To have success, any great basketball team must be running on all cylinders and get production from all the players on the team. This year, Lynn has gotten that type of production from all players who step up in crunch time of a game. That is why they are having a triumphant season which will continue.

Legendary Airmen Come To Boca Raton

Students in Jim Brosemer's and Denise Belafonte's television production, broadcast writing and reporting classes visited WPBT, the NBC affiliate in West Palm Beach, recently to experience live television firsthand.

Belafonte said, "I feel the students are now more aware of all the components that go into running a TV show and how important team effort is on a daily basis."

During their visit they toured through the facilities and observed a live taping of news anchor Kelly Dunn, doing her morning show from the station's control room.

The tour continued outside the studio where they saw the field remote satellite and took a close look at the station's microwave trucks used for broadcasting live from the scene of breaking news events.

Legendary Pilots Come to Boca
by Felecla Hatcher

Before the Black Panther Party, Malcolm or Martin, they were there. Before the march to Washington D.C., and even before Rosa Parks' refusal to give up her seat sparked the Civil Rights Movement, trailblazers like the Tuskegee Airmen broke racial barriers in the military.

As the first black fighter pilots, they fought in World War II, though over 200 missions to Europe and never losing a plane.

These distinguished heroes spoke to 50 students from Lynn and FAU at the First Annual Tuskegee Airmen Luncheon hosted by FAU's Black Student Union.

"Seeing living legends gives me inspiration to become one", said Devin Robinson, the Chair of Clubs for FAU's Black Student Union.

Lt. Eldridge Williams, one of the speakers present at the session, asked all the students in attendance to "remember to cherish and continue to embrace their history because we stand tall on the backs of those that came before us."

Of the four airmen in attendance on Friday, two were the original pilots of the all black flying squadron called the 99th Pursuit, later incorporated in the 332 Fighter Group.

Also attending, an Airwomen Sheila Chamberland, who was the first black female combat intelligence pilot.

Through their emotional speeches they relayed their numerous encounters with racism, like sabotage of their equipment, being spit on, and denial of rank promotions.

Although they felt the sting of oppression, the pilots received presidential citations and hundreds of air medals and Distinguished Flying Crosses, during World War II.

The group also inspired President Harry Truman to create the first Human Rights Commission in 1946.

Continued Basketball

Sparked by James Taylor game high 15 points, the Knights came out in a hostile environment to beat Montevallo on their own court 67-54.

The Knights bench outscored Montevallo's 26-5 getting 15 from Taylor, six from Chris Temple and five from Akil Lewis. Temple also led the Knights with 13 rebounds.

With 14 minutes left in the game, Montevallo (26-7) took the lead 32-31 on a jumper. However, that was the final time that they led. Taylor hit a 3 pointer on the next possession putting the Knights ahead, 34-32.

Junior Marcus Hayes, who was voted the South Region Tournament's Most Valuable Player, scored seven points and six rebounds and James Cage, who was named to the All-South regional team along with Hayes scored in double digits with 10 points. Austin Faber was also in double figures with 12 points as the Knights next head up to North Dakota for the Division II Elite Eight.
