leading newspapers.

“The trip included comprehensive lectures and visits to Berlin’s leading newspapers, TV stations and film museums. The two newspapers were, Der Tagesspiegel and Beliner Zeitung.

The tours, lectures and cultural excursions enhanced the courses we take, making a study-abroad experience a must for any Lynn student.
"College radio prides itself on being independently student run and operated."

SAVE THE WAVES
Lynn Radio's Plight

At least half a minute had passed and still there was only silence. I checked the board where all the lights had mysteriously turned off and it was still dark. I turned the volume level up on the control panel and tapped the microphone, but nothing was coming through the speakers. By now over a minute of broadcast silence had gone by, which in radio time feels like forever. Panic set in, I was sure I had broken the radio station.

This was my first experience on the air at Lynn Radio. Since then, I have come a long way in avoiding on-air disasters. In fact, last semester my job as Station Manager required that I show others how to negotiate those long seconds of silence when the "on-the-air" light flashes and suddenly the overhead lights in the DJ booth seem much brighter. The radio station has also come a long way after suffering its own long lapse of on-air silence, and is in the process of making a full recovery.

When I took over the job of managing the station, it was facing several issues preventing us from broadcasting. Both the location of the station and the broadcasting capability were not the most desirable, which, in turn, were responsible for a lack of student interest and involvement. In an attempt to correct these things, the university offered to provide a new facility and better broadcasting equipment. With this however, the university requested that the station switch its format from playing music to "college" radio, a talk and news station. After meetings with members of the radio station and Lynn students, it was agreed to find another solution in order to preserve the existing identity and philosophy of the station.

College radio prides itself on being independently student run and operated, and by giving the creative control to the university. We felt we would ultimately be betraying that. Unfortunately, left with our existing facilities and only a handful of dedicated station members, by October the radio station became vacant and eventually went off the air.

The second half of the same month turned out to have far different results. With sponsorship from an Associate Dean from the College of International Communications, Dr. David Jaffe, it was agreed the station needed to be relocated, but could retain the existing format. In exchange, the radio station would continue to broadcast on campus as it had before, but would also develop a format to broadcast over the Internet under the name Lynn Radio so news and talk shows could be developed.

This solution not only allowed the station to preserve its student identity, but also gave us the opportunity to reach a much larger audience. Now students taking production classes in the College of International Communications are using the station as a learning facility. This has caused the level of interest and involvement with the station to increase dramatically, which is what we were ultimately trying to accomplish. By the end of the Fall semester, Lynn Radio was back on the air and live programming was available to students most evenings of the week. The Internet broadcasting format is still being developed and will hopefully be available online by the end of this term.

In retrospect, it was beneficial that the radio station held out for its principles because a good compromise between independence and a learning resource for the university in teaching this technology has been found. This semester we are going to collect student pieces on a variety of topics and have them available as audio files on the radio station website. Most important is that the buzz on campus is back and students are again interested in their school radio station. Fortunately, the university listened to us as well. Now many others will get to experience that state of euphoric panic the first time the on-the-air light goes on for them.

HANGIN' AROUND
Welcome To Boca Raton

By ADAM LOPEZ

Welcome to Boca Raton, where the old people lay, and sit around the mall like every day. Big cars, rich cars, with old men roamin', and they don't wake-up 'till six in the morn'.

Boca nightlife- is that an oxymoron? Is there really anything to do when the sun sets? Surprisingly, yes. Here's a short list of spots.

TGIFriday's (Boca Town Centre) - This isn't your father's Friday's, or even the same Friday's from two years ago, but it still brings them in. Draft is only a buck during college or pro football games. On Tuesdays, they have a 5-for-5 special, five beers for $5. The deals bring in mass quantities of people. Whether you hate football or are a fanatic, Friday's is the place to be!

O'Connells (off US 1 just south of Palmetto) - Come to this Irish pub any Thursday night and you'll never see more people crammed into one little tight spot. With one bar, a live band and dart in the back, it's nice.

Duffy's (off St. Andrews) - This sports bar is a new player. They run a range of specials, including 5-for-5. Duffy's has big TVs with games on at all times.

O'Connell's (off US 1 just south of Palmetto) - Come to this Irish pub any Thursday night and you'll never see more people crammed into one little tight spot. With one bar, a live band and dart in the back, it's nice to be Irish at least once a week.

Duffy's (off St. Andrews) - This sports bar is a new player. They run a range of specials, including 5-for-5. Duffy's has big TVs with games on at all times.

This is just a short list of places to go to. If you would like to see your favorite place highlighted, please send a letter to: Lynn University, The Pulse, Office of Student Activities, 3601 N. CHEAP EATS
Cheeburger Cheeburger - A Joint So Nice, They Named It Twice!

By RENEN KATZ

If you want to bite into more than a cardboard pizza for a change, then check out Cheeburger Cheeburger. Named after the classic John Belushi and Dan Ackroyd "Saturday Night Live", this 80's era stylish restaurant lives up to it's TV counterpart, serving "no Coke, only Pepsi."

Put that $10 you found under your bed to good use. Forget McDonalds and Burger King, you can have what I ordered a cheeseburger, small fries, and soft drink. This is not your ordinary fast-food burger. My waiter asked me how I wanted it prepared, and what two free toppings I wanted on my cheeseburger, pickles and onions, of course! Every cheeseburger is made to order. And this cheeseburger was nothing short of excellent.

Their signature, which makes this post hip burger joint and popular hangout spot impressive, is their 20-ounce "Pounder". The name says it's but this heavy mountain of meat has a twist. Finish it and have your picture taken and hung on the wall of big biters for all to see. I stopped counting pictures after 50.

Adding to an already well thought-out menu are shakes, malts and root beer floats, with flavors ranging from Amaretto to Vanilla. There are over 50 flavors to pick from.

Cheeburger Cheeburger is a national chain, established in ten states, and growing every month. With over with six locations in South Florida, the closest is right here in Boca at 200 S. Federal Highway, just south of the Palmetto Park Road intersection. Give them a call at 561-392-1969.

VOYAGE TO INDIA
She Not Your Average Girl From The Video

By MICHELE JACABACCI

India.Arie is a singer, songwriter and guitar player who was discovered during the second stage performance a few years back at the Lilihit Fair in Atlanta. Months later, she signed to MOTOWN records and released the 7-time Grammy-nominated CD, Acoustic Soul. On Sept. 24, she dropped her second CD, Voyage to India.

Arie's heartfelt music has an R&B meets soul feel to it. Most of her songs contain a rich melody and natural instrumental sounds. Tracks such as Video (Acoustic Soul), Headed in the right direction (Voyage to India), and Growth (Voyage to India) all give the same message, love yourself!

Voyage to India was written in hotel rooms while on a 10-month tour. Arie said she was really mad when she walked away empty handed at the Grammy's. "It just seemed unfair," said Arie.

Her first single off Voyage, Little Things, is about that night. It's a perfect example of how she uses music as a healing tool.

It did not discourage her, though. She wrote some songs, took a vacation to Jamaica and came up with a slogan for herself: "Be true to my music and let the chips fall where they may." The only pressure she felt was to make music she liked.

She will soon be headlining a tour, Voyage to India. She is preparing for the tour with rehearsals.

"I will be getting in touch on a more personal level and catching up on sleep," said Arie.

CHIC EATS
WHAT A DIFFERENCE A 'DAY' MAKES!

A mororous ambience; delectable dinners; and attentive waiters at Yesterday's, where classic elegance meets contemporary chic for a sizzling result.

It's no surprise South Florida restaurateur Peter Beck owns the place. His other eateries-Aruba Beach Café, H2O Bar and Grille and Casablanca Café-are all on the oceanfront, save Yesterday's on the Intercoastal.

Located on East Oakland Park Boulevard, Yesterday's is a haven for the well-heeled student, baby-socialite and daters having a night on the town. Inside, the chicchi furnishings and red color scheme are an electrifying aphrodisiac. Strut down the velvet carpeted ramp and to your left is the expansive sunken bar. Straight ahead is the main dining area with a 180 degree view of the water.

But, honey; the digs' eye candy is just a start. The waiters will never neglect you, even when the place is flooded with diners. The Continental cuisine is world class.

As for an appetizer, the cup of Roasted Maine Lobster Bisque (5.95) was concise in flavor but the dearth of lobster chunks spoiled the consistency for the already perfectly thick bisque. On a diet? Avoid the drowned-in-dressing Caesar salad (4.95).

As for an entrée, my fav was the Rosemary Rubbed New Zealand Rack of Lamb with sautéed spinach and dauphine potatoes (26.95). My only baaa! was for mint jelly as a spread. But in two shakes of a lamb's tail, my waiter whisked it to my table.

If you aren't feelin' bo peepish, sink those chompers into Certified Black Angus (18.95-12oz. $26-16.oz). Opt for medium-well: my last order was a little overdone when I asked for well. For the surf-catcher, Yesterday's Fresh Florida Yellowtail Snapper Ponchartrain, pan seared and served with shrimp, crabmeat, toasted almonds and lemon beurre blanc, or lemon sauce($23.95), saves you a trip to Key West to taste the popular melt-in-your-mouth fish.

Lastly, the dessert menu delivers the K.O punch. Unfortunately for moi, the Tiramisu was MIA from the menu because of a recent bill of fare revamp. But there was a sinful substitute: Chocolate Mud Cappuccino with White Cappuccino mousse and Vanilla ice cream over a sunny brownie—an endless hot fudge cup blanketed in whipped cream. Pass the wheelbarrow, please!

This win meant a lot to our team because they beat us twice last year and went on the win the National Championship.”

“That attitude to the department and wants to make sure everything runs smoothly.”

Lynn’s Fighting Knights are not only undefeated with an overall record of 10-0-0, but they are at the top of the country after taking down the University of Tampa 4-1 in the first conference game of the season.

The Knights, behind 0-1 at halftime on Sept. 28 at home against the Tampa Spartans, controlled the game in the second half, shutting down the Spartans defense. The Knights scored four goals coming back to win 4-1 in their first conference match.

“This win meant a lot to our team because they beat us twice last year and went on to win the National Championship. It was very important to win 4-1 over Tampa to start conference,” said senior captain Tom Davies.

On Oct. 5, the Knights took down Rollins College, 2-0, at home for their second conference victory.

In the National Soccer Coaches Association of America/Adidas National Rankings, the Knights are number two in the country as of the Oct. 7 poll. They rank number one in the NCAA Division II South Region.

In the season’s first nine games, Lynn dominated their opponents, scoring 32 goals during their winning streak, while their opponents have only scored five. Averaging 23.3 shots per game, the defense has only allowed 6.9 attempts from opponents. In six of 10 games, the Knights have scored four or more goals leading to their victories. The depth of talent is a key factor, while 11 different players have scored goals for the Knights.

Leading the team in goals is Chris Karagianis with six and Anton Lundstedt and Andrew Hirst with five. Two others have four, Mark Melling and Garthfield Whyte.

At the top in assists category is Lee Dukes with five. Christopher Knox has chipped in with four, following close behind with three each are Anton Lundstedt, Mark Dunkerley, and Davies.

Anchoring the defense is freshman goalie Kevin Street. With three perfect shutout games, Street has 24 goals saves on the season, allowing only 4 in 7 matches, for a save percentage of .857.

CHANGES IN THE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT

John McCarthy brings promise to the program

By STEVE COLLINS

John McCarthy, a Lynn University alumni, was recently named the new Athletic Director to replace Dr. Dick Young. McCarthy, the former Blue and White Club Chairman, is determined to make the sports program a great experience for the student-athletes at Lynn.

While pursuing his Master’s degree at Lynn, McCarthy wrote a 45-page thesis on how to run the athletic department. His emphasis was, “Don’t fix something if it isn’t broke.”

McCarthy brings that attitude to the department and wants to make sure everything runs smoothly. His main concern is fixing the sports facilities. Building new fields, as well as restoring old ones, is first priority for the new director.

“I like to surround myself with great people,” said McCarthy when commenting on the athletic staff.

McCarthy received his Bachelor’s degree from the University of Delaware where he studied history with a concentration in journalism. He earned his master’s degree at Lynn with a concentration in sports management. He coached men’s basketball at Wilmington College for three years as an assistant and four as head coach.

That’s where he met Dr. Donald Ross, Lynn’s president, and came to Boca to become chairmen of the Blue and White Club.

McCarthy is very thankful for his new position.

“I will find a way to make everyone proud,” said McCarthy, promising that he’ll work around the clock to make sure everything is done right.

Women's Soccer Team Looks to Second Half

By SARA QUATROCKY

Lynn's women's soccer team is having a season that is out of character for the Knights. Struggling to maintain control of their own season, they have accumulated an overall record of 3-5-3 after the first 11 games, and have fallen to 1-3-2 in conference play.

The Knights three double-overtime ties have played a crucial part in the team's destination, with two of them coming in conference play against the Moccasins of Florida Southern College (1-1) on Sept. 21 and The Eckerd College Tritons (3-3) on Sept. 29.

The lone conference win was on Sept. 22 at home against St. Leo University, 3-1.

In the NCAA Division II South Region, the team ranks seventh, losing ground on a season that had high hopes.

With only one senior, Kim Covell, the Knights are working to rebuild the program for 2003.

Nine different players have contributed to the team's season total of 15 goals. Leading the team in goals scored are Piper Seaman and Kim Pyra with 3, Angela Rossini and Kim Covell each have 2.

The Knight's assist leader, after 11 games, is Adrianne Peterson with 3. Four other players have added 2 assists this year.

Megan Vondal and Kelly Friedrich have split time at goalie throughout the first half of the season. Vondal, playing in eight games, has recorded 35 saves for a percentage of .673, while posting 2 shutouts back-to-back against Alabama Huntsville on Sept. 2, and North Florida University on Sept. 7.

Friedrich has played in 5 games for the Knights, allowing only 6 goals, while racking up 14 saves, for a percentage of .700.

The Knights now try to turn around the season in the second half of play.
