LYNN STUDENT DIES OF SUSPECTED DRUG OVERDOSE
Theodore “Teddy” Russell
June 24, 1981 - October 29, 2002
By SHEENA FOSTER, and MICHELE JACABACCI

Theodore Russell, a junior and Business Management Major at Lynn died on Oct. 29 of a suspected drug overdose. He was 21.

Russell, tagged “Teddy” by close friends, had just returned from Key West after attending Fantasy Fest-an annual attraction that draws thousands of area college students-just in time for Monday classes, said his roommate, 21-year-old Ed Kotlyarov, a Lynn International Relations major who joined the group in the Keys.

Teddy had seemed a little under the weather during the trip, Ed claimed. “He was the quiet type that swept things under the rug,” he said, adding that his change in behavior was “noticeable.”

His mother also noted that Ted seemed to be having a “bad week.”

But Sean, Teddy’s younger brother who also tagged along to Key West, disagrees. “Nothing sounded wrong with him.”

On Monday, Teddy called Sean, 19, who was en route from Miami, at 7 A.M. to “shoot the breeze” about the Key West weekend. Sean remembered that he had a “blast” with his brother and close friends. “We stayed at the Crowne Plaza La Concha hotel and watched the parade from the rooftop both nights...then we went down to party.”

On Monday, Ted only attended his evening class, Business Law II, according to Sean and Kotlyarov. But that would be the last time he would step foot on Lynn soil.

After class, Ted returned to his Arbor Club Way apartment for an episode of heavy drinking.

“He drank beers and tequila,” remembered Ed.

As always, when Teddy slept, he played music and closed his door so Ed was not alarmed when Teddy “stayed” in his room.

WARNED, TICKETED, TOWED
Student Cars Disappear

By RENEN KATZ

Warning: if you’re one of those few hundreds students, who feel a little ticket or illegal parking is worth eliminating a short walk, forget it. Your car might just disappear.

In the past few weeks, campus security officers have written over 40 tickets to students. Feeling the fines are too small to get the attention of Lynn students, and are not having any effect, the school has instituted a towing policy.

From now on, according to sources in the school administration, anyone who is caught illegally parked by security after receiving a first ticket may well have their car towed. If you think the school isn’t about to tow, because it’s private property, think again. School officials say they have had it! They are working closely with security and, according to security officials, at least three students had their cars towed. One hapless parking violator had his car towed twice, according to Dean Paul Tuner.

“Right now we are towing students, but only those whom we feel are ignoring the tickets by security. The hope we have is that it only takes a few students to get word around campus that the illegal parking will not be tolerated any more.

However if we do not see a change in the parking situation, we may authorize security to tow more than the students who are ignoring the tickets,” said Tuner.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR
The Spirit We Never Had
By ERICA DIERMEIER
School spirit fills gymnasium where twenty-one young women practice three days week learning dances and cheer routines. These women have dedicated a great deal of time, effort, and enthusiasm to provide Lynn students with exciting half-time dances, stunts, and cheering, at basketball games.
Cheerleading and dance team coach, Lisa Scala said, "This years squad has come a long way. We have doubled our numbers and created a cohesive squad. With both dance team and the cheerleading team combined, we are able to have great performances."
The dance team has shown talent over the past years, but the cheerleaders were slower to reach their full abilities. By the time basketball season would begin the cheerleading squad had fallen apart. But Scala keeps a positive attitude about both squads.
"The team and I look forward to this year and making spirit at this school bigger and better than ever."

AMERICA SHOULD ATTACK Hussein Must Go
By ADAM LOPEZ
With the possibility of war against his country, Saddam Hussein has agreed to let U.N. inspectors back into his country.
However, do not believe that war is not in the future for Iraq.
Think of this as a prelude to war. The Bush administration has made it clear they want Saddam out. If any evidence turns up that Iraq has been trying to make nuclear weapons, Hussein should expect to be greeted with a lot of smart bombs.
But, should America attack Iraq if the inspectors find evidence of a nuclear program, or are not granted full access to Iraq?
Yes they should.
Hussein is unpredictable scheming dictator by force who will try to manipulate everyone while he is on his way to the ultimate goal: Nuclear power.
In my views, this prelude is forcosmetic purposes only. Bush wants Hussein out. after all, this is the guy who tried to assassinate his dad.
But family vengeance aside, Bush wants stability in the Middle East. He wants this barbarian, this tyrannical dictator out. This will happen.
Hussein has flagrantly defied the U.N. He even sent them out of his country in 1998. He has lied about the development of chemical and biological weapons. In 1988, according to a report by the U.S. Department of State, he slaughtered 5,000 Iraqi Kurds and injured 10,000 more with chemical weapons. These are his own people. McCarthyism may have died in the states but it is alive and well in Iraq. When Hussein first took office, he had all leaders whom he believed to be traitors, executed. This was during a government council meeting, which was taped. After this, a hotline was set up on Iraqi TV so citizens could turn each other in. Now a day's all Hussein needs is to suspect someone of being disloyal to tie a noose around their neck or cut off their head. These are not the actions of a sane person.

MESSAGE FROM KOR
PRESIDENT
By JONATHAN WILLIAMSON
The school year is in full swing and the next thing you know, we'll be studying for finals and heading home for the holidays. It's funny how quickly time flies and it's hard to believe that KOR is celebrating their twentieth anniversary. Throughout the years, KOR has had many roles on the Lynn University campus: Orientation leaders, tour guides, and ambassadors.
One of my favorite KOR activities is the Holiday Gala. We are currently in the final planning stages for this year's gala, scheduled for Friday, Dec.
6 at Maggiano's in Boca Raton. This year's theme is "Oi! What a Knight!" It is a time to celebrate everyone's accomplishments over the past semester and it brings closure to the year before everyone buckles down for finals.
The gala will consist of a cocktail hour, followed by dinner and dancing.
The party usually draws to a close around midnight, so the night will still be young for those of you that wish to continue your evening elsewhere.
Ticket sales for this event will take place during lunch mid-November and I encourage you to purchase your tickets in advance as they always sell quickly for this semi-formal event. Stop up to student activities, or call 237-7154 for more information.

VOICE YOUR OPINION
Student Government Association
By MICHELE JACABACCI
Alive Thomas was elected as our Student Government Association president last year. SGA is a group of student leaders dedicated to the opinions and concerns of the students.
Since Thomas was sworn in, she has only made one change, but it's a big one: restructuring SGA. The senators now represent each organization on campus, including athletics and honors society.
"My executive board and I are very excited about this change and feel this will strengthen the student government," said Thomas.
A change that Thomas has planned for the future is about the parking situation, which we all know is a huge problem. Thomas spoke with John Lalow, Head of the Parking Committee, who said he has been working with the administration to provide some relief. SGA has also been working on a security survey, which should help.
"We need everyone's cooperation and patience regarding this problem."
Including Thomas, the SGA executive board consists of six members, Robert Cullen, vice president; Laura Thal, secretary; Jodi Cohen, KAT president; Alison Lazurus, RHA president; and Natale Servino, treasurer.
The faculty advisor is Kelly Rose who helps organize objectives and direction.
Students interested in voicing their opinion to SGA are welcome at the next two meetings Dec. 2, and 16.

LET’S TALK ABOUT SEX
If Men Are From Mars, Then It's A Good Thing Women Found A Way Off That Planet
By SUE SULTRY

The 1998 release of the movie, "Can't Hardly Wait," was when we first heard these immortal words spoken by the virginal, yet sexually intelligent Kenny Fischer, played by Seth Green.

"It says here, 92 percent of bunnies at UCLA are sexually active. Ninety-two percent of women in Los Angeles at UCLA are walking around thinking class or sex, what shall I do? Ninety-two percent, yo!"

Think it's exaggerated? Not! I polled 20 students at Lynn and found 85 percent were sexually active.

But unlike Kenny Fischer, who’s packin' a pleasure chest filled with scented candles, Kama Sutra, massage oil, whipped cream and a jumbo box of condoms, there's other ways to get next to the ladies!

Contrary to what you might think, women are not always looking for the $300 dinners and gleaming jewelry. Sure, that is nice, but what a girl really needs is an orgasm.

But according to the women I polled, the majority can count on one hand how many male enhanced orgasms they’ve had. Yet those same women still read “85 Hot Ways To Wow A Man" each month in Cosmo.

But seriously, men think they have it rough because women expect them to open a condom and put it on before they get down. No girl actually expects a guy to listen to what her wants and needs are.

"Me first" should be tattooed on every women's forehead.

ANGRY STEVE
The Things I Think But Do Not Say
By ANGRY STEVE

Finally, I get to vent all of my frustrations I have inside. The little things that happen every day that just get under my skin. In my four years at Lynn, there have been some people that drive me absolutely crazy. In the way they act, talk, walk, dress or just for who they are. I’ve been here for awhile so I’ve seen a lot of them. I have made some good friends, but there a few that make me lose my mind. Let me describe some of them for you.

Problem: The un-wanted friend. Everyone knows that guy or girl who comes to talk to you. The person you really don’t want to listen to because they're annoying and their conversations are pointless (you know who you are). The person that won’t leave you alone no matter how much you ignore them.

Solution: Start singing the Star-Spangled-Banner and spin around in circles. They’ll never want to talk to you again. Trust me, it works I've done it.

Problem: The un-funny class clown. The annoying person in class who blurts out meaningless things that aren’t funny at all. Listen pal here’s a hint; if no one laughs then it’s not funny. I almost feel bad for because you make a fool of yourself. Just do everyone a favor and keep quiet. People will like you better for it.

Solution: Laugh as hard as you can, so loud it seems ridiculous. Say things like, "Your so funny," "How did you get so funny?" Laugh so hard you fall off your seat and onto the floor. Make a fool out of yourself. It’s a small price to pay, but they’ll think twice before making a stupid comment again.

I have a lot more to get off my chest next time, but for now I’ve had enough. I feel much better.

BENJAMIN’S BLOATED BAG OF OPINIONS
The Plight Of The Nice Guy
By BENJAMIN JOSLIN

Some people say women are smarter than men. And while I have to agree for the most part, women also have a tendency to complicate matters. Men are often happy with a cute face and a smile when it comes to choosing prospective mates. Women on the other hand, seem to want to turn the matter into some kind of complex military maneuver involving long range surveillance, propaganda and mind altering medical experiments.

You would think all the effort put into choosing a significant other would lead to excellent choices in the men they date. I know I’m not the only one who considers himself a nice guy and tries to treat his significant other like a queen, and yet, for some reason, we end up alone and bitter.

Don’t worry my fellow lonely losers; I have some answers for you. About three years ago I sold my soul to Diablo for a chance to date an amazing girl. I had the opportunity to ask a women some questions. Through this extensive research I have come up with some explanations.

Women like power, challenge, and excitement. The guy you know who’s a cruel scumbag is usually getting the girl for those three reasons. A woman will see a big handsome guy who’s just a pure jerk and say to herself, “Wow if I could change him and make him a good guy, he would be the man of my dreams.” The idea of being able to shape and mold a man into the perfect guy is too tempting to pass up, especially when he looks good. A guy who’s already potentially the man of her dreams? No challenge! The excitement comes from knowing she’s with a guy who’s a little bit of a bad boy, who might shock or surprise her.

And of course, who do these women run to when they realize the bad boy is no good for her? Why the nice guy of course. This nice guy has fallen into the friend zone, also known as the dreaded zone of “you will never be with me ever, but I’ll talk to you every day to remind you that I’m attractive and someone else is seeing me naked.” She’ll cry on your shoulder and ask you why she can’t meet a nice guy. This of course will get your hopes up she’ll finally notice you are one of those guys. You’ll wake up the next morning feeling great and eager to see her. Until that is, you catch her flirting with that guy and you suddenly realize that the only thing more contradictory then a woman is well... nothing.

I had the opportunity to ask a women some questions. Through this extensive research I have come up with some explanations.
TASTING A NEW EXPERIENCE
Culinary Lab Opens In School Of Hospitality
By DAYNA ALPERT

From fryers to fridges, this lab has everything it takes to give students the taste of a new experience.

Hospitality students here at Lynn have a lot to look forward to this spring. Thanks to the generous donations by Benjamin Olewine III, Ruth and Baron Coleman, and John and Barbara Fox, a new state-of-the-art culinary lab exists on campus. Directors of this program are Dean Joe Rooney and Professor David Schapiro. From fryers to fridges, this lab has everything it takes to give students the taste of a new experience.

Students can get a taste of the whole dining experience in the Food Production course beginning in the Spring 2002 semester. This course will be taught by Lynn’s own certified Executive Chef, John Mondone, who is in charge of all food services. For hospitality students who enrolled during the Fall 2002 semester and later, Food Production (HA345) will be considered a requirement. The first classes are being offered this spring.

This program will go hand-in-hand with the Christine Room program, which is considered to be the “front-of-house” component for hospitality students. Front-of-house operations are serving, seating, and making sure of complete dining satisfaction for the guest- done in the main dining rooms of restaurants. Food Production is considered the “back-of-house” component. This gives students appreciation and experience with the cooking and preparation required for a restaurant to be successful.

Specialized courses will also be offered for PACE students, and continuing education adults. These classes will offer skills needed in making Christmas or Thanksgiving dinners. Who wouldn’t want to perfect their turkey or to wow everyone with their ham? There is always something that can be added to turn a meal into a masterpiece. In addition, students will learn cooking basics, like how to make homemade sauces, sharpen their knife skills, and some basic rules of thumb in the kitchen.

This program will add to Lynn’s many specialized programs which teach students what they need to know in the classroom, in addition to what they will need for the real world.

Hospitality students are in for a real treat this spring!

NEW DORM, NEW PROBLEMS
False Fire Alarms Plague EMLR
By SHEENA FOSTER

When Christine E. Lynn, multi-millionaire benefactor to Lynn University, helped break ground for the 93,410 square foot, five story E. M. Lynn Residence Center (EMLR) the afternoon of April 20, 2001, she knew the luxurious dorm would offer numerous amenities for its 275 occupants.

Today, Lynn administrative officials, who pride themselves on the good safety stats of the 123-acre campus, are none to happy. EMLR had three false fire alarms on Oct. 3, Oct. 8 and Oct. 14, mainly prank fire alarms - somebody pulling down a fire alarm lever - that occurred in the early hours of morning, said students.

According to Lynn security officer Chris Orcinolo, when an alarm is triggered the Boca Raton Fire Department is called from the monitoring system. Simultaneously, officers wake students and usher them outside.

“We try to knock on doors and evacuate as many as possible out of their dorms.”

According to Lt. Norm England at the Boca Raton Fire Department Services, the false alarm responses cost $875.

Students like EMLR resident Patty Pierro want to know what being done to ensure the prank alarms stop. “It’s hard to get a goodnight’s sleep around here.”

Head security chief Lou Oporto said, “We’ve put our lieutenants on shift from 11 P.M. to 7 A.M. to patrol each floor. And as always we control the access on campus at nighttime.”

Tony Casale, Vice President and Executive Assistant to the President said, “I can assure you the vast majority of Lynn students are law-abiding citizens and [the offenders] are a small, target group of people.”

If indeed this person is a student, Greg Malfitano, senior vice president, threatens severe punishment. “If we catch this person, I’m kicking him outta here!” he said firmly.

Dean of Students, Paul Turner agrees. “If we receive irrefutable evidence against a person then I would recommend their dismissal and also report them to the police.”

The malicious prankster will have more to worry about after getting kicked out of Lynn: being a felon. False fire alarms are a violation of State Law 806.101. which carry a hefty $10,000 fine and jail time.

Now that’s food for thought!

THE HIGH COST OF OFF-CAMPUS LIVING
Having A Place Of Your Own
By LOURDES CARRERA

How much is too much? According to the latest Florida Price Level Index, Palm Beach County is the second most expensive county to live, topped only by west coast Monroe County where Naples is located. Although Palm Beach County has always been in the top five, this year it posted its highest ranking. For many college students this is bad news.

Though many wish to be independent from campus living, and want to enjoy college life on their own, problems arise when students realize how expensive their own place can be.

According to Grace Bonnie, apartment consultant at the apartment complex of Reflections of Boca Del Mar, “Boca Raton is a beautiful safe area. It is centrally located, close to Ft. Lauderdale and the West Palm Beach area.”

We compared the different communities in the three areas. All had about the same amenities, like gym, pool, picnic areas, washer/dryer in each unit, and tennis courts, and the here is what we found:

<tr>

<th>1 bed rm</th>

<td>$900</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BOYNTON BEACH*</td>

* Prices are the average per month of four separate apartment complexes

In addition to the monthly rent, we must add extras like security deposit, pet deposit, pool/golf course view deposit and utilities. Of course, it really helps if you have a roommate. Everything is cut in half and you can still enjoy your space.

So if you are willing to drive a little bit, and pay a little more money, you might be able to find something that fits your budget. The key is to look around and find a place you can call your own.

COLLEGE SPOTLIGHT
The Conservatory School Of Music At Lynn University
By ANDREW VERMES

No longer will you hear the sounds of pounding speakers and screaming college students when you pass by the deHoernle Residence Hall. Now, the soothing sounds of trumpets, pianos, violins, and xylophones fill the air.

The Conservatory School of Music at Lynn has come a long way since the beginning of this school year. During the summer months, the Conservatory moved from their building on the Harid campus, down the street, to the deHoernle Residence Hall on the south side of campus.

With the help of generous donors like Ruth Kraft and Imelda Wellington, the school was able to remodel the dormitory rooms for musical education and performance. Carpeted floors and thickened walls were added to enhance the acoustical experience, as a result of a donation by the late Kraft.

“Thanks to her generosity, we are going to have, for many generations to come, a number of people coming from around the world that will be receiving this instruction that we are so proud of here at the Conservatory,” said Dr. Claudio Jaffe, Dean of the School of Music.

Offering a Bachelor of Music degree in Performance, as well as a professional studies diploma, the Lynn Conservatory of Music is establishing itself as one of the leading conservatories within a university environment. Students have gone to graduate school, played with local, national and international orchestras, and become teachers.

The Amarnick-Goldstein Concert Hall, located in the deHoernle International Center, has become the school’s primary performance venue.

“In terms of acoustics, I find that it is much more realistic, in terms of what it’s like to be playing out in the concert halls of the world,” says Jaffe.

Special events set for this year include Beethoven’s Birthday Celebration, a benefit that will include Conservatory students and faculty performing some of the composer’s finest works. The Lynn University Philharmonia Orchestra and the Florida Philharmonic Orchestra will be hosting another benefit, showcasing the talents of the Conservatory students in cooperation with Florida Philharmonic artists.

Come out and see the students and faculty of the Lynn Conservatory of Music perform for your pleasure at one of the many concerts throughout the year.

VOICES FROM THE PAST
The Importance of Alumni
By RAGHU VEER SINGH

Garth Fowles is a happy man, very busy, but nevertheless happy. With the resounding success of Families Weekend, Fowles is proud to say this year’s event has had the largest participation from an alumni’s perspective in Lynn’s history.

Alumni play an important role at Lynn. Currently, the Student Alumni Association, headed by Fowles, has 6800 alumni listed in their database, and they are adding more names day by day. This includes graduates from Lynn, the College of Boca Raton, and Marymount College.

Lynn has an alumni board comprised of 20 local and five regional representatives. They meet five times a year to discuss and plan events, and confer about important issues pertaining to the university and the association. The alumni also assists in fund raising and promoting the university throughout the world.

Many alumni return to Lynn to give students real world examples, which helps students better understand what they are learning in the classrooms. It is through exposure such as this, students are able to form both personal and professional networks, which help once they graduate.

The alumni association provides an opportunity for students who have graduated from Lynn to have their voices heard. As an alumni, you can help make changes that may not have been within your reach when you were a student.

The Country Where Bubblegum Is Forbidden
By SELYMAR COLON

Ernie Ng
International Business, Senior
Singapore

What is unique about your country? "Singapore is an extremely small country, but big in economic power. It is in the top three economically most powerful countries of Asia. Singapore is extremely technologically advanced, but is completely dependent on all its neighbor countries. Like for example, Singapore's water comes from Malaysia."

Why Lynn? "Lynn is very small and I can get one-on-one attention, and is also a respected college where I can get a meaningful degree."

How would you describe your country in one word? "I actually have two words for Singapore, silent repression."

Why? "The government has a great deal of dictatorial laws that they try to hide from the world. An example of this is that Singapore is the world's cleanest country, therefore, bubblegum is banned. If they catch you chewing gum, you receive a fine, and if you're transporting bubblegum merchandise into the country, you go to jail. The government even controls men's hairstyles. Men in Singapore can't have their hair past the chin."

Currency: 1 Singapore dollar = 1.8388 US Dollar
Languages: Chinese (Official), Malay (Official and National), Tamil (Official), English (Official)
Favorite Thing About America: "I appreciate the fact of all the freedom that individuals have and people is not afraid to express their feelings.
What you don't like about America? "America is incredibly powerful in every imaginable way, but they are too self absorbed in what they want to gain by helping other countries, rather than truly giving a hand to the world."

Hungary Is Ordered To Modernize Army
By Keith B. Richbur, The Herald Tribune Online

There has been no honeymoon for Hungary's new coalition government as it confronts a dilapidated military structure that is in many ways the weak link of the NATO alliance. In Hungary the government gets a 100 days honeymoon after elections, but this wasn't the case for the new defense minister Ferenc Juhasz. The secretary-general of the NATO alliance, George Robinson, emphasized to Juhasz that he has no time to modernize and better equip Hungary's forces. Hungary hasn't won a military battle since 1456. When the United States was looking for allies to help with the war against terrorism in Afghanistan, only two NATO countries declined: Iceland, because they don't have an army and Hungary.

Student Comment: "I think it is necessary to stop the terrorism but it is Hungary's matter what they do with their army," said David Sutter of Switzerland.

Asian Leaders Scorn Travel Alerts
By Mark Baker, Herald Correspondent

Leaders from across south-east Asia have unanimously denounced travel warnings issued by Australia and other western countries after the Bali bombings saying they are exaggerated and unwarranted. Australian warnings of potential terrorists risks in all of the popular tourist destinations of south-east Asia had already drawn strong criticism from the leaders on Indonesia, Malaysia, and Singapore. The leaders pledged to strengthen cooperation in fighting terrorism, but accused western governments of overreacting. An tough, region-wide travel warning issues by the department of foreign affairs has also been attacked by Singapore's Prime Minister and Malaysia Prime Minister.

Student Comment: Ezine Ng from Singapore said, "This is really going to offend the countries but they (Australia) can't keep their mouths shut about what is going on. (Australia) needs to speak the truth about what their neighbors are doing to them but at the same time they can be exaggerated, too."

No Confidence Votes Narrowly Fall Short

The shaky minority government of Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon narrowly survived three no-confidence motions in Parliament, which gave Sharon time to negotiate with small, extremist parties to create a rightist government that can lead the country until new elections are held. The key party keeping Sharon's government afloat is the ultra-nationalist Israel B'Ai tainu, whose seven members were instrumental in giving Sharon his healthy margin of victory in voting. The chairman of Israel's precarious economic situation and the necessity to approve Sharon's 2003 budget. Sharon and his top lieutenants have said he will not agree to a coalition of the right if it means having to abandon key platforms and commitments of the current government, which includes backing U.S. President George W. Bush's goal to create an independent Palestinian state and pledge Sharon made to Bush not to harm Yasser Arafat, the Palestinian leader. That could create more difficulties in forging alliance with Isreal B'Ai tainu, an extreme nationalist party against statehood for Palestinians who believe that Arafat should be exiled or killed.

Student Comment: "Mohammed Al-Alawi of Bahrain said, "Sharon's pledge to President Bush will not be an interference for the alliance because the nationalist party wouldn't want to lose United States backup."

International Financial Crime: Nigeria Receives Wake-up call
By ALLAFRICA.com

The U.S. and the European Union (EU) have given Nigeria up to Dec. 15 to act on international financial crimes, which are giving this country a bad image at home and abroad. The scams, which have remained unchecked, have been undermining President Obasajo's efforts at obtaining direct foreign investment as well as debt relief for the country. Even without such penalties, the country has been gripped by intractable economic depression since the early 1980's.

Student Comment: "They should investigate individuals, not the whole country, and, if they are found guilty proceed with the charges, but not judge a whole nation," said Joy Mogojowe of Botswana.

Law And Politics Likely To Curb Power of Brazil's New Leader
By Larry Rohter, The New York Times

Despite his landslide victory in Brazil's presidential election last Sunday, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva is likely to find his freedom of action circumscribed when he becomes president on Jan. 1. Not only are his powers being trimmed by new legislation, but also his lack of a majority in Congress means that the initiatives he is proposing may end up being blocked or watered down, political analysts say. Even with the support of other, mostly left wing, parties, Mr. Da Silva does not yet have the votes he needs to begin the transformation of Brazil that he has promised or to block efforts to erode his authority. As suits a former labor leader, however, Mr. Da Silva, popularly known as Lula, has a reputation as a skilful negotiator.

Student Comment: "Everybody in Brazil is trusting that he will change the country. He also has the support of other parties. For elections all the parties have to choose one of the two sides and his side got 94 percent of the support," Fernanda Campos of Brazil said.

CHEAP EATS
Chesapeake Bay's Fare Is Fine
By SHEENA FOSTER

I have a voracious appetite and a roving palette and like to go on many foodie adventures. One such came unexpectedly: on my way to TooJay's-in the Polo Club Shoppes plaza, I craved a corn beef, American cheese wrap with the "woiks." Because of my weekday rush, I didn't notice the neighboring eatery, the Chesapeake Bay Crabcake Factory, owned by Scott Zuckerman.

Today, I decided to pass on the wrap. "You guys got lobster bisque?" I asked the apron-clad gentleman standing behind the food display counter.

"No, we've got crab bisque, though."

My New Yorker's cynicism panged and I silently prayed my soup was the right consistency, had the right amount of sherry and real crabmeat. But could a seafood restaurant in a Publix plaza be fresh? Fuggedaboutit!

"Everything is fresh here," says chef Jonathan Feniger. "We have no fridge so we try to use up everything within a set amount of time. Anything that expires is immediately thrown away," he said.

My bisque ($5.95) was quickly ushered out of the food display to the sparkling clean stainless steel kitchen, poured carefully into a wok, and heated. Then it was lovingly stirred by one of the chefs, who made sure it was evenly heated.

The bisque couldn't have been better. It's served in a modest, plastic cup, but I wanted to go home and pour it in my finest china. Thick, creamy, chunky with the perfect consistency—all the things that bisque should be, it was. Real crab, too! But, bisque was only prelude.

The rest of the menu's exotic tastes mirrors Chef Feniger's traveled-to list.

"I've had a lot of my cooking experience in Asia, Australia, Thailand, Japan and Laos," says the globe-trotter.

The Filet Mignon Po' boy was served N'awlins style French bread crisp on one side, soft on the other and pulsed high with meaty fixin's ($10.95). I watched as Feniger scooped the weighted, bright-red mignon out of a kitchen-island compartment and cut thick lengthwise slices, placing them on the sizzling grill to a medium-well. He slid the slices onto the French bread, already doused in olive oil mayonnaise.

The crisp-chewy-soft combo was orgasmic! I swore I'd never be impressed by a ground beef patty and buns again. I tried their Kansas City Smoked Beef Brisket Po' boy as well—twice as nice!

"The proof is in the seasoning," said Feniger about the brisket. "I make a rub out of 20 different seasonings and let it marinate for 24 hours. The rub really makes it tender."

But if meat isn't your bag, there is a po' boy choice there for all!

"We make all of our salads fresh," he continued. "We have lobster salad, crab salad and shrimp salad. Anyone can just come in and say, 'Let me get this on a sandwich' and we'll whip it up."

The Colossal Jumbo Lump Crabcake ($6.95) is true to its name. "No fillers!" swore Feniger.

"Just crab!"

With red and green pepper and finely grated Vidalia onion enveloped by Japanese breadcrumbs, you'll want to geneflect like those Wayne's World dudes.

"We're not worthy!"

I couldn't wait to slam dunk my fork into the accompanying condiment, creole aioli sauce with olive oil mayonnaise and Cajun seasoning.

The Crab Imperial (4.95) is a savory crab shell filled with lobster mashed potatoes, jumbo lump crab and, "125 day aged cheddar cheese," says Feniger.

My cherie amor of all was the Firecracker Jumbo Shrimp (9.95 ea.). A U8 jumbo prawn butterflied, and stuffed with crabmeat, Wakame seaweed and wrapped snugly inside a spring roll on a stick.

Cleanliness, fresh food and unbeatable prices make CBCF a diamond in the rough. Two thumbs up! Way up!

FAITH HILL CRIES
New CD A Mix Of Styles
By LISETTE TORRES

Faith Hill's fifth CD "Cry" offers a taste of soul spiced with a bit of country and pop. This Mississippi country girl grew up on the gospel track, but made it to Nashville as a country singer. "Cry" is similar to Hill's last CD "Breathe," but the new CD demonstrates the range of her repertoire. For instance, the track "Unsaveable" is soulful, while "Fly" is strictly pop.

Following those two songs is "Stronger," which harkens back to her trademarked country feel.

Hill's lyrics have taken a more mature turn, reflecting on love, pain and religion. The CD rose to number one on the charts after only two weeks of its release.

A turning point in Hill's career "Cry" sums up her musical ability and shows she is ready to move in a different direction and she is not afraid to take chances.

Café L’Europe
331 S. County Road, Palm Beach
561/655-4020

From the minute you pull up and the valet opens your door, you know this is not just another restaurant. This is Café L’Europe, the scene-to-be-seen restaurant of Palm Beach, if not all of South Florida. Nestled on S. County Road, this restaurant is a land mark for residents and high profile visitors for its food, service, atmosphere, award-winning wine list and caviar bar.

The atmosphere is unlike any other, with a staff that refreshingly address you formally: “Mr. Katz, your table is ready, may I show you the way”.

Seated at an elegant and well laid table, I was greeted and right away given the menu, and wine list. Be forewarned, should you take a date, wine prices start at $26, and easily work their way past $3400 per bottle.

I decided to go with a Burgundy (in the mood for duck that night), and ordered a Caesar Salad, with Marinated Anchovies, Parmiggiano Reggiano and Golden Croutons. This salad was spectacular. From the first bite I was in love. Prepared to look like a masterpiece, this dish should have been in a museum, not in front of me.

After finishing what I thought should have been the main course, the real main course came: Crispy Duck Breast and Leg Confit, with Braised Savoy Cabbage, Sautéed Bread Dumpling, and Berry Compote. Let me say this, before the plate was on my table, I could smell my dish as it left the kitchen. The aroma of this delicious duck was enough for me to grab the plate from the waiter and eat it standing up. This was the first time I can honestly say that I have ever eaten so well. Cooked to perfection, with the right spices and herbs, this was truly the perfect choice, with the Chef paying close attention to every detail.

Although the desert menu was very tempting, I decided to stop were I was. If I ate any more, I felt I would probably burst. But take my word for it, with a pastry chef on hand, every thing I looked at was the essence of what an after dinner treat should be. Rich and full filling.

With a bill I’d rather not talk about, this is the restaurant to take that certain somebody in your life. Reservations for lunch are a good idea and required for dinner. This is not a restaurant to call at the last minute. At least a week’s notice would be appropriate.

For the first time in the last three seasons, the Knights have a core of returning players that will be the heart of the 2002-2003 squad. The team chemistry illustrated during the preseason will certainly set the foundation for a championship season.

Sophomores Austin Faber, Akil Lewis, James Taylor, Cedric Bennett, and Justin Wingard all gained valuable playing time last year, and bring an upper-classmen mentality to the Knights. Their intense experience will become important in crucial parts of games.

Taylor was the Sunshine State Conference Freshman of the Year in 2001-2002, and also received Freshmen All-American honors. Taylor’s smooth shooting from the perimeter will be a key to the Knights’ offense.

Junior Lindsay Critten, also returns after a season ending shoulder injury. Critten left the Knights with a 5-0 record and was their leading scorer before taking a medical red-shirt for the year. He will be an offensive threat to every opponent the Knights face.

At the point, the Knights have two strong sophomores who will split time. Faber and Lewis compliment each other in their strengths and weaknesses, which will make this team of point guards valuable down the stretch.

Perfecting the post-position after losing two seniors last year at the post, the Knights acquired Faber and Lewis in their strengths and weaknesses. The 7-foot-1, 290-pound forward will impact the Knights’ inside scoring, rebounding, and shot blocking. The new additions will impact the Knights inside scoring and rebounding.

The Knights also welcome sophomore transfer Marcus Hayes, from Kansas State University. Hayes will bring a new level of play to the team from his experience playing Division 1 basketball.

Freshmen Joe Kennerly from Miami, FL (Southridge High School), and Otis White from Tampa, FL (Chamberlin High School), were both highly recruited out of their hometowns and will be expected to step up and play significant roles for the Knights.

The Knights kick off the 2002-2003 season at the Bentley Classic on November 22 and 23 in Boston, MA. They return to Lynn to host the Lynn Pepsi Classic on Nov. 29 and 30. The first match up will against Puerto Rico-Mayaguez at 7:00 p.m.

2001-2002 Highlights for James Taylor #22:
* Led team in field goal percentage at .479
* Led the team rebounds with 7.2 per game
* Named SSC Freshman of the Year
* Division II Bulletin National All-Freshmen team honors.

2001-2002 Highlights for Justin Wingard #34:
* Named SSC Player of the Week racking up 36 points and 30 rebounds against Barry (2/13) and Florida Tech (2/16)
* Led all reserve players with five double-doubles
* Led the team with a .618 shooting percentage.

2001-2002 Highlights for Lindsay Critten #20:
* Started the first five games of the season averaging 15.0 points before a season ending shoulder injury
* Named to the Disney Division II Tip-Off Classic all-tournament team

POTENTIAL IS UNLIMITED
Women’s Bball Preview
By SARA QUATROCKY

The Knights’ weakness in the past few seasons has been their lack of depth on the bench, but in the 2002-2003 season the Knights enter with amazing depth at every position.

Finishing the previous season with a 15-12 overall record and 7-7 in conference play, the Knights are confident that their potential is unlimited for the upcoming season, and they can only continue to get better.

Returning seven players from last years winning team, the Knights have five transfer players and only two freshmen. Seniors Gabriella Gonda, Michele Newman, Szilvia Sibalin, Miliena Chisco, and Precious Wright will play their last season with the intensity and experience to ignite the Knights in their championship run.

After losing their leading scorer, Kerri Rulison (Class of ’02), the Knights hope the newly acquired junior transfer guards Lisa Gangle and Alshaa’ Hodges can fill the void at the perimeter.

Helping Newman and Sibalin at the post-position, the Knights acquired junior transfer Joselene Jocurin and senior transfer Harriet Monroe to assist down low. The new additions will impact the Knights inside scoring and shot blocking.

The Knights first home game of the season is on December 3 against Puerto Rico-Bayamon at 7:00 p.m.

2001-2002 Highlights for Michelle Newman #34:
* Led team in field goal percentage at .479
* Led team in rebounding with 7.2 per game
* Named Nova Southeastern Classic tourney MVP
* All-tournament for the Lynn/Holiday Inn Shootout
* Named first team Verizon Academic All-District.

2001-2002 Highlights Szilvia Sibalin #10:
* Named all-tournament at the Bryant Classic to open the season
* Career-high 16 points and 10 rebounds against Maine-Ft. Kent (1/5)
* Smacked 3 blocks versus Florida Tech (1/26).

2001-2002 Highlights for Gabriella Gonda #5:
* Led the team in assists with 122
* Season high nine assists against Mercy (12/29) and Florida Southern (2/9)
* Second on team with 35 three-pointers.
SCHOOL SPIRIT Doesn’t Anybody Care?

By SARA QUATROCKY

Here’s a news flash for my fellow students at Lynn University.

You do not have to be an athlete to support your school’s athletic teams.

I attend 99 percent of our home athletic events, and I enjoy most of them. There are a few occasional games I wish I never witnessed, but what sport doesn’t have at least one game of that sort a season?

As some of you may know, I do work in the Sports Information Office. Though my job requires me to attend the athletic events, this is compatible with my love of sports, and the line of work.

Now that all the stipulations are on the table, let me get to my point. This school has an embarrassing lack of school spirit. During my years here, I’ve been absolutely shocked every time I attend athletic events and see very little student support. I see the same faces at every game in the stands, the faces of other athletes.

We don’t even have a student section in the stands, like other colleges and universities. We don’t have students wearing school colors, making signs of encouragement, leading the crowd in cheers, or making any kind of noise what-so-ever. It’s sad; it really is.

For men’s and women’s soccer events, we have two big sets of bleachers, one small deck, and a Blue and White tent. In two and a half seasons, I’ve yet to see them filled.

Volleyball and men’s and women’s basketball are played in the gymnasium, for those of you who don’t know. We have one set of bleachers running along the east side of the court and that’s it. I can count on my hand how many times in two and a half volleyball seasons, and two basketball seasons, I’ve seen them overflowing with cheering students.

Tennis matches take place on the courts right next to the gym. We’ve got two dinky bleachers. Even though our women’s team was a defending national champion last year, they never did draw a large enough crowd to have people pull up a seat on the grass.

Baseball and softball are played on their respectable diamonds over on the corner of Military Trail and Potomac. It doesn’t even matter how much available seating we have, because I don’t even think I’ve ever seen more than 15 students at a game, excluding other athletes.

The way I look at it is, all the athletes have to support each other, because they are part of the same community. They are the Fighting Knights.

On Oct. 22, 2002, I saw the most school spirit demonstrated all year, illustrated by four men’s basketball players, and they were sure helpful to our volleyball team. They chanted, they taunted the opposing team, they stood up and cheered, and they encouraged. And in the tight battle between our Knights and Nova Southeastern, our ladies came through with a big, exciting victory.

I’ll let you all in on another shocking bit of information, admission is free, and it has been all year. Why not go? I’ll guarantee you that it’s better than sitting in your dorm room, and even better than sitting in your apartment watching HBO.

Most of you don’t know that we have some of the hardest working athletes you’ll ever see, right here. We have dedicated coaches who year after year have the same goal in mind: to bring home a National Championship or at least a conference championship. Some of our teams have been there, done that, without your support. Others have come close, and if they had the support of their fellow students, they might have achieved a their goal.

From me, the sports editor of this newspaper, the girl who works in the Sports Information Office, and a fellow student, I just ask for one game. You pick it. Attend, watch and be a part of it. You might just like being a fan. You might just want to show a little spirit.

with music playing. That night when Ed’s visiting girlfriend complained about Ted’s music, Ed called to Teddy a few times to turn it down. No answer.

“When I walked into the room I saw him in a fetal position...I tapped him on the leg and that’s when I realized that he was dead.”

When Palm Beach County’s Sheriffs Deputies arrived on the scene at 12:15 A.M. on Tuesday, Oct. 30, clear bags with “white, powder residue” and Xanax (a prescription drug for treating anxiety disorders that is sold over-the-counter in France, where Ted had just attended summer courses), were found, said a law-enforcement insider on the basis of anonymity.

Over 1000 miles away, in Madison, Connecticut, Russell’s parents received what they call “every parent’s nightmare,” a late-night bad-news phone call.

“We never in our wildest dreams thought that it would be drugs,” said Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Russell II on a conference call.

“To my knowledge Teddy didn’t do drugs,” agreed Ed.

When asked if he thought his brother would ever do drugs, Sean paused then answered: "I think it was more the people that were around him. Sometimes he followed the crowd. He was never afraid to try new things, and that was the problem.”

According to the Russell’s, the attractive, out-going, perfectionist and health nut, who was only a semester shy of becoming a senior, didn’t fit the profile of a substance abuser; “although we were observant parents, we had not seen signs to the contrary at home.” Said Mrs. Russell, “He loved swimming and surfing. He was meticulous about everything. He’d do his laundry and iron his clothes.”

“I believe it was peer pressure,” interjected his father. “Despite his intelligence, his inexperience with drugs led him to make bad judgments while under the influence. Our family is so lost and distraught without him; our life feels so empty after all these wonderful years bringing him up and getting him ready for what I know would have been a purposeful and beneficial life. It still hasn’t fully set in...the finality of it all... and I do not believe we’ll ever be able to accept this has happened... he’s such a beautiful spiritual being.”

Professor Jim Miller saw Teddy as having "immense potential.”

“I kinda had a sixth sense about students and I always sensed he was a bright kid. He picked up things very quickly, too.”

According to Ralph Norcio, Dean of the College of Business Management, Russell was a pleasure to have in the classroom. “He was a polite, quiet individual and he was doing well in my class,” said Norcio who taught Russell Corporate Finance.

“The fact that he is a young person makes it more difficult for me.”

His parents and brother, Sean, survive him.

He is a paranoid who acts upon his thoughts, rather than reason. If Hussein had ruled Russia during the Cold War, would there even be a world?

Need more evidence of how irrational Hussein can be. According to The Atlantic, during the Gulf War Hussein briefed his generals on the way Iraq was going to attack America. As his generals sat around worried about the looming American forces Hussein told them his great plan, which was to capture American soldiers and tie them to Iraq tanks. Hussein believed America would not fire on it's own citizens. Take a moment to let that sink in.

Who knows what will happen if Hussein ever gets a nuclear bomb.
To think he will never achieve a nuclear state is lunacy. Hussein, if left in power, will try to get those weapons of mass destruction.
Nuclear weapons are a status symbol and the ability to use them makes you a world power. He wants to be the best leader Iraq has ever seen. Hundreds of statues are created in his caterpillar mustache image. Since the end of the Gulf War, over 48 palaces for his pleasure, have been built. He is, for all intents and purposes, an ego-manic.
Hussein wants to be the power in the Middle East, and nuclear weapons will catapult him there.

If chemical weapons are found, should America look the other way?
No. That was the old American policy. After he used chemical weapons on the Kurds, America looked the other way. After all, we had supplied him with the materials for those weapons. We helped Hussein in the Iran-Iraq War, believing he was the lesser of the two evils.

According to Time Magazine, when Hussein had restrictions on weapons, U.N. inspectors still found 38,500 chemical weapons, 690 tons of chemical agents and 426 chemical equipment pieces.
Just think what Hussein has been up to with nobody looking over his shoulder. Will the inspector really find everything?

Bush says he will not accept “deception or denial or deceit,” anymore, adding that if Iraq “chooses not to disarm, we will have a coalition of the willing with us,” to do it for him

In this post 9/11 world, we can’t wait around anymore. If there is significant evidence to warrant an attack, then an attack will come.
Say goodbye to the pacifists in Washington. The sleeping giant is awake.
